"The life of a silver dollar," Mellon points out, "has no reasonable limit, whereas that of a paper dollar does not at most exceed ten months. A paper dollar costs .017 cents to manufacture and keep in circulation. If the Treasury can restore to circulation 30,000,000 silver dollars in the United States and 10,000,000 in our insular possessions, we can displace equal amounts of paper currency and save annually $828,000, which is equivalent to the interest at 4 per cent on $21,000,000 of the public debt."

The demand for paper currency in small denominations has increased tremendously in the past three years. It is now necessary to print and put in circulation 48,000,000 one-dollar notes alone each month.

The speed with which these bills are rushed through the manufacturing process does not give the Treasury time to "season" them, and as a result, Mellon says, they become unfit for circulation within seven or eight months, whereas notes that have been "seasoned" last from ten to eleven months.

"Bankers throughout the country are constantly complaining of the poor quality of the paper money; and while the Treasury is aware of the situation and doing all in its power to rectify it, we must ask co-operation of the public and the bankers to rectify it," Mellon says.

"Obviously we must build up a reserve supply of currency sufficiently large in amount to keep a portion of it in process of seasoning. That is what the Treasury intends to do. It will be necessary to obtain from Congress an additional appropriation with which to build up an adequate reserve stock, but in the end such a program will result in increased saving to the taxpayers. If the life of a dollar note can be prolonged two months, so that it remains in circulation ten months instead of eight, a yearly saving of $1,666,000 will be effected in this denomination alone."

To facilitate the building up of a currency reserve, Mellon asks that silver dollars be used more generally. If a demand for the large coin is created, the Treasury will immediately be able to pile up a reserve of paper dollars and give them opportunity to "season."

The Affair at Flower Acres

CHAPTER VII.

The Sole Clue.

The funeral of Douglas Raynor had taken place, and the family had gathered again on the western terrace for the tea that was daily served there.

The law had stayed the investigation of the tragedy until after the last rites were held for the victim, but even now the sinister figure of the detective was seen coming toward them.

"I say," declared Kent, "that's too bad. Nan mustn't be interviewed now. She's all in with nervous excitement and fatigue. That detestable Dobbins person can surely wait till to-morrow ——"

"I'll tell him so," said Ezra Goddard, quietly, and he rose and went to meet Dobbins.

"Come and talk to me first," Goddard said, leading the detective into the library. "Surely you don't want to intrude upon Mrs. Raynor just now. You're on the wrong track, Dobbins. Mrs. Raynor never shot her husband ——"

"Then Finley did it. It rests between the two. And, at anyrate, she was poisoning him. Why, it's an open and shut case. Here's the lady, with an elderly husband, who is unkind—positively cruel to her, and here's a younger man, in love with her and she with him——"

"Hold on there, Dobbins."

"You can't deny it. I find that Finley was a rejected suitor when she married old Raynor—for his wealth, of course. Now, she's stood two years or thereabouts of the old man, and she just gave out. She couldn't put up with him any longer. So, she, being a deep sort, takes to a slow poisoning process. Three different people have told me they have seen her slipping little white tablets into the tea cup or wine glass of her husband."

"I can't believe it!"

"They said it, anyway. The sister is one—and two other credible witnesses say the same. Now, you must admit that looks bad. Ugly—that's what it is—the whole case is ugly."

"It is—I grant you that. But you must remember, Miss Raynor is no friend of her brother's wife—they have never been congenial——"

"That's neither here nor there. Say they couldn't hit it off together, that's no reason for Miss Mattie to make up a falsehood about the poison."

"They may have been harmless tablets—bicarbonate of soda——"

"No, no. The man had a nurse looking after him—why would the wife administer medicine—and why secretly?"

"That secrecy business may be a mistake. Or merely a secret from Mr. Raynor, who would have been angry if he had thought his wife was dosing him."

"All right, Mr. Goddard, if that is the true version of the tablets, then surely Mrs. Raynor can't object to explaining it as such. She will have every chance to vindicate herself, and Lord knows, I hope she can do it. But my duty is plain, and I think the sooner I get at a serious inquiry, the better."

"That's all right, Mr. Dobbins—and I'll make you this proposition. Let me help you, and I'll agree to play fair. You tell me all you discover and I'll tell you what I learn?"

"Humph. What can you learn?"

"Don't be supercilious. You may yet be glad to come around to my theory."

"Have you one?"

"Rather! And a good one. It is that an outsider, an evil-intentioned intruder, came in an shot Raynor, at dusk, and made away without being seen."

"Fine fairy story!"

"Not at all—he left his footprint on the sun room floor."

"Very good of him, I'm sure And from that footprint, will you please tell me the color of his hair and what clothes he wore? Also his age and height? I've read story books; you see!"

"Then, if you have, why didn't you find that footprint for yourself?" Goddard spoke seriously. "It's right there, under the eyes of anybody who chooses to look for it."

Is it there yet?"

"Yes, unless it has been washed off to-day. I saw it yesterday. Come on, I'll show you."

The two men went to the sun parlor, and on the floor of red tiles, between two rugs, was certainly a faint, irregular footprint, made quite evidently by someone who wore new rubbers.

"Pooh," said Dobbins, "that might have come there before or after the shooting time."

"Might have, yes; but isn't it up to you to prove it did or it didn't? Oughtn't you to know who has been here wearing new rubbers? They are not commonly worn by ladies and gentlemen of a household like this."

"Some of the servants——"

"Nonsense, servants don't wear overshoes to clean floors!"

"A visitor—an errand boy——"

"Why surmise? Why not find out for certain?"

Dobbins began to look grave.

"Much obliged to you, Mr. Goddard, it certainly calls for investigation. And I'll accept your offer to help. If I tell you what I learn, you must tell me anything you discover."

"Agreed, though I doubt if I discover anything of importance. My forte is deduction rather than search."

By reason of further request on Goddard's part, Dobbins left the search of Nan's room until the next day, and then he declared his intentions.

"Certainly you may search my rooms, Mr. Dobbins," Nan said, quietly. "Shall I come with you?"

"No, Mrs. Raynor, but I want some one with me? Miss Turner?"

"No; I'll go," put in Meddlesome Mattie.

She accompanied the detective, and the two of them made a thorough search among Nancy Raynor's things.

It would be false to say Miss Mattie did not enjoy it—her feminine curiosity was gratified at this opportunity to see her sister-in-law's belongings, and she poked into drawers and cupboards with enthusiasm.

Especially did the detective scrutinize the bottles in the medicine cabinet. There were a few vials of white tablets, which he confiscated, but which were labelled quinine or soda mints or some simple preparation.

They were about to call this search complete, when Miss Mattie's sharp eyes noticed a book set askew on the book shelf. She pulled it out and found there was a volume concealed behind it. This wa a book about poisons and their antidotes. A small book, evidently addressed to the layman and meant for family use.

He ran over its pages, and found that at arsenical poisoning the leaves were thumbed and worn as if by an interested student.

"I knew it," said Miss Mattie, with a horrified look at the page. "I knew Nan was poisoning him."

"He wasn't killed by the poison," Dobbins reminded her. "Do you think she shot him?"

"No," said Miss Mattie, decidedly. "Nan wouldn't do that. But I believe Mr. Finley did, and I can't see why you don't arrest him."

"He's watched continually, Miss Raynor, as, in fact, are all the people of the house."

THE SHIP MERIDA HAS BEEN LOCATED

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—The Merida has been found. One day last week the "Foam" and "Spray," two unkempt little trawlers, dragging a mile-long iron sweep along the floor of the ocean off the Virginia capes, caught the wreck of the oft sought Ward liner, which went down in a collision in 1911, laden with gold, silver, copper and jewels, the property of refugees from Mexico, then in the midst of a mad era of revolt. The trawlers halted at once. Frank J. Crilley, probably the most famous diver in the world, went down to investigate. His tugs at his lifeline announced it was the Merida long before he came up out of the water.

At once the trawlers started for Norfolk, Va., to report that success had attended the first step in the recovering of a vast fortune variously estimated at from two to five millions of dollars. No one knows just how much money is locked up in the Merida. The finding of the Merida was attended with much secrecy. The Merida was sunk on May 12th, 1911, when she was rammed in the dead of night by Admiral Farragut, of the American Mail Line. Her 197 passengers and 130 of a crew were removed in safety but the vessel went down so fast that none of the percious cargo she had on board could be saved.

MR. CLIFF MISKA

Salesman For Skin Cream Learns How To Clear Up Pimply Complexion

Mr. Cliff Miska, of 595 Ninth Avenue, Astoria, L. I., writes: "I was a salesman of creams for healing pimples, blemishes, etc., but when my face broke out with blotches, pimples, and blackheads I tried one salve after another with no permanent results.

I found it as impossible to sell skin cream as a bald headed man finds selling hair tonic. Finally I decided I would have to get at the cause—the blood. I was amazed to find that within a few days after taking Carter's Little Liver Pills, my skin took on a new healthful look, blemishes started to disappear, and I felt like a new person all around. Now I know what to do when I have a pimply skin, you bet." This old reliable remedy treats such complaints in a safe way. It has been used all over the world for 67 years. 25c at all good drug stores.

SPECIAL SERVICE BRIGHTON CHURCH

Rev. J. N. Morton Addressed Large Gathering of Baptists—Brighton News.

BRIGHTON, Oct. 28.—Brighton Baptist church celebrated its 44th anniversary on Sunday. The speaker, Rev. J. N. Norton, of Cobourg, was greeted by two large congregations. In the evening every seat was occupied, many had to stand up and many were turned away.

Rev. Norton chose as his subject, "Story Telling," or the telling of tales, and in describing some that were "out of school," mentioned an incident that happened in his own back yard. One day, while digging his garden a lad of five years asked him if he heard the noises coming from the direction of the boy's home. Mr. Morton was unwillingly forced to reply in the affirmative. "Well," said the boy, "that is my mother and father quarrelling. But it is nothing — you should hear them at night." In that case the child was unconsciously "telling tales" on his parents.

While attending a ball game one day the speaker heard a father tell his son of 12 years not to do a certain thing that wasn't right. The lad continued disobeying his father until finally the father said, "If you do that once more I'll whip you directly." The boy paid no attention to his father and disobeyed again. Then the father was heard to exclaim, "That boy is a holy terror!" He will do nothing he is told." In this instance the father was telling tales to his son that should never be told. When a boy or girl sins it is regarded by many as a reflection on the parents.

The Rev. Mr. Norton, after one of his sermons at Midland, Ontario, tried to bring the light of the Gospel to a boy of 12 years, who is now the Rev. S. H. Lamb, and who was pastor of the Brighton Baptist church a number of years. When asked by his wife whether he thought the boy had really accepted Christ as his Master, Rev. Norton replied that he was doubtful, as the boy was only 12 years old. The lad had seen the light and while a pastor here won a great place in the hearts of his congregation.

The art of story telling is one of the greatest of arts. If you doubt the statement consult your copy of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Twice Told Tales," or the Bible, which is the greatest of all books. The Old Testament is the story of the lives of men and women, of their victories and defeats, their temptations and sins and their happiness. The New Testament contains stories given by Christ, the story teller of the ages. The stories were called parables or stories of real life. There is the story of the man who was overcome by bandits and who was neglected by some but cared for by the Good Samaritan. There is the story of the bad boy who wasted his substance and brought worry and shame to his father and finally was content to eat from the same trough with swine. Preparations for his home-coming brought jealousy and disgruntlement to his elder brother. What makes any story interesting is that which grips our attention. The story of life is one of the most interesting. The interesting thing about an autobiography or biography is that it is the life story of an immortal; that is, one who is launched on an ocean of eternal years, on a voyage that never terminates. Each individual is sounding the keynote of either an anthem or a dirge which never comes to the last bar.

A Druid society in New York State composed of 36 men, formed for the purpose of ridiculing Christianity and breaking down faith in God. The power of the story is the experience of these men. One night they reached a climax when they burned a Bible and called upon the God of the Bible to put out the flames and followed this blasphemous act by the sacrilege of giving communion to a dog.

That night two died. Next day three were drowned. In five years all came to some bad end, as the following statement, sworn before a magistrate, proves::

Two starved to death. Four were drowned, eight were shot during a drunken brawl. Five committed suiside, seven were hanged, one was frozen to death following his getting drunk, and four met death from shocking accidents.

To tell the story of our life we must be brief because our time is reduced to one-half allowing for the time required for eating and slepeing. There is no such thing as solitude. One is always sure of a listener. There are not only our friends as an audience, but God and the angels on the one hand and the devil and his associates on the other. There are those whose story has a successful issue and those whose story ends in despair.

Consistent living of any individual and a recitation by that one of the grace that lifted him from sinking sand and sin is of more interest than that of the profoundest sermon delivered in faultless fashion by a minister whose education is of the highest.

The great commission given by Jesus Christ was in terms of the subject to tell the story. The command to "go preach the gospel," really meant, "Go tell the story of His life."

Was Relieving.

Mr. C. S. Butler, accountant at Oshawa of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, returned to that place on Sunday last after relieving the manager here for two weeks.

Mr. R. J. W. Hepburn, local manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, has resumed duties after spending his vacation in Montreal and Ottawa.

DAVISON GIVEN THREE MONTHS IN REFORMATORY

WRITTEN EVIDENCE.

Letters Sent By Accused Were Weopons Used Against Him.

J. C. Davison of Cordova Mines was this afternoon sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley in County Police Court to three months in the Ontario reformatory with an indeterminate period there after not exceeding one year.

In passing sentence, His Worship remarked upon the painful nature of the case. It is a duty that takes the glamour from the office of magistrate, he said. In the magistrate's opinion it was not a fit case for suspended sentence, as the documentary evidence showed that the accused knew he was doing a wrong and criminal thing.

J. F. Strickland, defending Davison pointed out that in the recent bond case in which hundreds of thousands of dollars were invlved, Jarvis received only a sentence of six months, and in this case, where the theft of junk valued at $250 is charged, suspended sentence would serve justice adequately. Davison is 62 years of age and has a family of four children. His wife is now homeless since being deprived of her residence on the mine property.

G. W. Hatton, K.C., Crown Attorney, was assisted by G. C. Price, of Price, Cochrane & Co., Toronto, private prosecutor. Davison was represented by J. F. Strickland and J. A. O'Brien of Gordon and O'Brien watched proceedings with Lionel A. Sherber, advocate, of Montreal, on behalf of Picard.

Close of Crown's Case.

Herbert Baxter of New Toronto, said that when he was at the mine making an inventory this year Davison told him a shipment of scrap had been made in February this year.

T. D. Fitzpatrick, a farmer, said he had hauled a load of material from Cordova mines to the Marmora freight sheds where he loaded it under orders of J. C. Davison and with his help. The material consisted of about 16 wooden pulleys, steel parts, copper plates, a belt and a lot of scrap in boxes, all addressed to Picard in Montreal.

Charles Rupert of Cordova mines, said Davison aproached him in February regarding a boiler Goldman wanted to be shipped, together with some scrap. Rupert would not ship it until payment was received.

The Defence.

John C. Davison said he had been caretaker of the Cordova mines since 1922 and was directly responsible to the managing director. In 1923 some scrap was disposed of to Picard & Co., and some material in the tank house marked not to go with the scrap was taken without authority. Davison reported this to Mr. Kirkyard who told him to hold back a corresponding amount of scrap.

This was done and the material held until February when it was sent forward, Picard paying the charges. Davison had loaned Mr. Kirkgard $80 in Toronto and this he took out of the money received from Picard.

G. C. Price, counsel for the company, acting as assistant Crown attorney, cross examined Davison.

Correspondence between Davison and Picard was read in which arrangements for shipping the material were made.

Donald Maloney testified as to a dispute Davison had with Goldman regarding parts of machinery that had been improperly loaded and Davison said that he would hold the balance until the wrongly taken material was restored or paid for.

Shipment not Scrap.

Isodore Goldman recalled in rebuttal, declared he did not purchase the articles enumerated, as 6 boxes of scrap, 1 bag scrap, 3 copper plates, 16 wooden pulleys, 1 roll belting, 5 radiators. If it had been bought he would have loaded it with his car load lots. This material was not scrap.

In cross examination by Mr. Strickland, Goldman admitted having given Louis Florence a cheque for which there were no funds, and admitted that he was not on good terms with either Picard or Davison. The latter, he said, had cost him a lot of money for which he got no goods.

HOME BANK TRIAL.

TORONTO, October 28 (Canadian Press). — D. L. McCarthy, the Crown Prosecutor in the trial of Clarence F. Smith, Home Bank director, charged in the County Criminal Court with making false statements of the financial affairs of the bank, concluded his address to Judge Coatsworth just before the noon adjournment to-day.

He tried to connect the accused with the approval of the annual report of the bank for the fiscal year ending 31st May, 1923, which yesterday he argued contained many false items.

He went over all the directors' meetings at which the accused was present where big loans of the bank were considered.

"I think it could be expected," he said, "that a director once during his term as a director should inquire into at least one of these big loans which he knew were on the bank's books."

Mr. McCarthy declared that accused had made no protest or inquiry, although as a director he was responsible to see that the proper statements were made to the shareholders and to the Government.

Gordon Waldron, defence counsel, will address the Judge this afternoon when the trial of the first director will be concluded.

BROTHER OF PETERBORO MAN

The Examiner last evening carried a cut, which is reproduced again to-day, of survivors of the ill-fated Lady Kindersley, the motor schooner belonging to the Hudson Bay Company which was caught in an ice-jam in the far North. One of the figures is that of C. J. Cotton, a brother of Robert Cotton of this city, and a resident of Vancouver, where he is engaged in the carpentering and electric business.

Mr. Cotton lived for seven years in St. Petersburg, Alaska, and is well acquainted with the North.

Last year he left Vancouver with a party of twenty-two men on the Lady Kindersley, to install a radio receiving broadcasting station and wireless telegraph station on Herschel Island. After the work was completed at Herschel Island, the party were to proceed to Siberia, to install similar equipment there, a contract from the Canadian Government.

When about 150 miles north of Cape Barrow, they received a wireless message from the McMillan exploring party, that their boats were leaking, they had sickness on board, and were short of food.

The Lady Kindersley changed its course and proceeded in the direction of the McMillan party until 2nd August, when they became surrounded by ice floes and could go no further. The McMillan party were at that time about forty miles away, and seven of the men from the Lady Kindersley struck out over the ice to go to their assistance. They could not reach their destination, and were compelled to retrace their steps very slowly, as there was only two and one-half hours of daylight in the twenty-four hours and the temperature was seventy degrees below zero.

Finally they managed after many days to get back to the Lady Kindersley and an effort was made to get the Government to send an airplane to take the party off. The Ottawa authorities were willing to send such an airplane, but were unable to locate one anywhere near.

The United States cutter Boxer was in the Behring Straits, and were wired for and proceeded to try and get the crew equipment off the Lady Kindersley, which they finally succeeded in doing.

Mr. Cotton's mother, living in Gananoque, received a wireless message about ten days ago, saying that her son had been rescued from the ship and was now going through the Alaskan Penisula. He was expected to arrive in Vancouver on Sunday, 2nd November.

BOWLING NEWS.

The Examiner Ladies' Bowling League made their second appearance at the Water Street Bowling Alleys last evening, playing three games. The Excels, captained by Miss Edna Holmes, won two games, the Swastikas, led by Miss Mareta Collins, winning the third. Miss Veronica Harrington, for the Excels, had the highest score for the three games, of 272, while Miss Gladys Heath, of the Swastikas, came next, with 263, also getting the high single of 118. Miss Edna Holmes was third, with a score of 224.

FALL ASSIZES OPENED TO-DAY LIGHT DOCKET

Only Jury Case Is Claim of $15,000 Against Belleghem.

RESULT COLLISION.

Charged With Negligence and Being Intoxicated—Case Opened.

Cecilia Rogers' claim of $15,000 for damages arising out of a collision said to have been caused by the negligence of Walter T. Belleghem, was the only case brought before the petit-jury empanelled at the fall assizes which opened before Hon. Mr. Justice Orde to-day.

In his address to the Grand Jury His Lordship said:

"I wish to express my personal pleasure at being in Peterboro again. It gives me a special pleasure to be back here again as it was in this county that my ancestors lived, and where now a number of my relatives and friends live. The county is to be congratulated upon not having any criminal cases."

In his address to he Grand Jury Mr. Justice Orde said it is open to you to inspect the jail and enquire as to what kind of food the prisoners are given and see that they are made as comfortable as possible. Visits by the Grand Jury to the Home for the Aged, and other institutions, would not be out of place, but it is not necessary for you to visit these places.

"When you have concluded these visits you can return to the court, and make your report to me. It is not necessary that you should conclude these visits to-day but you should have your report ready some time to-morrow morning."

Grand Jury.

John Collins was chosen foreman.

Case Opened.

Mr. V. J. McElderry said in his address to the jury: On Saturday night, July 5th last, a car carrying the defendant, Miss Cecilia Rogers, and five other passengers, coming from Chemong Park, were hit by a Reo sedan car driven by Walter Belleghem, and carrying another passenger. The accident occurred on Finlay's Hill. The car that Mr. Belleghem was riding in collided on the hill with the car Miss Rogers was riding in. It is charged that Mr. Belleghem was intoxicated. It is charged that he was travelling at a fast rate of speed, and that he was racing another car.

Miss Rogers, as a result of the accident, lost her right eye, three teeth. She also sustained a scar on the right side of her face and a scar on her forehead. The facts are quite simple. The car that Mr. Bacon was driving was a Chevrolet touring car. Bacon and Miss Rogers and a third girl were in the front seat, while Miss Rogers' mother and two small children were in the back seat.

Belleghem's car is a Reo sedan, and was carrying himself and a lady passenger. The accident occurred on Finlay's Hill, on the Chemong Road.

Evidence Begun

Cecilia Rogers, 18, said she was in an accident on July 6, on her way from Gordon Matthews' cottage at Chemong, having left there at 10.15 p.m.

There were in the car Clarence Bacon, 20, Marie Courneyea 19, and Miss Rogers in the front seat, Miss Rogers sitting on the outside. In the back seat were Mrs. Rogers and Miss Rogers' brother and sister. car was going at 15 or 20 miles an hour. Miss Rogers said her car was travelling close to the side of the road when she saw two cars coming over the hill towards her. The car in rear turned out and seemed to be trying to pass the car ahead at a great rate of speed. Then this car struck the car in which Miss Rogers was riding throwing it into the ditch. Miss Rogers was taken to Peterborough. She lost the sight of her right eye, and two teeth and had one removed afterwards.

After spending 13 days in hospital where her right eye was removed, Miss Rogers was discharged. She also suffered from nervous disorders being unable to sleep at night.

Before the accident Miss Rogers earned 20 cents an hour or $2 a day in the Quaker Oats factory. She was unable to return until three months after the accident. The doctor's and hospital accounts were $397.80. Her clothing was destroyed valued at $25 for a coat and $16 for a dress. Wages lost amounted to about $150.

Cross-examined by Mr. Gordon, Miss Rogers said she had been working in Quaker Oats Co., since January and earned $12 a week regularly.

The party went to visit the maid at Mr. Matthews' cottage at Chemong. There was no dust in the air on the return journey and Miss Rogers had not noticed that one light on Bacon's car was nearly burned out. There was plenty of room in the front seat for the three persons, she said, and Bacon was able to drive quite easily. He had both hands on the wheel all the time. The car was always close to the side of the road, but not travelling on the grass.

Miss Rogers felt the increase of speed as Bacon got his take-off to climb the hill. Nothing was said to Bacon about the cars coming. "I never thought about an accident," Miss Rogers said. "I had never been in an accident before and didn't have time to think about it then."

In re-examination, Miss Rogers told Mr. McElderry she had driven with Clarence Bacon quite often. The three persons were comfortably seated in the front seat.

CROWN CASE IN.

Defence In Case of Charles Matthews Now Being Heard.

TORONTO, Oct. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The Crown concluded its case in the charges of conspiring to defraud and fraud against Charles A. Matthews, former assistant Provincial Treasurer, in the Assize Court this morning before Justice Mowatt. H. H. Gordon, counsel defending Matthews, in place of Seymour Corley, who is ill, asked that the case be taken from the jury and the charge dismissed, contending that the Crown had failed to show Matthews as being connected with the deal at all. The request was refused, and the defence was started with the calling of Peter Smith, former Provincial Treasurer, who was convicted in the same court last week of conspiracy to defraud. Three-quarters of an hour after Justice Mowatt gave the order that Mr. Smith could be produced he was at the City Hall, having come from the Toronto Jail.

Mr. Smith swore that Matthews had no right to buy bonds of any kind without an Order-in-Council from the Government or special instructions from the Minister. He said that Matthews had never acted alone in deciding to buy bonds. W. N. Douglas, chief clerk of the Treasury Department, another defence witness, said that the Government had purchased bonds of the same kind as those involved in charges for much higher prices than they paid Hart for his. It is upon these Hart bonds that Matthews is charged.

FIRST TRIPLE PLAY.

Last night must have been a night of surprises for the Bowlers came with a hair's breadth of defeating the fast Teacher crew, when they held them to a one run lead, the Teachers winning out by 8 to 7 in a game that was full of heavy hitting, and snappy fielding.

Reg Fox pitched a stead, game for the Bowlers and deserved a win but the breaks were against him and although the Bowlers threatened time and again to even it up, snappy play on the part of Bolten's team spoiled their chances.

Dunkerley did the heaving for the teachers but did not appear to have quite as much speed as in some of the former games. He pitched steady ball throughout and worked well on the batters.

PORCELAIN WIN.

Sam Calladine's boys from the Porcelain department of the C.G.E. pulled off the unexpected last night when they marched a smart team on to the boards and trounced the De Laval gang by the score of 3 to 2, after eight of the fastest innings of ball ever played in the arena. The Porcelains have been playing rather ragged ball all season, and for them to turn around and beat the De Lavals shows that they have the stuff in them.

Nicholls was right on last night, and he zipped them in with more speed than ever before, panning ten of his opponents. The rest of the Calladine gang played flawless ball and hit in the pinches.

Kennedy started for the losers and pitched nice ball until the eighth inning when he got in a bad hole, and was replaced by "Scotty" Galbraith, who finished the game in great style, fanning the last two batters and blanking the Porcelains in the run column.

FIRST TRIPLE PLAY.

The first triple play of the season was pulled off last night by the C.N.R. in the last innings of their ten innings game with the Brass department of the C.G.E., which they won by the score of 6 to 4. It was a memorable battle and neither team could be declared a winner until the last man was down.

Mahood twirled a nice game for the losers while "Abe" Delahaye did his stuff for the C.N.R. Both pitchers turned in a nice game.

THEY SAY HE'S ANOTHER FIRPO!

JOSEE GONZALEZ.

From this it's hard to tell whether the visitor is being knocked or boosted.

PERCY HAUGHTON DEAD.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—Percy B. Haughton, head football coach at Columbia University, founder of the famous "Haughton system" at Harvard, and generally regarded as one of the foremost exponents of the gridiron sport, died Monday afternoon at St. Luke's Hospital at five o'clock, one hour after he was stricken with acute indigestion at Baker Field while directing the work of his squad.

His sudden death came two daye after the Columbia eleven had administered a crushing defeat to Williams College which was taken as proof by critics that Haughton had installed a football system at Columbia destined to rival his former success at Harvard where his teams from 1908 to 1916 ranked with the best in gridiron history.

CUBS' BIG DEAL WITH PIRATES

NO CASH INVOLVED.

CHICAGO Oct. 28.—The Chicago National League club yesterday acquired Walter Moranville second baseman Charley Grimm, first baseman and Wilbur Cooper, left hand pitcher, all of the Pittsburgh Nationals, in exchange for Vic Aldridge, right hand pitcher, George Grantham, second baseman, and Albert Nichaus, first baseman, the latter recently purchased by the Cubs from Chattanooga. No money was involved in the deal.

The trade is the biggest of the winter season and according to President William Veeck, of the Cubs, one of the largest ever put through in the National League.

Aldridge had been a member of the Cubs for three years, coming from the Los Angeles Pacific Coast League club. Previous to that time he was obtained by the Cubs from the Indianapolis club of the American Association.

George Grantham came to the Cubs two years ago, from the Omaha Western League club, and was field captain during 1923.

Nichaus was one of the leading first baseman of the Southern Association and was to have reported to the Cubs next spring. He is a right hand hitter.

Gain Hitting Strength

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 28.—More hitting strength to carry the Pirates through tight places in late season pennant drives, was the chief consideration of the Pittsburgh Nationals in trading Walter "Rabbit" Maranville, Charlie Grimm and Wilbur Cooper for Vic Aldridge, George Grantham and Albert Nichaus, of the Chicago Nationals, Sam Dreyfuss, treasurer of the club, announced last night.

"For four years now we have been in the pennant race right up to the last ditch," said Mr. Drefuss, "and each year we have failed to pull through in a pinch. Lack of hitting power, it seems, has been the chief cause of our failure, and it was to overcome this weakness that we have made the changes just announced."

Mr. Dreyfuss said that Eddie Moore, Atlanta infielder who joined the Pirates last season would replace Maranville at second base while Grantham, a heavy hitter, would appear in right field.

Nichaus will take care of the initial bag with Barnes, a rookie in reserve.

CHALLENGES DEMPSEY.

Erminio Spalla's Big "Ambish" Is to Meet the Champion.

ROME, Oct. 28.—"My supreme ambition is to fight Jack Dempsey," said Erminio Spalls, the European heavyweight champion Monday. Spalls on Sunday knocked out Depaus, the Belgian champion in a bout in Naples.

"I have sent Dempsey a challenge through the European Boxing Federation," Spalls added, "and I am putting myself at his disposal for a bout for the world's championship. I am ready to fight him at any time, in any country and under whatever conditions he chooses to impose. I intend to go to the United States next spring, but if Dempsey wishes to fight me before that time I will go across the ocean whenever he likes."

Spalla will spend a month in Italy training. Afterwards he will go to Egypt, Jerusalem and Constantinople, fighting anyone who desires to give him battle.

McTIGUE TO SUE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, announced Monday through his attorney that he would start suit against the New York State Athletic Commission, claiming $250,000 damages on the charge that he has been prevented from obtaining a license and boxing in this State.

McTigue's action followed the recommendation of the commission, made last week, that its license committee refuse him a license in this state for a year for failure to accept the challenge of Gene Tunney, American 175 pound champion for a title match. This recommendation, however, has not yet been acted upon by the license committee.

McTigue charges, according to his attorney, that he applied for a license last week but was turned down. According to Dan Skilling, secretary of the commission, however, no application was filed by the fighter.

TIGERS NEED JUST ONE MORE VICTORY

Appear to Have the Edge on Argos—Play at Hamilton Saturday.

HAMILTON, Oct. 28.—Argonaut supporters, who witnessed the game between Montreal and Tigers, are confident that the Oarsmen will defeat Tigers at Toronto next Saturday, and some of them went so far as to predict that they would repeat the trick in the game here next week. Leslie Crooks, who is a fairly strong Tiger supporter, was among those who picked Argonauts to defeat the Bengalese, and of course Lou Marsn was an out-and-out Argo man. However, the Tigers' record to date is much better than that of the Toronto team, and if the Yellow and Black plays to form, there is no reason why it cannot win next Saturday's game. In the meantime the team has five days in which to think it over and prepare. One more victory will give the Tigers the championship, and it is going to be a mighty hard job to keep them from retaining the title won last year.

Raynor, the Tigers' substitute half-back, who got his first real chance on Saturday, not only made good, but became a great favorite with the fans in doing so. His punting was a feature of the game, and just by way of breaking in right, he scored the second touchdown. It was a little bit of strategy in giving him the ball to carry over, for he was the last man the Montrealers looked for to do the trick.

The Tigers have scored 42 points in championship fixtures this season, which is nearly twice as many as Montreal, the team second to Tigers in the point total, has managed to notch. Of course Tigers have played one more game than Argonauts, but the figures show that there is no particular reason why the Tigers should not win the championship.

It looks as though Toronto will experience a real old Tiger invasion next Saturday. It is some years since the game between the two teams at Toronto had as much bearing on the championship, and it is a good bet that all of the block of 500 seas which will go on sale here will be taken up and more sought after.

OLD COUNTRY SOCCER

LONDON, Oct. 27. — (Canadian Press Cable).—Tottenham Hotspurs The Arsenal, Clapton Orient and Queen's Park Rangers survived the first round of the London challenge cup which was played off this afternoon, while among the "big leaguers", Fulham and Chelsea were eliminated. The scores were:

Tottenham, 5, Fulham 1.
Arsenal 2, Chelsea 0.
Crystal Palace, 2, Brentford 2.
Charlton Athletic 1, London Caledonians 1.
Clapton Orient 4, Millwall 3.
Kingstonians 5, Tufnell Park 0.

Trainer Morse of Fulham sustained a fractured arm to-day when the charabanc conveying the Fulham tea, to Tottenham overturned. Although severely shaken up, none of the players were injured.

AMERICA'S OFFER TO SCOTS SOCCER ASSOCIATION

MANY DIFFICULTIES

Many Ask, "Will the Settlement Reached Be Retrospective?"

Dealing with the emigration of some of the Scottish first-class soccer players to America, we indicated that if legislation were required to deal with the menace to Scottich football, it would require to take the form of an agreement between the S. F. A. and the United States F. A. At the same time we had the feeling that it would take a mighty effort to induce the S. F. A. to take a serious move in the matter.

Such cases as players breaking agreements and so forth are looked upon at Scots head-quarters as domestic affairs, which are matters between the club and their servants, and do not come within the provinvce of the governing body. The club deals with the player, and the S. F. A. are satis fied. But the departure of players across the Atlantic we maintain should have been looked upon in an entirely different light, but the S. F. A. were content to await the developments.

Wanting the Jacksons Back?

Now the initiative has been taken by the United States F. A. and we must say that we are impressed by the frank and open manner in which the Yankees have approached the matter. At the same time we have the feeling that this offer to negotiate has been precipitated by the home-coming of the brothers Jackson, and it may be a veiled attempt to enforce their return. The Scots have emphatically denounced the actions of those signed players who have ignored their agreements and crossed the Atlantic and therefore we can quite understand how the departure of such players as the Jacksons will have made the American authoritites appreciate the Scots point of view.

In their communication to the S. F. A. the American Association confine themselves to players "who have been induced to depart from a contract during the life of such contract," and they propse that each Association should notify to the other of any cases of "jumping" of contracts with agreed-upon penalties.

Difficulties in the Way.

But supposing the two Associations should come to an understanding that signed players in either country shall not be approached without the consent of their clubs, will that safeguard the Scottish clubs with regard to any player who has a grievance real or imaginary? Would such an agreement, if in existence have saved Muirhead for the Ranger sor McNab and McIntyre for Morton? Surely not! Therefore, unless the S. F. A. can induce the United States Association to adopt the Scottish League clubs retained lists the American "open door" will remain open.

But another peculiar situation arises in this connection. The S. F. A. themselves can hardly be said to recognise the League retained players. It is not so many years ago since Andy Wilson, then a retained Middlesboorough player, signed for a Scottish non-League club, and even to-day is not Bob M'Dermid playing for Queen of the South while still a "retained" Ranger? Only two or three years ago, at the instigation of Aberdeen F. C., a proposal was made at the S. F. A. annual general meeting to adopt the principle of clubs retaining players but it was turned down. Surely those who were responsible for its defeat had not the facualty of taking a long view of the question.

How, then, can the S. F. A. ask America to honour lists which they themselves do not recognise? Yet, without that clause, any agreement which may be arrived at will not be altogether satisfactory to the Scottish clubs. We should enjoin the S. F. A. to come into line with England in the matter of the retention players who are offered a reasonable wage by their clubs, and then they will be in a position to negotiate agreements and other matters with associations abroad.

Retrospective.

Taking it for granted that an agreement will be reached between the respective associations, will it be retrospective? Will it be the means of having the recently emigrated Scottish players returned to this country? If it means that, will the Aberdeen players be ordered to go back to U. S. A.? If so, what of the transfer fees paid by Aberdeen, and who is to reimburse them? All those questions, and a few more, will arise, all of which goes to show that the reaching of an agreement is not so simple as it would appear on the surface.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

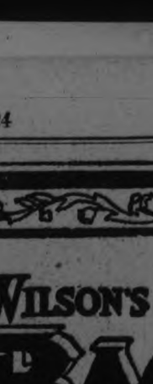
MR. DEMPSEY THE ACTOR HAS NO PLAN OF BEING DEMPSEY THE FIGHTER UNTIL MAY

By JOE WILLIAMS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—If you are one of the elect and "belong" in Tin Ear Alley you will be permitted to step into the highly aromatic suite of Jack Dempsey in the Alamac here and observe the champion in dress rehearsal for his newest histrionic knockout, entitled "Punches and Patter."

At the present moment Mr. Dempsey's mind is as far removed from the business of crunching hostile jaws as bread pudding is from the category of French viands.



Mr. Dempsey is to do a "double" in vaudeville with an attractive partner of the bobbed sex, for which he is to receive, according to Marcus Loew, theatrical magnate, a mere matter of $10,000 per week. This means he will actually get about $2,500 a week. There is, you will perceive, a vast difference between per and a.

But that is unimportant. Mr. Dempsey is signed for a period of many weeks and there is more chance of La Follette leading three cheers for the Morgans than there is of Mr. Dempsey allowing anything so vulgar and commonplace as a prize fight to interfere with his bookings.

If Mr. Dempsey is seen in the ring growling savagely at a professional enemy before next May at the very earliest, it will be due to a widespread antipathy on the part of the customers for the champion as a talented vaudevillian who combines, according to his manager, Jack Kearns, the top-most merits of Jolson, Barrymore and Turpin.

Mr. Dempsey (blushing behind his fluttering ears): Who told you I had bought her one?

This is supposed to knock the boys right back on their Scotch, and is a fair, or unfair example, of what the outlying cities have in store for them this winter, besides the usual hardships that accompany a long winter.

Mr. Dempsey presently sheds his soup and halibut and steps forward in silk fighting trappings. He proceeds to demonstrate the punches with which he knocked out Willard, Brennan, Miske and Firpo.

It is hoped that no roughneck will spoil the performance by demanding that Mr. Dempsey demonstrate how he did a backward-standing-sitting dive out of the ring the night Firpo cracked him on the tonsils.

As a novelty Mr. Dempsey will make further demonstrations of his knockouts after the manner of slow motion pictures. Messrs. Altrock and Schacht of the Washington champions have been pulling this stuff for years but there may be a few tax dodgers who have not seen it yet.

You may be more interested in knowing exactly what the champion's fighting plans are. In which event the answer is that he has none. There will be no Dempsey fight of any kind this winter. By may he will be ready to take on either Tommy Gibbons or Jack Renault, as a warm-up for a Labor Day mill with either Firpo or Wills.

Promoter Rickard still thinks he can build up Firpo sufficiently to make a return meeting with the champion more desirable than one with Wills, the really logical contender.

For some reason or other the Dempsey-Kearns combine are cold on Wills. They will take him only when they have to. If Firpo can come back far enough Wills will be kept in the background, a position in fistiana which the solemn Senegambian is not entirely unacquainted with.

SOCCER NOTES.

On Saturday afternoon the Thistles and Canadian Woollens meet in a league game at King Edward Park. Kick-off at 2.30 p.m. This game will start prompt on time, and the senior players wish this to be carried out. Referee, Mr. Alex. McKinley.

At Nicholls Oval the G.W.V.A. and Quaker Oats meet in a league encounter. Kick-off at 3 o'clock. Referee, Jack Clark.

At last night's meeting Mr. Robt. Dawson, late of the Thistles, made his application to the board to be reinstated after playing with a Toronto team. His application was granted unanimously, but he was censured for his actions.

All local soccer fans will regret to learn that Mr. Alex. Mitchell is in the hospital undergoing very serious operations. He is considered one of the most proficient referees in the district.

Richmond was, at last night's meeting, fully exonerated from any blame in the fiasco with Underwood, who has become automatically suspended until he appears before the Senior Executive Board.

The Canadian Woollens player, Johnny Warde's, suspension of sine die was lifted after he had given a satisfactory answer why he played in outlaw football, and must not occur again.

A NATIONAL ASSET.

As the greatest transportation company in the world, the Canadian Pacific Railway has maintained a national service in the Trans-Canada Limited which is second to none and on the conclusion of the summer schedule of this crack train has transferred the equipment to the Vancouver Express which leaves Toronto every night at 10.10 p.m. on its trip across the continent, via Winnipeg, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise, the spiral tunnel, Sicamous and parts of the Canadian Pacific Rockies famous throughout the world, on its way to Vancouver, where the travellers are unanimous in their praise of the service of the Vancouver Hotel. The Canadian Pacific also operates a steamship service to Victoria, the Mecca for winter tourists.

Not only does the Vancouver Express carry tourist and standard sleepers, but it also carries a compartment-observation car complete in itself, while a parlor car is added from Revelstoke to Vancouver.

Added to this national service is a feature service from Toronto to Montreal via the Lake Shore Line, which has been entirely reballasted with crushed rock and relaid with 100 pound rails, insuring a maximum of comfort for travellers at night as well as an absence of dust in daytime. Trains leave Toronto Union Station at 9.00 a.m. daily, 10.00 p.m. daily except Saturday, and 11.00 p.m. daily. Arriving at Windsor station, the traveller has the benefit of immediate facilities in the women's rest room, lunch room and barber shop, which cannot be duplicated in any other station in Montreal. An added convenience is offered those who wish to travel to Montreal from North Toronto, in the 9.45 p.m. train, daily except Saturdays, from Yonge street station.

Canadian Pacific agents will gladly make your reservations and supply you with any information you require. They are fully qualified to offer a "second to none" service to the public.

ROSS LITTLE WON THE COWLEY RACE

Sixty-four entries started, and everyone finished.

The course, which was from the Grove School to Cowley and back, was across fields and over fences, which makes it much harder on the contestants than if they were running on a straight road.

The day was ideal for the race, and is proved to be one of the most successful races ever run off by the School.

Loosemore was second, and he also won the time prize when he covered the course in 13 minutes.

Strickland, who came in third, also did the course in good time.

Last Saturday afternoon the Grove School rugby team defeated the P. C. I. team by the score of 46 to 1.

On Saturday afternoon, 1st November at 2 o'clock, the Grove will play the Upper Canada College team.

$2,000,000 GOVT. BUILDING STARTS

Toronto's Unemployed Will Be Given Chance to Work This Winter.

TORONTO, October 28 (Canadian Press). — The immediate start of the Ontario Government's new $2,000,000 office building, which is to occupy the whole block on the east side of Queen's Park, opposite Parliament Buildings, was announced by Premier Ferguson and the Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Public Works, yesterday afternoon.

The structure is to be of steel and stone, and is to be built in six units, three of which are to be planned and started this fall, primarily with the view to assisting the unemployment situation.

The building is to be of six storeys and the three units and floor space to be afforded will total 172,000 square feet.

2 LIONS ARRIVED FOR TORONTO ZOO

Two Large Beasts Raised in the Wilds of Africa, Landed at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Oct. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Subdued to some extent no doubt, by the angry waves over which they have voyaged, a lion and a lioness destined for the Toronto Zoo, emitted no roars of protest as they were placed with their travelling case of oak and iron aboard a Dominion Express car at the Canadian Pacific Windsor Station here today. The male of the species paced his cage and showed his teeth in a manner none too friendly but his mate, in another box, submitted herself to removal in a ladylike manner, nor seemed to heed the indignations heaped upon her by the curious expressmen, who tried to coax her to the bars. The lion was born in the wilds of South Africa, some three years ago, while about the same time the lioness first saw the light of day in the fastness of the Royal Zoological Gardens, Dublin Ireland, from whence they have both come, a present to the Toronto Parks Commission. Both animals appeared to have weathered the sea voyage very well. Instructions pasted on the cages for three rabbits to be supplied to each daily and for water thrice daily. They have not suffered from lack of food up to the present and the Dominion Express Company has arranged for a supply of food sufficient to last out the journey. There will be plenty of water.

THREE LIVES LOST.

Fire Destroyed Five Storey Building In Detroit Yesterday.

DETROIT, Oct. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Three unidentified bodies were found last night in the ruins of the five-storey building of Scrotten Kratz Inc. store fixture concern, which was destroyed by fire here late yesterday. Five persons were rescued from window ledges by firemen and a search is being conducted for other victims.

THE ROWDIEST ELECTION EVER HELD CONCLUDES

Bitterest Election Campaign In British History Will End To-day.

MEETINGS BROKE UP.

Tires Ripped From Curzon's Motor Car and Lamps Smashed During Meeting.

(By Lloyd Allen — United Press Staff Correspondent).

LONDON, Oct. 28. — In a maelstrom of words, accusations, maledictions and brickbats, with a new sort of "scrap of paper" at the vortex, the rowdiest, bitterest election campaign in British history will be brought officially to an end to-day.

To-morrow when the country goes to the polls it is 20 to 1 that the Labor Government will not obtain a majority. Insurance rates quoted by Lloyd's underwriters equivalent to betting odds make the Conservative party odds on favorite, but it is considered a two to one spot that Stanley Baldwin's party will not receive a majority over all.

All issues other than the "Zinoviev" letter scandal have been virtually side-tracked. The attention of the entire electorate is forecast on that. Leaders of the three parties directed their final broadsides towards the incident, each striving to make political capital out of it.

While the Liberal and Conservative press and leaders tear to shreds Premier MacDonald's Cardiff speech in which he declared he believed the letters genuine, J. H. Thomas, Colonial Minister, is making sensational intimations that the permanent officials of the Foreign Office "double crossed" MacDonald, in the matter, permitted the news of the letter to leak out, and despatched the British note to Moscow and published both texts before the Premier was ready.

MacDonald, speaking at Aberavon, had one more chance to return to the attack. Lloyd George was speaking at Carnarvon and Stanley Baldwin in the north.

To-day, the last day of the election campaign, is being devoted to an intensified canvas and torrents of speeches by all parties. Political tempers show no signs of cooling as the polling day approaches. Several meetings last night were marked by violent disturbances, and the police in some instances were called to prevent dangerous developments. Outside a meeting hall in Battersea a furious blow aimed at Viscount Curzon, Conservative candidate, missed him, but felled a companion, unconscious. Tires were ripped from Curzon's motor car, and the lamps were smashed.

The Russian affair has served to heighten the feeling, but there is nothing to show whether it will have a damaging effect on Labor's chances that the Government's opponents predict.

LOCAL VETERANS HELD A MEETING

Will Erect Two Monuments In Local Cemeteries—Two Deaths.

The regular monthly meeting of the G.W.V.A. was held last evening, a large attendance being present. Reports of activities for the coming season were presented.

It was unanimously decided to erect two monuments to the memory of those who paid the supreme sacrifice, one in Little Lake Cemetery and another in St. Peter's Cemetery. Plans for these monuments were submitted and approved of. The preparation of the monuments will be proceeded with during the winter months, and it is expected that they will be erected in the spring of next year. Meanwhile a subscription list will be prepared and an active campaign for funds for this purpose proceeded with at an early date. Designs of the monuments selected will be on view in the city during the coming week.

It was decided to hold Poppy Day on November 8th, when the national emblem of the G.W.V.A. (the Flanders poppy) will be on sale throughout the city on that date.

It was also decided to attend in a body the unveiling of a memorial at All Saints' Church on Sunday morning, November 9th. All ranks will parade in uniform, or otherwise, at the G.W.V.A. Hall at 10.30 a.m. sharp.

The annual memorial service will also be held at the Grand Opera House in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. It is expected that the Hon. W. H. Lieutenant-Colonel Price, the Provincial Treasurer of Ontario, together with Brigadier-General Roos, of Kingston, will address the meeting. Full details of the programme will be issued later.

The membership campaign is on the way. All members not yet renewed want to do so in order to get their ticket for the draw, which will take place on Armistice night. There are ten prizes, including a prize of two tons of coal. Tickets may be obtained from any member of the Executive or at the office.

The dance committee have decided to open their season with a masquerade dance to be held on Friday next, October 31st. A good orchestra has been secured. This dance is being held jointly with the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A.

The regular euchre drive will take place on Wednesday, when a good time is again in store for those who attend.

On Armistice night the hall will be open to all returned men and their friends. This is a free-for-all, and a good programme is being prepared. Don't forget this treat.

The officers and members desire to express their thanks to Mrs. Emmerson and Mrs. S. Kerneghan, for their kind donation of clothes and other articles for distribution among the needy. Any other persons having articles of a similar nature to dispose of, please forward to this office, when it can be used to a good advantage amongst the needy.

The Commander announced with regrets the death of Comrade F. Preston and Comrade E. King, and an expression of sympathy with the relatives of these deceased Comrades was carried, and instructed to be conveyed to them.

SPLENDID CONCERT BY BY LONDON'S GREAT "8"

Under the auspices of the Peterboro Rotary Club, Tom Copeland and his London's Great 8 entertainers visited the Grand Opera House last evening, and this clever aggregation of British artists strengthened the favorable impression formed when the company was here last season. A programme of rare merit, with plenty of variety and not a weak number anywhere, from the opening chorus, "Hail Glorious Canada" to the Scottish medley which wound up the entertainment, was thoroughly enjoyed by last night's audience, and encores were much in demand, in several cases the artists being forced to give a second recall number in response to the applause.

Mr. Copeland heads a little company of splendid calibre, and no better programme of this nature will be heard at the Grand this season. It is fortunate that the London 8 are here for two nights, so that this evening's entertainment will give local play-goers another opportunity. An entire chance of programme is announced for to-night.

Where there were so many outstanding features it would be unwise to attempt to pick out the high lights of last evening's programme. Every artist made a fine impression, and the result was an evening of thorough enjoyment.

Mr. Copeland himself a Scottish comedian, most effective in his methods, registered a tremendous hit with his amusing songs and droll stories, and there was little rest from laughing while he occupied the stage. He is a real funmaker, and gets results without the vulgarity that some comedians on this side of the water think it necessary to use.

The London 8 is strong in instrumental skill. The trio, Miss Dorothy Alwynne, violin; Miss Joan Duff, the clever young pianist, and Mr. Walter Nunn, 'cello, scored a triumph, both in their concerted numbers, Scottish and Irish medleys and in their solo work.

Miss Alwynne's first violin number, the second movement of one of Mendelssohn's best known concertos, a most exacting work, was brilliantly played, and in reply to the storm of applause, the violinist rendered most effectively the haunting little song, "Absent." A second encore had to be given. Later on in the programme Miss Alwynne was equally successful in her rendition of Saraste's "Hejr Kati" and her encore number the always popular "Souvenir," by Drdla.

Mr. Nunn, a 'cellist of ability and promise, showed a thorough mastery of his difficult instrument in his opening number, "Broken Melody," and was enthusiastically recalled, while his second number, Popper's "Tarantelle," was a brilliant effort.

Miss Duff played all the accompaniments with great success, and, in addition, graciously acceded to a request for a solo by a sparkling rendition of Godard's "Valse Chromatique."

The vocal numbers on the programme were equally striking.

Miss Alice Graves, the possessor of a splendid soprano voice, sang the impressive "One Fine Day," from Madame Butterfly, with a fine appreciation of its qualities, and as an encore rendered "Star" very sweetly. In the second part of the programme Miss Graves scored in the old favorite, "An Old-Fashioned Town," and in her recall number, "A Lilac Tree."

Mr. Richard Alexander, whose baritone solos were a feature of last season's programme, was as effective as ever last evening. Mr. Alexander not only only has a fine resonnant voice, but what is more, he knows how to use it, with the result that each number is a delight. His songs and encores included "The Wheeltapper," "Tommy, My Lad," "If I Were," and "Why Shouldn't I?"

Miss Mary Mackie, a comedienne of parts, contributed two most entertaining comic songs in pleasing fashion, the first the timely "Since Mother Bobbed Her Hair," and the second, the old comic classic, "Phil the Fluter's Ball." Miss Mackie also scored in her rendition of "Annie Laurie" during the closing medley.

The Concert 8 should be greeted with a capacity audience to-night.

CHINA THREATENED WITH ANOTHER WAR

It Was Rumored in Shanghai To-day That Marshal Feng Had Been Assassinated.

By D. C. BESS, United Press Staff Correspondent).

SHANGHAI, Oct. 28.—War may break out here again as a result of Marshal Feng Yu Hsiang's Coup D'etat at Pekin.

The victorious and defeated troops in the vicinity of Shanghai are now divided on new lines, half supporting Feng, half remaining loyal to Wu Pei, Fu.

Marshal Chi Hsieh Yuan, who defeated Lu Young Hsiang and took Shanghai after Stubborn fighting, was a close ally of Wu Pei Fu, some of his troops have started for Tien Tsin to aid Wu in retaking Pekin which was seized by Feng's Christian troops last week.

A rumor was persistent here today that Marshal Feng had been assassinated at Pekin. Communications were poor and the rumour could not be verified but it was persistent enough to boost the price of silver.

THREE MEN FACE ROBBERY CHARGE

They Will Be Taken From Walla Walla Prison, Washington to Vancouver For Trial.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 28.—Three men now serving terms of four years in Walla Walla, Washington, penitentiary, will be brought back to Vancouver next month to face a trial in connection with the city hall payroll and Capitol Theatre robbery, it was announced to-day. The men are Frank Depaul, Frank Howell and and C. C. Thompson. The robberies occurred two years ago. Bandits held up city hall employes when they were enroute from the bank to the city hall and escaped with $75,365. Shortly afterwards the robbers bound and gagged four employes of the Capitol Theatre and took $2,700 from the safe.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

WONDERFUL DRAMA FOR ALL IN THE PERFECT FLAPPER.

The perfect flapper is going to capture Peterboro to-morrow.

The Capitol Theatre will be the scene of the victory for the modern flapper, of which we hear so much these days. The cause is Colleen Moore and the weapon she uses, is "The Perfect Flapper," a First National picture. It was also directed by John Francis Dillon — combinations that made "Flaming Youth" the sensation of the past season.

Colleen proves conclusively that she is the rightful holder of the crown. She has been given a cast and production that will go down as one nearing perfection. To say that "The Perfect Flapper" has "everything" is to say only a part of it. The picture is full of comedy and pathos, stunning gowns and daring, thrilling escapes and spectacular scenes, flawless direction and beautiful photography, and above all—it has the one and only Colleen, who is herself the very embodiment of up-to-date American girlhood.

Sydney Chaplin in an important role gives the picture its greatest comedy moments. He is acclaimed, and rightly, one of screendom's greatest comedians, and if his work in "The Perfect Flapper" does not land him on the very top run of the ladder of comedy we miss our guess. The scenes representing Colleen as Juliet and Chaplin as Romeo are especially clever and well handled. They are shown in the celebrated balcony scene which, to our mind, becomes one of the most laugh-provoking scenes ever filmed.

Frank Mayo is handsome as ever and does some very creditable work. Lydia Knott as Aunt Sarah is in strange contrast to the dynamic Colleen, while her father, played by Charles Wellesley, is a splendid old fellow, who understands and loves his bewildered little girl.

"Sinners in Heaven," with its peculiar title taken from the novel of the same name by Clive Arden, is the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for the first two days of this week. It is one of those productions that, like many of the popular novels of the day, have a fairy-tale atmosphere, made veritable by the wonders of modern invention and science A few years ago, an author who would send two people on an airship to an island in the South Seas, to be marooned there until rescued by another airship, would be classed with the legendary writer that Jules Verne appeared to his day and generation when he wrote "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Sea". Nowadays, nobody turns a hair when they read of such happenings and see them on the screen. Modern literature and modern film-makers have much to be thankful for in the vast possibilities opened up for their skill by the wonder of modern invention.

Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix, star in "Sinners in Heaven." A girl who care little for men and a man who is a woman-hater form part of the crew of a plane that departs from England for a voyage to the South Seas and is wrecked on an island in the Polynesiaan group, the girl and man being the scole survivors. Pursued by hostile native tribes, they pretend that they are gods and scare the superstitious islanders away. A pretty native girl, about to be offered as a living sacrifice, is rescued by the whites and falls in love with Allan. The tribes come once more and the girl is rescued by the airship that has been searching for the survivors of the first plane. They leave Allan supposedly dead after a fierce hand-to-hand fight with the natives. Barbara goes back to her English village of Darbury, there to face the gossips who think that her Scotch rite marriage on the desert island is a farcical affair. The finale of the picture, which is one of those entertaining affairs that hold the interest throughout, is sudden and satisfactory.

AT THE ROYAL.

"THE HEART BANDIT" SPARKLING COMEDY

Viola Dana's Newest Metro Picture Offers Evening of Real Entertainment.

"Real entertainment" was the verdict of the audience at the Royal Theatre last night when Viola Dana's newest Metro picture, "The Heart Bandit," opened for a three day run. This latest of the Dana series has all the elements that mean enjoyment for the spectators. Romance, thrills, comedy, pathos—all play a big part; and through it Miss Dana goes her dainty way.

The story is a merry tale about a girl bandit who is regenerated when she breaks into the home of an old lady and her son in running from the police. The dramatic and comic situations arising from this premise bring forth many exciting and laughable moments in which the star is superb.

Milton Sills is Miss Dana's leading man, and he never gave a more delightful performance in any of the big successes in which he has appeared. Wallace MacDonald does a great piece of work in a semi-comedy role, and others in the cast include Gertrude Claire, Bertram Grassby, and De Witt Jennings.

IRISH NIGHT AT ROYAL THURSDAY.

Irish Picture, Irish Cast, Irish Music and the Old Irish Songs—Cast is hundred per cent. Irish—Sons of Erin Recruited to Play in "April Showers."

An Irish cast for an Irish play! So said B. P. Schulberg producer of Preferred Pictures, when he began filming "April Showers," a piquant tale of Irish activities in New York's lower East Side, from the combined pens of The Tarkingtons.

Consequently this attraction, to be shown at the Royal Thursday has a cast of players such as never before has been seen outside of Old Erin.

From Dublin.

Schulberg not only made sure that his players were Irish but he also chose to direct it Tom Forman, who can trace his antecedents to Dublin Castle. The services of Colleen Moore of course, were in immediate demand, for her Irish brown eyes and waving dark hair are not only true to Irish coloring but her saucy vivacity and whimsical humor are true Irish characteristics.

Kenneth Harlan, one of the most popular actors on the screen, and as it happens, an Irish youth whose grandmammas hailed from the other side, plays a leading role. The Blarney Stone is no stranger to Ruth Clifford, while James Corrigan, Myrtle Vane and Priscilla Bonner may also wear Shamrocks.

MISS CARELINE FULLIAM, De Feo Grand Opera Star, at the Grand on Saturday.

AT THE REGENT.

"HONOR AMONG MEN" SCORES AT OPENING.

Edmund Lowe and Claire Adams Play Leading Roles in New Fox Picture From Novel By Richard Harding Davis.

People who love to hobnob with kings, princes, countesses, dashing soldiers and beautiful women and delight to participate in intrigue, hair-breadth escapes and brave deeds will find 'Honor Among Men,' which came to the Regent Theatre yesterday, exactly the thing to make a pleasant evening.

This picture, produced by William Fox, would be much better known by the title of the book upon which it is based. Fact is, "Honor Among Men" is no other than our old friend and favorite, "The King's Jackal," written by Richard Harding Davis, which used to keep young folks from 12 to 112 awake nights reading on to see what becomes of the beautiful rich American girl who gets mixed up in the affairs of a little kingdom whose King has been exiled. It was great stuff as a book, and—well, you know how much advantage the film has over the printed page.

Edmund Lowe, who did such fine work in the title role of "The Fool" that William Fox elevated him to stardom, is seen as Prince Kalonay, the King's 'Jackal.' Beautiful Claire Adams has the role of the wealthy American girl, Patricia Carson. Denison Clift is entitled to much commendation for his directorial work because he has produced something at once beautiful and exciting.

AT THE GRAND.

EVERYBODY LOVES GOOD MUSIC.

Grand Opera for the People.

The De Feo Grand Opera Company is coming on Saturday to the Grand Opera House. Some people will say:

Grand opera! What is that?

Well, grand opera is the best in music, and the best is good enough for all the people.

Who ever invented that opera is made only for the rich and the highbrows?

True enough, until lately, opera has been a luxurious entertainment that only the wealthy and the privileged ones could afford, because opera performances cannot be given at such a low cost as burlesque, drama, or even musical comedy. But this does not mean that the wealthy people alone can understand good music. Good music appeals to everybody, like everything else that is good in the world.

It may be that some people have not been educated to listen and to enjoy musical drama. For this very reason the present tour of the De Feo Grand Opera Company, made under the auspices of the Music League of America and Associated Musical Societies of Canada, through the smaller cities in Ontario and Quebec is of a highly educational nature, and should have the support and the encouragement of all those who have the welfare of the people at heart.

The people of Peterborough and of the district will show themselves worthy of the higher and better things in life by patronising the only performance of Opera that will be given in Peterborough next Saturday evening, at the Grand Opera House.

STAINLESS.

The stainless rust-proof steel invented by Ronald Wilds of Sheffield, England, is being tested in Pittsburg. A cheap steel of this sort would save America alone hundreds of millions of dollars a year that now is lost by rust.

A very dull steel industry, chronically dull, would result. It's the wearing out of things that keeps industry busy. Nearly all human work is for the purpose of replacing the wornout.

TO SUPPORT O.T.A.

Local Plebiscite Committee Had Meeting Last Evening.

A meeting of the local Plebiscite Committee which had charge of the campaign in Peterboro, in connection with the recent vote, was held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening, Mr. Thomas Barrie in the chair.

Several appreciative resolutions in connection with assistance at the various polling sub - divisions were passed, also commendatory remarks voiced with regard to the stand for prohibition taken by some of the newspapers, including the Toronto Globe and Star, and the Montreal Witness.

A strong resolution was passed, commending the Premier's promise to enforce the O.T.A., the committee pledging itself in support of any legislation passed by the Provincial government in support of the measure.

Preliminary arrangements were made in the formation of a permanent organization to replace the committee, which functioned only for the taking of the vote. These arrangements, however, will be deferred until such time as the Provincial Prohibition Union announces its plan of formation, the local organization wishing to co-operate in its procedure.

TRIALS CUT SHORT.

Ocean G. Smith and Sydney Jones Will Not Learn Their Sentences Till Dec. 1st.

TORONTO, October 28. — Ocean G. Smith and Sydney Jones, officers of the defunct Home Bank recently found guilty of negligence in connection with the preparation of reports to the government on the affairs of the bank, will not learn their sentences until December 1st. They were due to come up for sentence on Friday next, but Judge Coatsworth announced this morning that the sentence had been deferred until Dec. 1st.

The fixing of the date for Dec. 1, may mean that the court anticipates completion by that time of all the various trials of the directors and officers of the Home Bank now pending. At one time it was believed that these would extend into the New Year.

WEDDING BELLS.

ROBINSON—BOLTON.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John's Church, Peterboro, October 22nd, at 2 o'clock when Cloie Adéline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bolton, of Burleigh Falls, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Kenneth Earl Robinson, of Codrington. The Rev. R. C. Blagrave officiated.

The bride was prettily gowned in ivory crepe de chene, and wore the customary veil, caught up with orange blossoms. Miss Bertha Would, dressed in poudre blue crepe de chene, was bridesmaid. Both carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses and fern.

Mr. Bolton Cunningham acted as groomsman.

After the ceremony a sumptuous repast was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Sullivan, 431 Rogers Street.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a pearl ring, and to the groomsman gold cuff links.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor, The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I wish, on behalf of the East Riding Prebiscite Committee, to thank The Examiner for its fair attitude throughout the campaign. I take much pleasure in noting that the majority of 1,976 in East Peterboro in 1919 has been increased to 2,578 this time.—Yours truly,

SAMUEL ARMSTRONG,
Chairman Plebiscite Committee.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon

The scarf is one of the things that counts tremendously in the success of the costume, and its vogue is so great that one sees it at all hours and in many guises.

AT PRESENT the scarf is the climax of every type of costume. It enlivens the sports suit, it is the last flutter of color that waves the traveling suit out of sight, it completes the afternoon gown, and it wraps itself, flannel-band fashion, above the décolletage of the evening frock. In a model recently sent over from Paris the scarf takes opposite sides with the line of the Russian closing and matches the hem. In this case it was of the new bayberry-green silk crêpe, while the body of the frock was of gray-green crêpe printed in lemon and orange

BRITISH ELECTORS VOTING TO-DAY, RUSSIAN LETTER A 'RED' HERRING?

Alleged Communistic Appeal Furnished Orators and the Press With Only Exciting Topic Produced During Campaign — Defeat of Labor Government Expected.

RESULTS IMPOSSIBLE TO FORECAST.

LONDON, October 29 (Canadian Press). — The people of Great Britain will provide themselves to-day with their third Parliament within two years. What kind of a Parliamnt it will be after the votes of the nation are counted no prominent politician or political observer has been audacious enough to predict publicly. That the Labour Government will go the way of all Governments seems, however, to be the opinion held almost everywhere; but some of the Labourites still appear confident that their party will be given a mandate to remain in office.

Whether the Conservatives can recoup their losses of a year ago and return to the House of Commons with a majority over all other parties, and thereby put themselves into office without the assisance of the others, is a question no one has any means of determining, or even reasonably forecasting, until the returns come in.

The whole pre-election political situation has been made utterly uncertain by the eleventh hour bursting of the Russian bombshell with an effect on the country that cannot be gauged at all. Until this "red letter" gave the campaign orators a real live wire topic to talk about, the electorate wore an apathetic air, and it was rather the general expectation that the three parties would return to Westminster in the same relative positions they held numerically when the last Parliament's life ended—the Conservatives first, Labour second, and the Liberals third — with the Conservatives lacking a clear majority.

Result Doubtful.

But now nobody can say with any confidence what the result will be. In any event what happens will not be due to apathy, unless the voters are entirely unaffected by screaming headlines and unperturbed by political speakers.

Straw votes have been taken throughout the country, and most of them indicate a slight increase in the strength of both Conservatives and Labourites, with the Liberals losing. That the Liberal strength in Parliament is on the wane seems also to be the opinion of both Tory and Socialist chieftains.

"The Liberals are perishing," Lord Birkenhead informed one of his audiences yesterday. Birkenhead is a Unionist.

Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, almost at the same time told his hearers that there would never be a Liberal Government, and last night the Prime Minister, Ramsay MacDonald, said that the only alternative to a Labour Government was a conservative Government.

On the other hand, former Premiers Asquith and Lloyd-George, as leaders of Liberals, have given no sign of lack of confidence in their speeches in their constituencies.

Most of the newspapers are seeing "red" since the Russian issue has changed from a calm commonplace question about a treaty to a fiery squabble over a revolutionary letter. Some of them appear to handle it dispassionately or impartially even in the news columns, while so far as headlines and editorials go, the majority appear to be intended to stir up righteous indignation in the voter's breast.

Premier Suspicious.

Meanwhile the Prime Minister seems to have his doubts about the authenticity of the Zinovieff document. A heckler asked him last night whether the red plot letter was a forgery, and he replied: "I have come to no conclusions at all. I am entertaining suspicions."

The Secretary for War, Stephen Walsh, declared to his election eve audience that the Russian bombshell was a fraud from beginning to end, adding: "As will be admitted within a day or two."

As the hour approaches for polling, the last vestiges of any domestic issue in the campaign steadily diminish. There is little talk of housing, little about Protection and Free Trade; almost none about employment, although nearly a million and a quarter men are registered as without work. This time there is no irate Irish issue, but there is a red-hot Russian one.

Shaw's Irony.

George Bernard Shaw, in a speech at Luton on Monday night, asked the crowd if they had ever noticed how extraordinarily clever the old governing classes in this country were in always "preventing an English election from being fought on an English question."

The Socialist oracle expressed the opinion that real policy of the old ruling classes was to leave things exactly as they were, and he explained: "If you want to leave things as they are you must get people excited about something else."

To-night it is likely that more people than ever before will show vast excitement over the election returns. There is, of course, a larger electoral than ever, due to women suffrage, and there will be some excitement, too, in the little village farmhouses, cut off from telephone and telegraph communication, but not cut off from the radio, and the returns will be broadcasted until one o'clock on Thursday morning.

LADY ASTOR'S CHANCES

Political Prophets Believe She will be returned with Increased Majority

PLYMOUTH Eng. Oct. 29. — If Lady Astor does not retain her seat in parliament in the elections by a largely increased majority all the prophets will be greatly surprised. Her success at the polls is assured, in the opinion of Conservative headquarters here. It was said there yesterday that only apathy or bad weather could limit the extent of her victory.

The campaign here wound up Tuesday in torrents of oratory and a heavy downpour of rain. Lady Astor from first to last has opposed the Russian loan and denounced socialism. Indoor and outdoor meetings, together with house to house canvassing, has tried her voice, but her energy and vivacity have been indomitable.

Romps With Children

Lady Astor never has been too tired to run races with children who swarmed around her occasionally as she spoke from the top of her automobile. In her final whirlwind wind-up she has addressed 20 meetings daily. The excitement of the campaign has been intense, but despite the strong opposition, Lady Astor has had from various quarters, she is expected by her partisans to win by thousands of votes. Her message to the electors on the eve of the poll ing was:

"Reform without revolution; peace without peril; change, but not chaos. Only constitutional progress will give us work, prosperity and better conditions."

Last night Lady Astor delivered an address to thousands of persons in the open air outside the headquarters of the Conservative party. She spoke notwithstanding a torrential rainfall. After outlining her policy she said to her auditors, "now that you know what I stand for, tomorrow you will know what I sit for."

VOTE EARLY

The 21-day campaign came to an end with political passions whipped to white heat by bitter partisan accusations and recriminations, the storm centre being the "red letter", —The document attributed to Gregory Zinoviev, with whose name it is signed, which contains subversive suggestions to British communists.

Premier Ramsay MacDonald wound up his campaign at Aberavons, weak from fatigue and insomnia uncertain to the end concerning the letters authenticity but expressing the view that the government had acted promptly and wisely in the matter.

Labor went to vote with accusations of some of MacDonald's colleagues to the effect that the latter was part of a political plot still ringing in their ears.

Conservatives, however, hoped confidently to gain many seats as a result of the "Red Letter" affair, but only the most sanguine Tories predicted a clear majority.

As for Liberals, they hope to maintain their status as the "balance of power," in Commons.

"Vote early" was Ramsay MacDonald's parting injunction to his followers. He is believed sure of his seat by a narrow majority. So is ex-Premier H H. Asquith, while ex-Premiers Lloyd George and Baldwin are expected to win more easily.

There are 1,300 candidates contesting for 583 seats.

The remaining 32 constituencies automatically elected their candidates on nomination day as they were unopposed.

BANDITS TAKE 20,000

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Oct. 29.—At 2 o'clock Sunday morning six foreigners, armed with .45-calibre revolvers, burst into the rooms of the West End Club at 27 Stone Street, held up a scores of men who were seated at the various card tables and relieved the players of 20,000 in money and jewelry.

The robbers then backed out of the place and, entering an automobile parked in the street, vanished in the night. The police searched the city and countryside, but found no trace of the bandits.

The club is less than a hundred feet from Main street, and half a dozen patrolmen are within calling distance at all hours of night.

Just before 2 o'clock four well-dressed strangers followed a club member into the hallway and upstairs into the ante-room. They entered the cardroom and insisted on taking hands in the games. The vigorous protests made were evidently a signal for two gunmen outside. The latter hurried upstairs and as they entered, all six drew weapons, backed the clubmen against a wall and robbed them.

TWO YEARS FOR C. A. MATTHEWS

Former Deputy Treasurer Found Guilty of Breach of Trust.

TORONTO, Oct. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Found guilty by the jury of having committed a breach of trust, contrary to the criminal code, and of having accepted inducement to do so, contrary to the Secret Commissions Act, Charles A. Matthews, Jr., former Deputy Treasurer of Ontario, was in the Criminal Assize Court at the City Hall last night sentenced by Justice Mowatt to two years in the penitentiary.

The jury found the accused "not guilty" on all four conspiracy counts in the indictment, namely, conspiracy to steal certain securities or moneys from the Home Bank and conspiracy to accept, as a public official, gifts or rewards for showing favor and failing to show disfavor.

As Matthews was escorted by the Sheriff's officers from the court-room, which was crowded, despite the hour, his passage for a time being brought to a halt by many persons in the court-room, who sought to shake his hand.

His father, who had remained close to him throughout the long hours of the trial, was the first to grasp his hand as he stepped from the dock after being sentenced.

Matthews was taken by motor car to the Toronto Jail, where his former superior, Peter Smith, is prisoner, pending his removal to Kingston Penitentiary.

Following a plea for mercy by H. H. Gordon, the defence counsel acting in place of Seymour Corley, K.C., who was taken ill shortly before the trial, His Lordship said: "Your counsel has made remarks of a moving nature, but I cannot forget that this trial has been conducted with very great fairness and that you have been very ably defended by a young counsel, it is true, but he will go far. These two counts are by no means so inferior as he has said. In my opinion, one is that, being a public officer, you have committed a breach of trust; the other of corruptly accepting gifts for showing favor. "It is a painful duty for me to impose sentence upon you, particularly when I remember your parents and your family. In view of the fact that under the statutes you forfeit all claims for allowances and pensions, I am not disposed to impose a heavy sentence. The sentence of this court is that you be committed to the penitentiary for two years."

U. S. STEEL PAYS EXTRA DIVIDEND

Total Earnings For Third Quarter Failed To Cover Dividend Requirements.

NEW YORK, October 29 (Canadian Press). — The United States Steel Corporation yesterday maintained its policy of paying an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly common and preferred disbursements of $1.25 and $1.75 a share respectively, despite the fact that the third quarter's earnings failed fully to cover dividend requirements.

Total earnings of $30,718,415 for the period ended 30th September represented a decline of $10,662,624 from the preceding quarter's earnings. With the deduction of all charges and dividends there was a deficit of $122,102 for the quarter, although the surplus for the first nine months of the year was $25,171,601.

Lower selling prices on the products of Steel Corporation accounted for the reduction in earnings, according to Chairman E. H. Gary.

Bookings up to 24th October, he said, were larger per day than in the corresponding period of September.

MONTREAL VICE TOLD BY PRIEST

Social Menace To St. James' Parish—Even School Children in Danger.

POLICE ENQUIRY.

MONTREAL, Oct. 29.—Harrowing details of the sordid vice conditions existing in his parish were told by Rev. Father P. Gouthier, cure of St. James' Parish, to the commission inquiring into the administration of police in Montreal, at Tuesday's session.

At some points in his evidence, the facts revealed were so gruesome and unsavery that the mild-eyed, kindly little priest apologized to the court for having to give voice to such matters, and asked the newspapers to spare the public the shock of reading them.

Alban German appearing for Chief Belanger and Detective Chief Egan, asked that the examination of the Police Chief be suspended until later in the day, as he was engaged in the Delorme trial and would like to be present when the Chief was further examined.

Then Father P. Gauthier, cure of St. James' Parish Church, was called to the witness stand. He is a member of the committee of sixteen and was the spokesman before the executive committee of the city when the committee of sixteen vainly tried to persuade Ald. J. A. Brodeur to take some action to remove the social menace of the district. Father Gauthier stated that in the southeast section of his parish there was immorality in a grave degree. He knew of disorderly houses publicly known as such in that district to the number of 30. He was of the opinion that there were probably a good many more that he did not know of.

Danger to Children.

He had observed these houses to be a great cause of scandal in the district. There was the scandal of solicitetion of the street and from the windows and especially a great scandal for the little children of the district.

These children saw people going into these houses. They saw things from windows which it was dangerous for them to see and for which they demanded explanations and they found too many men around willing to give them the explanation of these things.

Close by these houses were many other houses where honorable people lived with their children. Witness remembered going down one of these streets with another priest, and he saw about fifteen men standing at the door of one of these houses waiting to enter. Quite near, there were seven or eight children playing.

Mr. Bossard—"Is there solicitation on the street?"—"Yes, there is."

"By girls?"—"It is mostly done by girls, more rarely by men or boys."

Girls Feel Secure.

"These girls walk the streets?"—"Yes. They distribute cards and call men over and take them into the houses."

"These cards are printed with the girls' names?"—"Yes, that is, their assumed names, Alice, Beline, Marie, aand so forth, with the address of the house."

"Do these girls seem to feel secure?"—"They have an apparent feeling of great security. They do not seem to have fear of anything at all."

"On what streets especially is that solicitation done?"—"On St. Denis, Saguinet and Cadieux Streets that I know of."

"Is that done every day?"—"From what is reported to me it is a frequent matter. Almost a regular thing."

"Are these houses situated near schools?"—"Yes. There are schools more or less all round. There are schools for boys and girls on De-

GIRL'S CLOTHES CAUGHT FIRE LIGHTING RANGE

Rushed Blazing Into Field—Died In Sarnia Hospital.

SARNIA, Ont., October 28. — Mabel Gertrude Ingram, aged 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ingram of Sombra township, died in the Sarnia general hospital Tuesday from injuries sustained when her clothing caught fire as she was about to light a fire with straw in the kitchen range on Monday.

Miss Ingram was alone in the house at the time, her father being away from the farm and her mother in the fields. The mail carrier approaching the house, saw the girl emerge with her clothing ablaze. He stropped some of the clothing from her and then went for aid, while the girl rushed out to the field to her mother. She was brought by automobile to the Sarnia hospital.

WINDSOR WOMAN AND MAN KILLED

Roofer Crushed By Caste of Glass Falling Off Motor Truck.

WOMAN STRANGLED.

WINDSOR, October 29. — A man and a woman died in Windsor yesterday as a result of accidents.

Herbert Winsdale, 28, of 232 McEwan avenue, a roofer in the employ of Pennington and Lang, contractors, was crushed to death when a heavy crate of glass fell from a moving automobile truck upon him in Ford.

Mrs. Agnes Flora Moore, 51, of 1330 Dufferin Place, was killed when an automobile in which she and her husband and two children were returning from Chatham overturned a mile east of Belle River.

Winsdale, according to his employers, was standing on the rear of the truck when the crate of glass weighing about 1000 lbs., started to topple off the truck as it slowed to a stop.

Winsdale died on the way to the Hotel Dieu.

Mrs. Moore was strangled by the broken windshield of the automobile which pinioned her across the throat. J. Stewart Moore, her husband, who was driving, is in Hotel Dieu, suffering from a broken shoulder.

THIEVES RETURN BONDS IN REGISTERED LETTER

All But $650 Worth of $11,500 Stolen at Port Perry Received.

LINDSAY, October 29. — Mr. James Lucas, of Port Perry, resident manager for the firm of Hogg & Lytle, was agreeably surprised yesterday morning when he received registered mail containing the bonds totalling $11,500, save $650.00, from the robbers who burglarised the firm's office some weeks ago.

There was no note of explanation accompanying the bonds.

The thieves abandoned their Cadillac car early on Saturday morning at a point near Toronto.

AUTHOR NEAR DEATH.

Writer of Nick Carter Detective Stories Is Near Death.

PIQUA, Ohio, Oct. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Thomas Harbaugh, 75, known as the writer of Nick Carter detective stories, is near death here, according to the announcement at Miami County Infirmary, where he has been living for the past year. Harbaugh, once wealthy, recently has been living in very poor circumstances.

LINDSAY DRYS PROPOSE LAWS

Would Take Business From a Lot of Druggists and Doctors.

"VIGILANTES" TOO.

LINDSAY, October 29. — According to rumours in the local prohibition circles, a convention of the temperance workers of the county will be held in Lindsay at an early date, when a number of suggestions for the more vigorous enforcement of the O.T.A. will be considered and later forwarded to the government.

It is stated on the street that the government will be urged to have one druggist handle liquor in the municipality under salary; also that one physician only be allowed to issue scripts. The applicant for a "script" must satisfy the physician that the liquor he desires to secure is for medicinal purposes only.

Another rumor is to the effect that a vigilance committee is to be appointed to assist the authorities in the vigorous enforcement of the act.

Temperance men when interviewed regarding these rumours would not confirm or deny them.

JAPAN WILL START SOME REBUILDING

A Great Wage Boom Is Expected When Building Starts.

TOKIO, Oct. 29.—(United Press). —Reconstruction work in Tokio and Yokohama, to start under Government supervision this fall, is expected to boom wages scales of labor generally, but particularly the wages of the building trade of the Empire.

There are some 23,000 carpenters in Tokio at present and they are getting an average of $2 to $2.25 a day. Shortly after the earthquake a year ago, carpenters got as high as $3.50 a day. They poured into the capital from all parts of Japan, however, glutting the market, and wages dropped.

Masons, bricklayers, lathers and kindred tradesmen get lesser scales than skilled carpenters. There are fewer of them at this time here, too. Plasterers get an average of $2 a day. There are about 3,000 of them in Tokio.

The building trades have no unions as such, working on the old clan or guild system. A man works under the contractorship of his master. That is, when he learns the trade he specializes in, he stays with the man who taught it to him so long as that man remains active in business. His chief gets the jobs for him and taxes him a small amount of his wage in return.

In return for this, the chief also takes care of his men in case of sickness, paying them enough to live even though they are unable to work. This system has prevailed for years. Its break-up, however, is forecast with the growth of union labor ideas in Nippon.

METHODIST CONVENTION.

Every City, Town and Village in Ontario Will Be Represented.

TORONTO, Oct. 29.— (Canadian Press).— At least 900 and possibly over a thousand ministers from Ontario and Quebec points will attend the Ontario-Quebec celebration of the Methodist Missionary Society to be held in Toronto all next week. Arrangements are being made for every Methodist divine in the area from Windsor to Gaspe Bay and from Cochrane to Quebec to come to Toronto. Every city town and settled township in Ontario will be represented by one or more delegates at the convention.

FRANCE RECOGNIZES SOVIET AS INITIAL STEP TO NEGOTIATIONS

Message Flashed By Radio From Paris Last Night—Acceptance Fully Expected.

AMBASSADORS NEXT.

Conference Likely To Be Held Next Week For Discussion of Details.

PARIS, Oct 29.—France's recognition of the Russian Soviet government was flashed at noon Tuesday from Eiffel Tower in a brief message addressed to M. Tchitcherin, foreign minister at Moscow. The French government promised to make public the text last night together with the text of the Soviet reply, but up to ten o'clock neither text had been issued, as the Russian answer had not been received, and the government was firm in its resolve to publish the two simultaneously.

A message was even sent to M. Rakovsky, the Russian Soviet Charge at London, requesting him to refrain from issuing the texts of the notes until he was assured they had been given out in Paris. However, the reply is not expected to be more than a few words, acknowledging the receipt of the French message.

It may be taken for granted, the Matin says, that the exact terms of the reply are known to M. De Monzie, president of the commission on Russian affairs, who would hardly have risked offering the government's recognition without careful soundings and precise assurances, notably from M. Rakovsky, regarding the reception awaiting it.

An Early Conference

The next step will be the nomination of ambassadors. But apart from that, according to the Matin, a Franco-Russian conference for next week is under consideration, at which the economic and financial questions raised by recognition will be studied. M. De Monzie is likely to preside at this conference, and M. Tchitcherin may possibly head the Russian delegation.

The French government had originally intended that these negotiations should precede recognition, but Moscow demanded that the discussion should follow recognition, as it was impossible for Russia to bind herself by engagements if not officially recognized. The Freich agreed to this one condition that the Soviets undertook to show a conciliatory spirit during the ensuing negotiations.

GUILTY OF BIGAMY.

Four Months In Jail For Man Who Wed Again For Home.

BROCKVILLE, October 29 (Canadian Press). — Pleading guilty to a charge of bigamy in the Grenville County Police Court, William Peters, Edwardsburg Township, an elderly man, was sentenced by Magistrate Adams, to serve four months in the County Jail.

Peters was said to have married Odie Thompson at Brinston, Dundas County, in 1922, when another wife, Mary Weir, was living.

There is one child by the bigamous marriage, and a first wife is dead.

In extenuation of his offence, Peters said that he committed it merely because he desired a home and because he had not been able to find his legal wife after their separation.

DOLAN TO FYLE PAPERS.

Former Giant Coach To Seek $100,000 Damages.

NEW YORK, October 29 (Canadian Press). — Cozy Dolan, former coach of the New York Giants, banished for alleged complicity in an attempted bribery deal with Jimmy O'Connell, will seek damages of not less than 100,000 in the suit he plans to bring against Baseball Commissioner Landis, according to W. J. Fallon, Dolan's attorney.

Papers in the suit, which also will name Presidents Johnson and Heydler of the American and National Leagues as defendants, will be filed in the Federal Court here not later than Friday of this week, Fallon said.

DAWES PLAN IS NOW IN COMPLETE OPERATION

Final Preliminaries Executed Tuesday By Withdrawal From Ruhr.

PARIS, Oct. 29.—Execution of all of the preliminaries of the Dawes' plan was registered Tuesday in the presence of Seymour Parker Gilbert junior, Agent General for reparation payments, who was formally presented to the commission by Owen D. Young, the retiring agent general.

The final act, which completed the steps necessary for the declaration of complete operativeness of the Dawes plan, was official notification of the re-establishment of the economic machinery. This complete withdrawal of the allied administration from the occupied region was made known to the commission by the Belgian and French governments.

MOUNTED POLICE KILL SWEDE AT THE BORDER

Resisted Arrest For Illegal Entry Into Canada.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 29.—Escaping from custody after being arrested last Monday by immigration authorities at Emerson, for illegal entry into Canada, John Pearson, a Swedish laborer, 28 years of age, was later shot and instantly killed by Constables of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police when at the point of a revolver he resisted their efforts to apprehend him.

Person was just about to cross the border into the United States when Constables J. H. Gilbert, and F. G. Lapper, of the R.C.M.P., who had followed in a car, sighted him and challenged him to surrender. Constable Gilbert approached him with extended hands to indicate that he was not armed. The fugitive in turn drew his revolver and fired point blank at the Constable's head. The bullet missed its mark, Gilbert drawing his own revolver and firing a full round at Person. Lepper also opened fire and Person fell dead.

FIFTH CONVICTION.

Brockville Man To Serve Nine Months As O.T.A. Penalty.

BROCKVILLE, October 29 (Canadian Press), — For having carried liquor illegally, George Sutherland, Brockville, was sentenced in Grenville County Police Court to serve nine months, it being his fifth conviction under the O.T.A.

Sutherland was found in the possession of a quantity of liquor when the car in which he was a passenger from Hull, Que., was halted by Provincial Police near Kemptville.

In Leeds County Court, Duncan McTavish, Kitley Township, was sentenced to one month in jail, and an additional fine of $200.00, for having in his possession a quantity of mash used in the manufacture of liquor.

MOTOR PARTY HURT.

Car Overturned In Ditch Near Brockville.

BROCKVILLE, October 29 (Canadian Press). — Three members of a motoring party received injuries when their car left the road near Portland, and overturned in the ditch against a telephone pole.

Mrs. J. M. Henderson, Brockville, his daughter, was cut and bruised about the face, body and legs, and her son sustained bruises.

None of the injured is in a serious condition.

CLARENCE SMITH TRIAL FINISHED

Judge Coatsworth Reserved Judgment Until November 7th.

TORONTO, Oct. 29.—(Canadian Press.)—Trial of Clarence F. Smith, Montreal, Home Bank director, on charges of making, approving and concurring in false statements of bank's financial affairs, was finished at noon to-day. Judge Coatsworth reserved judgment until November 7. There will be no further trials of Home Bank directors in this court until Monday when C. A. Barnard, of Montreal, will face charges similar to those upon which Mr. Smith has just been tried.

Mr. McCarthy asked why Mr. Waldron had not admitted the falsity of statement and books of bank in first place and saved two weeks on trial. Books in two previous trials had already been proved false. He spoke of duty of directors and said all big loans had been before board meetings at which accused was present. "By his indifference by sitting at board and allowing the report to go out not knowing whether it was true or false the accused is condemned," said Mr. McCarthy. "If he didn't know it was his duty to know, if only a pin prick had been made it would have broken the shell of this rotten egg."

ONLY TWO CASES AT FALL ASSIZES

Two Cases On Docket To Be Settled Outside Of Court —One Adjourned.

Yesterday, at the opening of the assizes, Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., acting for Mrs. Emma Trotter 210 Edinburgh street moved for judgment against the City oif Peterborough for $2,000.00. This was upon the consent of the City, represented by Mr. Joseph Wearing, the City Solicitor, as a settlement had been agreed upon between the parties.

In the case of McKibbin and McKibbin, Mr. Gordon stated that a settlement had been reached with Mr. R. R. Hall, K.C., who was acting for the defendant, Samuel W. McKibbin, of Lakefield and the terms of the settlement were not disclosed to the Court.

In the case of Picard vs Picard and Crane, on account of the death of the late Joseph Picard, this case will stand adjourned as upon Mr. Gordon's application, until probate of the will has been granted, and an order has been made to continue the proceedings in the name of the Executors.

The only two cases left to be tried were the cases of Miss Cecelia Rogers vs Walter Belleghem, and the case of Hennessey and Hennessey of Ennismore.

SLASHED WITH RAZOR.

HAMILTON, October 29 (Canadian Press). — Running amuck with a razor during the hearing of the tax case charges in the City Hall yesterday afternoon, John L. Thompson, gardener at the Ontario Hospital slashed Constable Craig with the weapon and inflicted injuries upon himself before being subdued.

Detectives and police officers attending the investigation rushed to Craig's assistance, and handcuffed the prisoner.

There was a scuffle for several minutes, and the noise interrupted the Court for a time.

Thompson is mentally unbalanced, it is stated, and is now in the police cells.

MAGISTRATE FINES HIMSELF IN COURT.

HAMILTON, October 29. — The name of George Frederick Jelfs on the police roster confronted Police Magistrate George Frederick Jelfs in the police court yesterday. The offence chalked up against the name was that of cutting a corner too closely with an automobile.

The magistrate looked himself in the face and told himself he was fined $5.

He explained after court that some member of his family was driving his automobile. "I've been busy fining everyone who breaks the city bylaws," he said, "so there is nothing to do but fine myself. It is my car and I'm responsible."

Miss Olive Smith of Lindsay Collegiate Institute has been out of school for the past week on account of illnes, but returned to school on Monday.

ALIBI.

A colored man in Chatham, Ont., is arrested for cruelty to his horse. The charge is that he failed to keep his nag hitched in the shade. "The shade was there, but it moved," is his alibi.

MARMORA CHURCH IS 50 YEARS OLD

MARMORA, Oct. 29.—Fully fifty years have passed away since Right Worshipful Brother S. S. Lazier, D.D.G.M., P.E.D., laid in Marmora the corner stone of its first Anglican church, the St. Paul's of the present day. One of the two lots which constitute the church property was given by the Cobourg, Peterboro and Marmora Railway and Mining Company whilst the other was purchased from them through fifty dollars being contributed by five pioneer Anglican churchmen. These have passed to the great beyond but the outstanding figure in that impressive ceremony on September 1, 1874 is still surviving. So also is the lady, now Mrs. M. Mullobut then the young daughter of Mrs. S. M. Bleecker and deputed to present the silver trowel given by the ladies of the congregation. The church was built when the parish received its spiritual ministrations from the clergyman at Stirling, the Rev. Charles Earl Halliwell. Services and Sunday School had been held for many years by the Rev. Halliwell's predecessors in the then existing unpretentious town hall. After the church had been completed for a year or so, the Rev. C. E. Halliwell was instrumental in getting the Rev. Charles Mountain Harris appointed as the first resident Anglican clergyman. For forty years this faithful servant of God laboured unsparingly for his church and people and never was the town plunged into such mourning as that when he was suddenly called home on the 12th of March, 1923. After a few months had transpired, the Bishop's choice fell upon the Rev. P. Caiger-Watson to succeed him and it is under his direction that the church activities progress today. In a short period of time the parish has passed from the position of a mission to that of self supporting parish and one of the best rectories in the Diocese has been erected on its church grounds.

Semi-centenary services were arranged for Sunday, October 26th for public thanksgiving for all God's blessing of those fifty years of labor and self sacrifice. The day was beautifully fine so that both of the special services were well attended. In the morning the Lord Bishop of Ontario celebrated Holy Communion the other clergy present being the Rector and the Rev. John Lyons, M.A., Rector of Picton. In a forceful sermon based on the words taken from the 17th Psalm, "The lot is fallen unto me on a fair ground; yea, I have a goodly heritage", the Rev. Lyons compared the experience of the Psalmist to what might be the experience of the Canadian members of the Church of England today. He described the heritage of the Church as being passed down from a period long before A.D. 597 when first Roman missionaries touched British shores. He liked to be comprehensive in his conception of the church.

"One family we dwell in Him
One church above, beneath
Though now divided by the stream
The narrow stream of death."

He appealed for co-operation and prayer with steady church attendance on the part of the laity so that they might find it proved in their own case that the lot was fallen unto them on a fair ground and that they had a goodly heritage. The choir rendered an anthem by baleb Simper "The Lord is King", in which Mrs. G. R. Hartley took the solo. At the evensong, in addition to Bishop Bidwell and the Rector, there were three other clergy present, namely Canon Armstrong of Trenton, Rev. J. Lyons of Picton and the Rev. N. R. Stout of Baneroft. The Rector took the first portion of the service, Canon Armstrong and Rev. N. R. Stout read the lessons. The Rev. J. Lyons took the second portion of prayers and the Bishop preached to an overflowing congregation selecting his text from Acts 2:26, "They continued steadfast in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship. He spoke of the privilege of being able to be present to share in the joy of the jubilee of the church. He dwelt with sweet emphasis on the labours of the late beloved Rector. "I do not doubt," said Bishop Bidwell, "but what he is in spirit with us now." Tribute was paid to the attainments of the choir and to the undertaking of the new Rectory, the address concluding with a lucid exposition of the two parts of the text. Two anthems were rendered by the combined choirs of St. Paul's and Deloro. Prior to the Benediction being pronounced by the Bishop, the general thanksgiving was recited by all assembled. Thus ended the religious portion of the semi-centenary celebrations.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Bell motored to Belleville on Saturday evening and took the night train for Ottawa.

There they attended a gathering of C.N.R. officials, returning Sunday night.

Mr. Wm. Linn and family motored to Stirling on Sunday.

Among those spending the week-end at their Marmora homes were Hilda Philips of Peterboro Normal; Florence Sopha of Belleville Business College; James Shannon of Belleville; Elsie Williams of Prince Edward County, and Miss Mary Oliver of Belleville

Mrs. Egan is visiting her sister, Mrs. Alex Kennedy.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Campbell of Seattle, are visiting his cousin, Mrs. Hilton.

Mr. Campbell is an old Marmora township boy, who has not been in this vicinity for 35 years. He is renewing boyhood acquaintances.

MILLBROOK CHURCH HELD ANNIVERSARY

Rev. H. B. Kennedy, Former Millbrook Pastor, Preached on Sunday.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 29.—The anniversary services of Millbrook Methodist church were held on Sunday when a former pastor, Rev. H. B. Kenny, of Belleville, preached to large congregations morning and evening.

W. G. Hetherington, recording steward of the church, presented the financial statement explaining that the trustees found it necessary to ask the congregation for a thanksoffering of $800 this year if all present obligations were to be met. This is the largest amount that has ever been asked on an anniversary occasion and well up to seven hundred dollars was placed upon the plates during the day with a prospect of other contributions yet to be received. Rev. Mr. Kenny stated that $2100 had been requested at the anniversary of his own church the previous Sunday and $2111 was the response further augmented by $300 at the annual church supper the following evening.

Special music was provided by the choir at both services the selections in the morning including an anthem, 'I was glad when they said unto me,' with duet by Mrs. G. W. Sayles and Mrs. P. Stinson, and a duet, "I shall behold Him," by Mrs. Sayles and Mr. W. H. Combe.

Rev Mr Kenny chose his text from Ephesians 3:3-4, "How that by revelations he made known unto me the mystery; whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ." "In the journey of life it is necessary to decide the direction you are taking and what you are going for. There is a charm in the worn pathway, and there is also a charm in the unattempted way; some sweetness may not be denied the unfamiliar way, but the point is never reached when further advance is not possible. Ruts wear into the soul, and the worst of it is we may not know it; some exigency arises and then we are forced to get out of the repeated round."

Facts hitherto unknown were made known to Paul by "revelation" and his conversion was the result. We too will be forever without Christ unless He is met with and seen by Divine revelation. Neither can any proclaim Christ effectively unless from an inner consciousness and experience.

"The mystery of Christ" Paul speaks of understanding by "revelation", and God Himself is supermysterious but we may apprehend Him though we may not comprehend. "Things mysterious in nature which God created are mysterious like Himself."

"Christianity planted in the heart produces the flowers of righteousness, and the seed of Truth brings forth the blossoms of the Spirit." God incarnated Divinity in humanity that we might know God and have salvation, and Christ bore loneliness of separation from His Father that He might unseal the strings of redemeptive energy. "Don't put Christ out because you do not understand Him—it would be colossal folly. Touch Him by faith this morning and you will understand what Paul speaks of as "my knowledge in the mystery of Christ."

The annual thank-offering of the Women's Missionary Auxiliary of Grace Presbyterian church was held in the church parlors last week when the officers of the organization were 'At Home" to the women of the congregation who had each been personally invited to attend.

The response was very encouraging, and the rooms were made attractive with flowers, dainty teatables, and other accessories which added their quota to the success of the occasion.

The president, Mrs. (Rev.) G. S. Gervan, was in the chair and the usual business items received attention after which two excellent addresses were delivered by Mrs. McKenzie and Miss Dixon, of Peterborough. The latter spoke on the thank-offering, pointing out that "our thanks should be as fervent for mercies received, as our petitions for mercies asked," and one practical manner of expressing heart gratitude is by our money gifts.

The growth and progress of missionary enterprise in the Presbyterian church was the theme of Mrs. McKenzie's address, the chart depicting a tree with deep-set roots and wide-spreading branches, being a most impressive object lesson which fixed the facts firmly in the minds of her hearers.

A most enjoyable social hour was spent over the tea-cups before the gathering was dismissed. The financial response was satisfactory, and many supporters of the Auxiliary have yet to send in their contributions.

The Auxiliary in Millbrook has now reached its thirtieth birthday having been organized in 1894, and as the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church in Canada is this year celbrating its Golden Jubilee" after sixty years of effective service, the two facts received special recognition at the recent meeting. Mrs. J R. Eakins, who is one of the charter members, became a life member in honor of the occasion. Mrs. Eakins has given faithful service as secretary for several years and is generally recognized as one of the most dependable and helpful workers in the local Auxiliary.

Right Roverend Bishop J. F. Sweeney, of Toronto, conducted impressive confirmation services in the parish of Millbrook and Cavan on Sunday when forty-one candidates were received into church membership. Morning worship was held at St. John's church, Ida, when eleven candidates were presented for the "laying on of hands" which brought them into full membership with the church, seven at Christ church, Ballieboro, in the afternoon, and twenty-three at St. Thomas' church, Millbrook, in the evening, the candidates from Trinity Church (the Marsh) uniting with those here for the occasion.

White chrysanthemums were placed upon the altar in each church the Bishop visited and the services throughout the day were marked by a 'spirit of worship which is always implied by an immediate address to God, acknowledging His absolute supremacy, by prayer and praise, and by external expression of supreme regard for Him."

Mr. J. Dawson Fair of Toronto, was a visitor in town who called on a number of friends on Sunday. Mr. Fair is at present in Peterboro having relations in that city in connection with a Toronto firm.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Darling, and daughter, Betty, of Peterboro, were guests of Mrs. M. Staples, Cavan, and Mrs. E. S. Burnham, Millbrook on Sunday.

The annual meeting of the Bible Society will be held in the town hall on Monday, November 3rd, when Rev. J. D. Patterson, of All Saints' Peterboro will give an illustrated address on the work of the Society.

Rev. F. W. Howard preached in the Tabernacle Methodist church, Belleville, on Sunday, taking Rev. Mr. Kenny's services to permit the later having charge of the anniversary occasion in the Methodist church here.

Mr. L. H. Winslow spent last week-end with his daughter, Miss Audrey, who is attending the Bishop Strachan School, Toronto, remaining over on his return trip from the International Plowing Match at Brampton.

Mrs. F. W. Burnham, and daughter, Dorothy, of Peterborough, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Burnham, this week.

montigny Street. There is a school, I believe, Protestant, on Sanguinet Street, near St. Catherine."

"Do little boys and girls of 12 and 14 have to pass before these houses?"—"The children leaving school are not exposed so much to that danger. They are exposed to another. There are almost always around these schools men waiting for the children to lead them into vice."

Stopped on Streets.

"Have specifications been brought to your notice where young people were led astray?"—"I refer to the confidence given me by people with whom I come in contact as the head of the parish. People come to me with their troubles. Young men confide in me how they were drawn into disorderly houses. They are stopped on the street, asked for some information and when they have given it they are drawn into conversation from which they are finally induced to enter these houses. And I forgot to mention these houses are quite near to the University.

"Most of the people when I ask them to give up this sort of thing say they are doing it for a living and when I threaten them with the police they laugh at me. They say they have no fear of the police.

"I would not be ready to say it is entirely the fault of the police. It may be sometimes but there is also fault elsewhere. They they say it is not much use bringing certain cases before a particular court, because they are practically sure to have the case dismissed and they sometimes run a risk of losing their jobs.

"I do not think you can make vice entirely disappear from a big city. But you can combat it energetically and produce results, although at the end of years there will still unfortunately be vice left."

Suspension Demand.

Immediate suspension of Chief of Police Pierre Belanger, on the ground that he had given his evidence in "bad faith," was the demand made upon Mr. Justice Coderre yesterday by J. P. Lanctot, counsel for the petitioners for inquiry into the Montreal police affairs when the investigation was resumed yesterday afternoon.

This was only one sensation out of many, evidence being entered which charged the Police Chief with receiving money and gifts from the keeper of a disorderly house, with previously warning this woman of threatened raids and of borrowing money from his subordinates in office.

At one stage of the inquiry the evidence was of such a nature that Mr. Justice Coderre, investigating commissioner, requested the press representatives to refrain from reporting part of the testimony.

It was a day when the pitiless searchlight of publicity was turned on many of Montreal's ugliest features. With regard to the request for Chief Belanger's suspension, the presiding judge declared that he would reflect on the application overnight. The demand was grave, and his first impression was that the matter was one of difficulty in decision.

Mr. Lanctot's demand brought from Alban Germain, K.C., counsel for Chief Belanger, a strong retort, which, in turn, evoked further denunciation of the Chief that aroused the spectators to a demonstration of applause.

The Tag That Pins Them Down

SNYDER'S Sani-Bilt guarantee pins down the manufacturers of Sani-Bilt Living-Room Furniture to certain definite statements, for which we are responsible and from which we cannot get away.

One of these statements is that Snyder's Sani-Bilt Furniture is mothproof. When we say mothproof, we mean mothproof. We don't mean mothproof for a season. We mean that absolutely every particle of attraction for moths has been removed from Sani-Bilt Furniture. There is no other process that gives you absolute immunity from moths and no other upholstered furniture manufacturers in Canada have the right to use this process.

And we are furthermore pinned down. We guarantee sound and strong construction, and fresh, new, sanitary fillings (not renovated).

They Can't Get Away From It

Snyder's Sani-Bilt guarantee also pins down the manufacturers of all other furniture claimed as "mothproof". Is their furniture mothproof, or is it not mothproof? It is no use them saying it is the same as Sani-Bilt. There is no other process like the Sani-Bilt process. There is no use them saying it is "practically" mothproof or "mothproof for a certain length of time". Is it absolutely mothproof? Will the effect of their powders and sprays last as long as the furniture? Is it poisonous? Does it dry into dust which a vacuum cleaner sucks away? Or does it evaporate into the air like gasoline and its solutions? The Sani-Bilt process is non-poisonous, does not evaporate, is non-odorous, leaves no stain, cannot be weakened by any cleaning process.

Make Sure it is Sani-Bilt

When furniture dealers show you upholstered furniture, it is only fair to pin them down, also. Is it Sani-Bilt? Demand to see the guarantee. Read this guarantee and make sure it is the Sani-Bilt guarantee, and not an imitation or a mere evasion. The Sani-Bilt guarantee tag on every Sani-Bilt piece pins imitators and their selling agents down to absolute facts, just as it pins us down.

Leading dealers will show you Sani-Bilt Furniture to suit your taste, whatever the price you want to pay. If you have any difficulty, write us.

LOCAL ARTISTS MET FOR 2ND TIME TUESDAY

Extremely Interesting Address on Canadian Artists Delivered.

GROWTH OF ART.

Mrs. J. M. McCulloch, Charlotte street, Was Main Speaker of the Evening.

The second meeting of the season of the Art Study Club was held last evening at the home of Mrs. J. M. McCulloch, Charlotte Street, when an extremely interesting and illuminating paper on "Canadian Artists," was given by Mrs. McCulloch, who traced in graphic fashion the growth of Canadian art and gave a review of the work of the Dominion's artists.

Speaking of the first paintings that were brought into Canada, about half a century ago, when the military and governing bodies at Quebec considered it safe to commence adding to the beauty of their homes by importing books, musical instruments and pictures from the Old Land, Mrs. McGulloch spoke of the inception in 1880 of the first Art Gallery in Canada, by the then Governor-General, the Marquis of Lorne, and Princess Louise. In 1882, the National Gallery was founded, when an Act of Parliament placed in the hands of the Canadian Government a public exhibition of diploma pictures deposited by members of the Royal Canadian Academy in Ottawa. Colleges of Art were maintained later in Quebec and Manitoba, and from this beginning, the study of art gradually spread to embrace classes in all the public schools of Canada.

A review of the earlier artists of the Dominion was given, commencing with Cornelius Kreighoss, a German painter who lived in Toronto, Montreal and Quebec, from 1812 to 1872, and who painted the habitants. The painters of Quebec made a special study of the habitant, his life, customs and traditions, while those of Ontario had a different style, more nearly representing the national standard of art in the Dominion.

Before the Great War, it had been the habit for Old Country men coming to Canada to bring with them the customs and art of their land, and for Canadian artists to go to New York and Europe and become impregnated with foreign methods. After the war, painters were thrown back on their own country. "Possibly the most outstanding characteristic of Canadian art," said the speaker, "is youth. Youth, of course, denotes vigor, strength, freshness, buoyancy, courage and hope, but it may also denote immaturity, rashness, boldness, impetuosity and a little crudeness. Association will bring refinement without loss of character."

Mrs. McCulloch spoke of the preeminence of Canadian work at the recent Wembley Exhibition in England, and of the individuality manifested in Canadian art, which has developed a school of its own, when contrasted with the paintings from Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, which follow out the standards of the Old World. A criticism sometimes levelled at Canadian art that it followed that of Russia was explained by the similarity in the formation of the country and climatic conditions. Several complimentary press comments by British writers on Canadian work exhibited at Wembley were read, including one that spoke particularly of the individuality in Canadian painting, "the young artists painting their own country superbly, through their temperament, not literally, with bold, decorative landscapes, and emphasis of color, line and pattern. They stand on their own feet, revealing their own land with gay virility. This is the most vital group of paintings produced since the war, indeed, in the century."

Mrs. McCulloch spoke of Canadian artists, past and present, and particularly of the Group of Seven, referring to the honor recently bestowed on James Jackson, one of their number, whose paintings of Halifax Harbor has been purchased by the British Museum, the first Canadian work of art to be so honored. Mrs. McCulloch characterized as "the father of Canadian art" the late Tom Thompson (1877-1917), born in Owen Sound and largely self-taught. Several of the references were accompanied by illustrations of the artists' work, both originals and copies.

Reference was made to the work of a local artist, Miss Mamie McCarthy, and the meeting expressed regret at her present illness.

Canadian sculptors were also mentioned, with special emphasis of the work of a Peterboro sculptress, Miss Katherine Wallis. The meeting, on conclusion of the paper, decided to inaugurate a fund to provide a suitable pedestal for Miss Wallis' statue of "Mercury Charmed With His Own Invention."

The next meeting of the Study Club will be held at the home of Mrs. W. H. Meredith, when a paper on Botticelli will be given.

AN OPEN MEETING.

An open meeting of the Prince of Wales' Home and School Association was held last evening in the school hall, when entrance certificates were presented successful scholars. Mr. A. Mowat occupied the chair and the diplomas were presented by Mr. J. M. Greene, who spoke briefly to the students. Five-minute talks were given by two of the successful scholars, Jack Dobbin speaking on School Life and Kenneth McDonald on Cadet Work. Rev. J. D. Paterson of All Saints' Church also addressed the pupils on educational lines. A musical programme included instrumental selections by Mildred Hetherington, Margaret Gollop, Helen Turner, Mary Comstock and Marjorie Gadd, a song by Marion Ralston and a reading by Addie Wright.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY.

Breakfast — Halves of grapefruit, cooked whole wheat cereal ,liver and bacon, creamed potatoes, toasted corn muffins, milk, coffee.

Dinner — Baked fish, shoe string potatoes, baked squash, cabbage and pepper salad, whole wheat bread and butter Lemon jelly cake, milk coffee.

Of course, a child under school age should not be allowed to eat liver, but he may have some bacon and potatoes with his cereal and toasted muffins and milk. He should be given from four to six tablespoons of grapefruit juice at least half an hour before he eats his breakfast. The juice may be slightly sweetened.

Neither will a child of four or five eat the shoe string potatoes for his dinner. But the fish, squash, a little very finely minced cabbage seasoned with lemon juice, whole wheat bread and butter, small piece of cake and milk furnish an ample dinner for him.

He may eat some of the peach salad for his luncheon if the nuts are used sparingly in his serving.

Peach Salad.

Four large peaches, 1 package of Neufchatel cheese, 1-3 cup shredded almonds, 4 tablespoons of French dressing, 1-2 cup whipping cream.

Pare peaches and cut in halves. Remove stones. Fill cavity with cheese. Put peach on a bed of lettuce hearts. Make a French dressing, using lemon juice in place of vinegar. Whip the cream until stiff and add to dressing. Mash peach with dressing and sprinkle with almonds. Cottage cheese can be used in place of Neufchatel and is more desirable for children. The whipped cream dressing must be served as soon as made.

Lemon Jelly Cake.

One-half cup of butter, 2 cups of granulated sugar, 3 eggs, 3 cups of flour, 1 cup of milk, 2 teaspoons of baking powder, 1 teaspoon lemon extract, 1-4 teaspoon salt.

Cream butter and slowly beat in sugar. Sift 1-2 cup of the flour and beat smooth. Add eggs well beaten. Beat well. Mix and sift flour, baking powder, and salt. Add alternately with milk to mixture. Add flavouring and turn into four layer cake tins. Bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Put together with lemon jelly.

HELD FOWL SUPPER.

Interesting Event at Trinity Methodist Church.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Methodist Church held a very successful fowl supper in the Reid Street Hall last evening, with a record attendance of about 350 people, that taxed the resources of the commissary department in supplying their wants. An excellent supper was served from tables decorated in the black and yellow of the Hallowe'en season, with pumpkins containing fruit, marigolds and autumn leaves as garniture.

Mrs. W. H. Lytle, president of the Ladies' Aid Society had charge of the arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Geo. Johnson and Mrs. James Lillico, as general convenors, and a bevy of energetic ladies.

A pleasing feature of the supper was the presence of Mrs. H. McClennan, who was celebrating her 76th birthday, and reserved a table for 26 guests where the centrepiece was a large birthday cake.

A programme of music consisted of selections during the supper, rendered by the Trinity Orchestra, instrumental numbers by Mrs. G. N. Moncrief and Miss Lily Brown, and readings by the little Misses Grey.

Mrs. G. H. King and Mrs. C. C. Cragg has charge of the musical programme.

G. F. BAKER IS 85 YEARS OLD, IS WORTH 300

By GENE COHN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Nine a.m. each day—with the exception of vacation periods—there climbs sprylly up the steps of the First National Bank Building at No. 2 Wall street a ruddy faced man of 85.

Wrinkles have so formed beneath his eyes as to give the impression of a steady twinkle.

He generally wears a loosely tied bow knot tie of dark blue or black material which appears to have been tied hurriedly or by one who never had mastered the art of the bow knot.

He swings a cane, but uses it only infrequently as an aid in walking. His greetings are for the most part smilingly curt.

Going to his office he personally looks over the mail set aside by his secretary. He has no idea of retiring.

His is George Fisher Baker, the "Sphinx of Wall Street," one of America's five richest men, and yet practically unknown to the public at large. His fortune is placed at about $300,000,000.

Less is known about him than probably any other money king of America. Not even in the heart of America's financial centre is his early life story known.

Extremely abrupt of speech, his public uterances have been merely axiomatic references to integrity in business life.

"Whatever distinction I may have is due to my business experience," is his modest way of answering questions about his success.

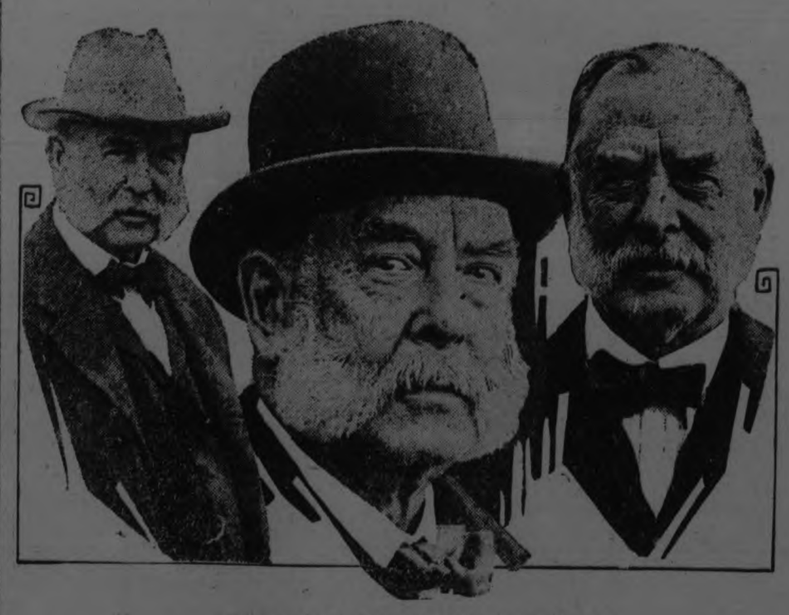
But some idea of how he did it may be gained from the following chart of his habits:

For half a century or more he arrived at the office at 8.45 in the morning, unless enjoying a holiday.

For 60 years he cerebrated his birthday by working.

Until he reached the age of 70 he took little or no time for outdoor games.

It was after his 70th birthday that he began to "dissipate" and took up a golf stick and began to use tobacco. Now he is an ardent golf fan, but plays not for health so much as for competitive sport.



GEORGE F. BAKER IN VARIOUS MOODS.

He plays a 12-hole game without particular effort, thus going John D. Rockefeller several better. He is lavish with public gifts, having distributed some $12,000,000 in six years.

He has given $2,000,000 for the foundation of a Graduate School of Business Administration at Cornell.

His own business ethics he sums up with usual brevity: "It has been my ambition in life to conduct it so that I might gain the esteem of my fellows."

And he has said no more publicly on the subject.

The "Wall Street Sphinx" started life as a $2 a week grocery boy at Troy, N.Y. He later became a night watchman in a Troy Bank at $5 and then became a bank examiner.

Today he is director of many railroads, and official in numerous banks and security houses.

But about him always is a veil of impenetrable silence.

THE WORLD'S RICHEST MEN.

Here, according to conservative financial authority, are the world's richest individuals. You may be surprised to find that you have never heard of some of them.

United States: Henry Ford, $550,000,000; John D. Rockefeller, $550,000,000; T. B. Walker, Minnesota, $200,000,000; George Fisher Baker, $300,000,000, and J. B. Duke, $100,000,000.

Abroad: Sir Basil Zaharoff, a Greek, owner of Monte Carlo and the mystery man of the money world, $300,000,000, or thereabouts; Barons Mitzui and K. Iwasaki, of Japan, $100,000,000 each; Duke of Westminster, $90,000,000; The Gackevar of Baroda, $100,000,000.

Until his death Hugo Stinnes, of Germany, was well up in the list. These, it should be noted, are personal and not family fortunes, such as the House of Morgan, the Vanderbilts and scores of others.

MEETING RURAL COUNTY DEANERY

Meeting Was Held in the School House at Lakefield on Monday and Tuesday.

LAKEFIELD, October 29. — A meeting of the Rural Deanery of Peterborough was held in the village on Monday and Tuesday of this week. The Rural Dean, Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton, of Norwood, presided at the meetings.

On Monday afternoon a meeting in the School House of the church, at which Mr. R. W. Allen, Diocesan Finance Commissioner, addressed the meeting on the subject of church finance.

At evensong, which was held at 8 p.m., Dr. R. C. Blagrave, vicar of St. John's, Peterborough, gave a forceful sermon on the Church of England, its place in our religious and national life, speaking of the continuity of the Church, which is a solid foundation which marks the difference between the Church, and a mere movement which owes most of its popularity to advertising.

The Deanery continued on Tuesday ,beginning with a celebration of Holy Communion at 8 a.m. and with a business session at 10 a.m.

Those attending were: Rev. C. A. G. Spence of Apsley, Rev. G. C. Clarke of Campbellford, Rev. Stanley of Havelock, Rev. W. Cox of Lakefield, Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton of Norwood, Rev. J. Douglas Paterson of All Saints', Peterborough, Rev. J. Lancaster Hughes of St. George's, Peterborough, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, of St. John's, Peterborough, Rev. G. J. Bousfield of St. Luke's, Peterborough, Rev. E. Gardiner of the Young's Point Mission, and Mr. R. W. Allen of Toronto.

After the formal sessions were finished ,the Rural Dean made a witty little speech and presented Mrs. (Rev.) Cox with a handsome fern as a memento of a happy occasion and as a slight mark of the appreciation they all felt for the hospitality which she had shown.

Mrs. Cox made a suitable reply.

The social event of the week is the Cinderella dance in the Lakefield House unde rthe auspices of St. John's Church, which will be held on Thursday evening. A novel feature will be the cafeteria refreshments.

The Citizens' Band expect to give an open-air concert on Sunday afternoon, if the weather is favourable, which wil lgive the citizens an opportunity of hearing the band. This is an organisation of which Lakeleld has ever reason to feel proud, as it is only organised about eight months and the development has been amazing.

Personals.

Mr. Francis Condon, who is attending the Peterborough Normal School, spent the week-end with his mother, Mrs. Francis Condon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter returned on Tuesday from McCracken's Landing, where they spent the past five months.

Mr. Lorne Webster, of Peterborough, was in the village on Tuesday.

Mr. Peter Lumsden was the guest of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie for the week-end. Mr. Lumsden is an old boy of The Grove, and this is his first visit for a number of years. He was through the Great War, serving in France with both Canadian and Imperial troops, and later in Russia and Mesopotamia. Since the Armistice was signed, he spent several years in Bagdad and Damascus.

Miss Bessie Madill, of the Peterborough Normal School, spent the week-end in the village.

A JUBILEE MEETING.

Women's Missionary Society Of St. Andrew's Church Had Meeting.

The W.M.S. of St. Andrew's held the jubilee thankoffering meeting in the Sunday School on Tuesday, 28th October. Mrs. John, president of the Society, and hostess of Circle Seven, which was in charge of this meeting, presided.

The meeting, which was largely attended, opened by the singing of a hymn and prayer.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were adopted as read. Mrs. Donaldson gave the report of The Messenger, and Mrs. White gave a report on the library. Mrs. Hugh Niven read the Scripture lesson. Miss Bertha Hill sang "The Lord My Shepherd Is" and "My Dear Soul" in most pleasing style. Miss Alice Cocks acted as accompanist.

Mrs. Shirley gave a short review of the St. Andrew's W.M.S. since it was inaugurated in 1889. At that time there were just fourteen members. Miss Rae, 308 Stewart Street, who is a charter member, was present at this ,the jubilee meeting, and is the only charter member now living.

An address read by little Miss Dorothy Henderson was presented to Mrs. Kerr, past president, Mrs. Lang, president of Home Missions, Miss Rae, Mrs. Matheson, and Mrs. Lees.

Mrs. John then presented Miss Rae with the beautiful book, "Jubilee Story." Miss Craw then read letters of greeting from past presidents and officers who are now carrying on the work in other fields—Mrs. Potter, Montreal, past president, Mrs. Rowland, Minneapolis, past president, Mrs. Rollins, Renfrew, past president, Mrs. Chisholm, Toronto, Mrs. Sills, Niagara Falls, and Mrs. Tully, Vancouver.

Mrs. Kerr and Mrs. Lees, convenors of Circle Three, then presented Miss Rae with a life membership certificate for her faithfulness to the society.

Mr. Gordon, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, was the speaker of the afternoon. His address dealt with the "Forward Look" of the W.M.S. and the work of foreign missions, ending his remarks with the little poem:

Toil Away.

Toil away and set the stone
That shall stand
When you are gone.
Ask not that another see
The meaning of your masonry.
Grind the gem and dig the well,
For what? For whom?
I cannot tell.
The stone may mark a boundary line.
The well may flow, the gem may shine.
Be it wage enough for you
To shape the well
And set them true.
Of the future who can tell?
Work, my friend, and so farewell.

The meeting closed by all repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Mrs. Alison and Mrs. George J. Johnson acted as Receiving Committee.

The thankoffering was $217.60.

A social half-hour was then spent, when little Miss Betty Grier, grandniece of one of the four ladies who first organised the society in Montreal in 1864, lit the sixty candles in significance of the great light lit sixty years ago, and which is growing brighter year by year, decorating the lovely birthday cake, which was cut by Miss Edmonds and Miss McClelland, of the Elizabeh Bell Chapter.

Mrs. Jack Tremain acted as the social convenor.

CUTTER MOJAVE RETURNS

U. S. Coast Guard Steamer Forced To Turn Back.

NOME, Alaska, Oct. 29. — The cutter Mojave, of the United States coast guard, which attempted to penetrate the Arctic Ocean to rescue four men from the gasoline schooner Silver Wave, which was carried away in the ice, has turned back, according to word received here yesterday.

The Mojave, which went from here for Behring Straits, forced her way for many miles through five inches of ice, it was related, but was unable to approach the point, 180 miles north of the Strait, where the Silver King was last seen, after being caught in the ice as she was hurrying back from the last trip of the season on her mail run to Kotzebue Sound, an arm of the Arctic.

OTTAWA, Oct. 29. — (Canadian Press).—Appointment of C. S. Tompkins of the inspectors of the Royal Bank of Canada to a position of Government Inspector of Banks will, it is expected, be announced following the next meeting of the cabinet on Friday. The appointment has not yet been made officially but it is understood that Mr. Tompkins has been offered the post and has accepted it. The position was created at the last session of parliament.

FIVE WERE KILLED.

Gas Tank on C.P.R. Passenger Train Exploded.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 29.—(Canadian Press).—J. L. Mackie, British Columbia legislator, Peter Veregin, head of the Doukhoboro Colony of British Columbia, and three unidentified persons were killed to-day when a gas tank exploded on the Canadian Pacific railway passenger train at West of Farron Station, British Columbia, according to word received here. Of those injured, Harry Bishop, of Nelson, B.C., is not expected to recover. The injured are being cared for in hospitals at Grand Forks and Nelson, and a complete list will be available later.

PETER SMITH TO REMAIN IN JAIL

Request For Bail Was Refused By Chief Justice Latchford.

TORONTO, October 29 (Canadian Press). — Peter Smith, former Provincial Treasurer of Ontario, will remain in jail pending the hearing of his appeal from the decision of Chief Justice R. M .Meredith, under which he was sentenced to serve three years in Portsmouth Penitentiary following his conviction on charges of conspiracy in connection with the sale of succession duty free bonds, and jointly with Aemilius Jarvis, Sr., to pay a fine of $600,000.

T. S. Lennox, K.C., counsel for Smith, appeared before Chief Justice Latchford at Osgoode Hall this morning, and made a request for bail, but that His Lordship refused.

At the same time, he promised to do everything posible to facilitate the hearing of the appeal next week.

W. N. Tilley opposed the application on instructions from the Attorney-General.

Some question arose as to the attitude of Jarvis when the question of fixing the day for appeal was considered.

Jarvis has yet filed no notice of appeal and has given no indication of the course he intends to pursue.

His Lordship said he would fix the day irrespective of whether Jarvis appeals or not.

When Mr. Lennox stated that Chief Justice Meredith had gone out of his way to secure conviction, Chief Justice Latchford disapproved, and counsel withdrew the remark, stating, "I should not have said that. But the Chief Justice had strong views as he always has."

Mr. Lennox, speaking of Bail, said a hundred thousand dollars could be arranged, but Chief Justice Latchford replied: "Personally, I am very much opposed to the granting of bail after conviction, unless the circumstances are exceptional."

Counsel asked that the standing of the accused be considered, and His Lordship then stated he would do everything to facilitate a hearing next week. He told Mr. Lennox the appeal would be confined to questions of law only.

1,000 MINERS STRIKE.

Workers in Ten Mines Will Be Affected When Miners Walk Out on November 1.

EDMONTON, Oct. 29.— (Canadian Press.)—One thousand miners, members of Edmonton and district Federation of Miners, will strike on November 1 unless operators rescind proposals calling for thirteen per cent. reduction in wages paid to contract men. The Federation, which fixed the date for the strike at a meeting at Beverley, centre of mine field last night, demands acceptance by operators of award of recent conciliation board.

Workers in ten mines are affected.

MANY WITNESSES HEARD IN CASE ACCIDENT CLAIM

DENY DUST AND FOG.

Passenger Was Afraid Bacon Was Too Close to the Ditch.

Almost all the evidence for the plaintiff was completed at the Fall Assizes yesterday in the case in which Cecilia Rogers claims $15,000 damages from Walter T. Belleghem for injuries said to have resulted from the defendant's negligent driving of his car while intoxicated.

The Fall Assizes, now in progress, are presided over by Hon. Mr. Justice Orde. V. J. McElderry represents the plaintiff and Gordon and O'Brien are acting for the defendant. In the absence through illness of Court Crier Walter Wood, the position was filled yesterday by Sergeant A. Thomas of the city police force.

Driving the Car.

Clarence Bacon said he was driving the car at the time of the accident. He had driven the car for two years. The other two, seated in the front seat, did not bother him in operating the car. He was travelling 20 or 22 miles an hour and had at no time exceeded that speed.

Mr. McElderry—Where did you first see Belleghem's car

Mr. Bacon —At the top of the hill. I saw Belleghem's car turn out to pass the other car. He stayed on the west side of the road all the way down..

Q.—Did he not change his position ?

A.—No.

Q.—At the time of the accident where was the car that Belleghem was passing?

A.—It was silghtly behind Belleghem.

Q.—How fast were you going?

A.—Just before the accident I was travelling about 4 or 5 miles an hour.

How was your car facing after you were hit?

My car was facing east, with the rear wheels of the car in the ditch. Belleghem's car was facing north. He sat in his car for about five minutes after the accident occurred. Belleghem came over to me and did a lot of talking and wanted to shake hands with me.

Were your lights on dim or bright?

Bright.

Cross examiantion by Mr. Gordon.

How much did the car cost?

You made a claim on Mr. Belleghem for $1,500 damages?

Yes.

You, with two years' experience, tell me whether you think it a wise way to be driving with three passengers in the front seat.

I don't know.

When did you pull down from 22 miles an hour to 4 or 5 miles an hour ?

When Belleghem was coming down the hill I decreased my speed.

Q.—There is two feet of grass?

No.

You had clear lenses with 21 candle power lights?

Yes.

The lights on the car had both been used for 2 years?

Yes.

Was there anything improper in Belleghem wanting to shake hands with you ?

I do not think it was a proper time to shake hands.

Mr. McElderry—24 feet.

Mr. McElderry —What is your weight?

About 135 pounds.

Could you have done anything more to avoid the accident had you been alone?

No.

Clayton Telford told of seeing the cars and hearing the crash. There was no fog or mist, but there was a little dust. On reaching the scene of the accident Mr. Telford saw Belleghem in his car. He got out and appeared stupid.

Cross-examined by Mr. Gordon, the witness said Saturday night is a busy time on Chemong road. He was travelling, he thought, at 14 or 18 miles an hour or might have been going only 12 miles. When three cars passed him about 50 yards apart, Belleghem's car, he thought was the first, and the three cars were travelling twice as fast as his.

Constable's Evidence.

County Constable S. R. Pearson said he was called to the scene of the accident where he found the cars locked together, surrounded by a large crowd. Bacon's car was facing east and Belleghem's north. The front left wheel of Belleghem's car was broken off and was nearly between the two front wheels of Bacon's car.

Fifteen minutes after his arrival Mr. Belleghem returned. In the meantime the constable found a broken bottle in the bottom of Belleghem's car. There was whiskey in the bottle. Belleghem had been drinking and was quite talkative. "I had satisfied myself he was under the influence of liquor," Constable Pearson said, "and took him to the police station."

Mr. Pearson told Mr. Gordon, in cross-examination, that he learned in the last trial that Belleghem was given morphine and spirits by a doctor, but he would not say that caused the condition he found Belleghem in.

Thomas Ephgrave said he was travelling towards Chemong on July 5 when two automobiles passed him pretty fast, a mile from the scene of the accident. The dust was so bad that Mr. Ephgrave had to stop. He had been travelling 20 miles an hour and the other cars were going about twice as fast.

Later he came to the place of the accident and saw the same cars in the ditch. Someone told him, "You have to go on; it's nothing serious."

Answering Mr. Gordon, the witness said he did not see a third car in the string that passed him.

Charles Mathias identified photographs taken by him at the scene of the accident on October 3. The foliage on an elm tree at the foot of the hill was not gone at that time.

Also in the Car.

Marie Courneyea said she was seated in the front seat of the car at the time of the collision. There was no fog and the night was clear. At Finlay's Hill Bacon's car was travelling at a moderate rate of speed. She saw Belleghem's car try to pass a second car on the way down the hill.

The occupants of the car were quite comfortable and there was no interference with the driver.

"I didn't find it crowded at all," Miss Courneyea told Mr. Gordon in cross-examination. "I didn't notice any dust."

Bacon speeded up to go up the hill, but applied the brakes just before the crash and slowed down. "I was watching the side of the road," she said, "afraid we were going into the ditch. Bacon was driving on the grass by the roadside."

Car Smashed.

W. S. Howson, proprietor of the Chevrolet garage, said Bacon's car was practically useless after the accident. The radiator, wheels and other parts were broken when the front was driven in. The lights were 21 candle power, regular equipment. The car weighed 850 pounds, and Belleghem's weighed around 3,000 pounds.

Answering Mr. Gordon, the witness said a Chevrolet travelling 22 miles an hour could be stopped on Finlay's hill in five feet.

May Have Told Truth.

Dr. J. B. Mann said he was called to the police station to examine Belleghem at 1 on Sunday morning. Belleghem had liquor, but was not intoxicated. He was under evident strain, but was in full possession of his faculties.

In cross-examination by Mr. Gordon, Dr. Mann said Belleghem appeared to be under nervous strain and was not in a position to give a coherent description of what had taken place, but accurate. "What he would say would be essentially true," Dr. Mann said. The tendency under such circumstances is for a man's mind to operate more quickly than he can give expression to the thoughts, and his speech is incoherent."

Belleghem showed no signs of having morphine in any substantial dose, Dr. Mann said. Personally he would not give either morphia or liquor in such a case, but a sedative.

Mr. Gordon: "There are lots of people who would rather go to a physician who gave different treatment."

The experience of the accident might have confused Belleghem's thoughts so that he could not give a connected narrative, although a true one. His story might be exaggerated.

Hon. Justice Order: "Aren't a man's statements when he is dazed more likely to be accurate?"

"Yes. They might not be connected but would be essentially accurate."

Mr. Gordon— This witness does not say he is a specialist in nervous derangements.

Hon. Justice Order: "You were examining him as though he were."

Eye Was Destroyed.

Dr. C. C. Cragg, eye specialist, said he found a piece of sharp glass inside Miss Rogers' eyelid. This had cut and destroyed the eye so that there was no perception of light. On the following morning he removed the eye and she is now wearing a glass eye. Glass eyes must be replaced yearly, Dr. Cragg said, at a cost of about $10 every time. It is sometimes difficult to match eyes and some must be brought from New York.

The normal condition of sense of sight is through two eyes. The use of two eyes gives a wider field, a better sense of distance and perspective and a better focus. The loss of one eye shuts of one-sixth of the vision, or 35 degrees of the normal 180 degrees.

In cross-examination, Dr. Cragg said there is greater strain on a clerk than on a factory employee through the loss of an eye.

Fred W. Jopling corroborated Mr. Telford's evidence, but said there was a lot of dust and the elm tree would obscure an approaching car from view on the hill.

Answering Mr. Gordon the witness said that probably the lights of both approaching cars would be hidden by the tree.

No Unusual Dust."

F. H. Flaherty, who was coming from Chemong on July 5 at 22 miles an hour, thought Bacon's car was travelling at about the same speed. He heard a crash, found there had been an accident and took Miss Rogers and Miss Courneyea to Bacon's home in Peterborough. There was no fog and no dust to bother him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Gordon, Mr. Flaherty said he saw lights of cars coming down the hill just before the crash. There was no more dust than usual. About fifteen cars were on the road, that he saw.

J. G. Drummond drove Constable Pearson to the scene of the accident and saw Belleghem there. Belleghem was excited and his breath smelled of liquor.

Produced Plans.

Oliver Smith, M.E.I.C., Ontario line surveyor, of Lindsay, identified plans made of the scene of the accident and described them to His Lordship and to the jury. The road he said is 24 feet wide between the grass border and 27½ feet between ditches. The edge of the road is 1 foot 7 inches from the ditch to the west side of the road and the ditch is 1 foot 7 inches deep.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 29—The Young People's League of the Methodist church was held in the auditorium of the church on Monday night. S. A. Maguire, president occupied the chair.

Miss A Simpson, fourth vice-president had a splendid program as follows: Scripture reading, Miss H. Hollenby; solo, Miss Hoover; reading, Miss R. Hollenby, and a splendid address by Professor Mayne of Albert College, Belleville. His subject was "The Standards of Living." We measure our lives, not by years but by what we have achieved and accomplished. What level in life do we hne up in? Our worth in life is not how much we own but how much of good influence and high ideals do we bring into the lives of others.

We want men and women of conviction who count for something really worth while in life and those who will commit themselves to great causes.

A very hearty applause showed the appreciation of this earnest address.

Rev. G. C. and Mrs. Clarke, Church street and Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Free, were in Toronto last week for the baptism of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Free's little daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Clarke are the godfather and godmother of the little one.

Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Pearse and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Trecise at Port Hope.

Miss Clemena Ivey, who teaches school at Mather's corners, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ivey, Havelock Road.

Mrs. Richard Fairman and Miss Jessie Wilcox of Hastings spent Saturday with friends in Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Collins of Hastings spent Sunday with Mr. Collins' sister, Mrs. John A. Mitchell, Havelock Road. Mrs. Mitchell who sprained her ankle very badly a short time ago is slowly improving but is still unable to press any weight on her foot.

Mrs. Curtis and Mrs. Richards of Warkworth are visiting Mrs. L. B. Glover, Booth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross McLaren and daughter Peggy of Melrose who attended Miss Dickson's wedding on Saturday and visited Mrs. McLaren's mother, returned to their home on Sunday.

Miss Eleanor Ferris, Saskatoon avenue and Miss Florence Thomas, Booth street spent the week-end with Mrs. H. Hillier in Peterboro.

RAILWAY HEAD GAVE ADDRESS

Earnings of the Canadian National May Be As Good As Last Year.

CORNWALL, Oct. 29.—A prediction that given even ordinary luck the net earnings of the Canadian National Railways for the current year would not be less than those of 1923 was made by Sir Henry W. Thornton, chairman and president, in an address delivered before the Boards of Trade of Prescott and Cornwall yesterday afternoon and evening. Sir Henry based his assertion upon the fact that while there had been heavy and steady declines in gross earnings on all parts of the system, these declines had been met with heavier reductions in the working expenses.

The address at Prescott was made at noon before the Board of Trade at a banquet held there, and the speech at Cornwall was delivered in the evening when Sir Henry was the guest of honor at a Board of Trade banquet which proved to be one of the most successful functions of its kind held in the city this year. In character at least both speeches were identical in tone and their reception in both cities was enthusiastic.

This year the gross revenues of the Canadian National Railways have been falling off by leaps and bounds, said Sir Henry. The gross earnings to the end of September showed a decrease of about eight million dollars. The gross earnings in September alone showed a decrease of $2,300,000, but working expenses during the same month were decreased by more than $2,600,000, so that the net revenues for September showed an increase of about $300,000.

Up to October 1, the net revenues of the system are about $800,000 less than they were a year ago, but I believe we will make good that amount before the end of the year, and while we will have a reduction in gross revenue for the year of from 12 to 15 millions, we will cut down our expenses to such an extent that we will offset that loss of revenue and end the year with net earnings of not less than last year. We will not make the thirty millions we set as our objective for this year, but we hope to do as well as we did last year.

While dealing with the financial situation, Sir Henry referred to the relationship of the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railways. Our relationship, said Sir Henry, is limited to a friendly co-operation and to a competition that will be only a competition in good works.

To the audiences in both cities Sir Henry dwelt upon the advantages they enjoy from their locations in the matter of facilities, railroad, highway, water and their proximity to the United States. Prescott, he believed, would eventually become a city of importance and wealth, and Cornwall, he was convinced, would advance more rapidly once conditions became normal. He alluded to the St. Lawrence power and deep waterway development, and ventured the opinion that it is inevitable that the Great Lakes and the ocean shall be connected by a deep draught waterway.

Immigration Questions.

He again expressed his opinion that immigration is the only solution to the handicap under which Canada is laboring, and he took advantage of the opportunities to stress the importance of having some one big figure placed in charge of an immigration policy for the Dominion, and of confederating the various agencies which are endeavoring to promote immigration at the present time.

Sir Henry said there is no Minister of Immigration in Canada. It is true the Minister of Finance divides his time between the two duties, but his time is so taken up with the administration of financial affairs that he has little time to give to immigration. We will not and we cannot even hope to progress as we should until there is a captain to the ship.

I hope the Government will see its way clear to deal with this most important subject and to appoint a man, a big man, to give his whole time to this problem which, to my mind, is the greatest individual problem of the nation. We will never get on with this immigration problem until such action is taken.

I have been told by Margaret Bondfield that after she had talked with Labor leaders in Britain and Canada, she had not found Labor opposed to immigration.

FEED YOUR CHILDREN UPON GHOST CEREALS.

—if you will, but a farmer would laugh at you if you told him to feed them to his live stock, for he would know that live stock will soon die if fed upon them exclusively. Yet your children have not half the resistance of horses and cows. Then why feed them foods that will kill horses and cows?

Ghost cereals is the name science applies to certain unsubstantial cereal foods whose chief claim for your attention is flavor and ease of serving. Now would you not rather buy real foods, especially for your children, than to buy these fancy packages which, without milk, are hardly foods at all? Certainly you would.

Well, Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is precisely such a real food. Science proves that it is the darker, rougher parts of the grains that nourish and build sound and vital health. Roman Meal has the dark parts of three whole grains with bran, used in proportions to make a balanced human food. Beef contains 592 food units to the pound: Roman Meal contains over 1,600 food units to the pound. Prevents indigestion positively relieves constipation. A truly wonderful food. You ought to try Roman Meal. At grocers.

Why Not You?

When millions now attain so much by fighting film on teeth

Careful people, the world over, use a new teeth cleaning method. You see the results in whiter teeth in every circle now.

It means new beauty, new safety, new delights. It means to children new protection against troubles you have suffered.

Let this free test prove the benefits it brings.

Film mars beauty

That cloud on teeth is film. At first the film is viscous. You can feel it now. Soon it discolors, forming those dingy coats.

No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats it, so the coats may long remain.

Film holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Easy to combat

Now that film is easy to combat. Dental science has found two methods. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring.

These methods have proved effective in many tests. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Leading dentists the world over have long advised its use. Now careful people of some 50 nations employ this modern method.

Results you see and feel

Pepsodent brings conspicuous results. It does more than fight film. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, to better neutralize mouth acids. It multiplies the starch digestant in saliva, to better digest starch deposits on teeth.

Present the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

The results of the ten-day test will delight and convince you. Cut out coupon now.

Start Today

Then watch and see what changes this test can bring to teeth. They will amaze and delight you.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

PATERNALISM IN LEGISLATION IS AN OLD CHARGE

Other Provinces as Well as Ontario Have Their Troubles in This Line.

WAIL FROM WEST

Paternalism in legislation in Ontario is sometimes deplored by those who come directly within the radius of the laws designed possibly for the welfare of the greater number, but operating sometimes to the harassment of those concerned in their enforcement. However, other Provinces have their troubles in this line as well. From the West comes a wail voiced by the Alberta retailers who are protesting a recent Provincial order-in-Council that prohibited sale of flavoring extracts, except through a liquor vendor. One Calgary grocer, recording the banishment of orange, lemon and peppermint extracts from his shelves, says: "They appear to be legislating us out of business in every way they can." In Medicine Hat, at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, a strong protest was voiced against the order, particularly as it affects lemon extract, one of their reasons being: "Because this legislation is totally unnecessary and we can see no adequate reason for it, and even in the United States no man has yet thought of this means to destroy the comfort, enjoyment and profit of the taxpayer."

In Ontario regulations with regard to these extracts are not so drastic. The purchaser of bottles of flavoring follows the procedure adopted by the buyer of poison and signs his or her name in a book. Only one two-ounce bottle may be purchased at one time. The compound flavoring extracts, according to a local retailer, contain little or no alcohol, but some of the pure extracts are ninety per cent. alcohol, and, as an observer remarked, "you wouldn't need a grasshopper to get a kick out of that."

Regulations with regard to grading of eggs, which have slackened up recently, are again tightening about the feet of the unfortunate retailers, who are obliged to cast an enquiring eye on every batch of hen fruit that comes their way, instead of taking them all on trust, as in the good old days when housewives were supposed to be able to tell whether an egg was still only an egg or whether it was well on the way to being a chicken.

The first of this month saw the beginning also of new regulations governing importations of dried fruits, in which sulphurous acid is used as a bleaching medium. The new regulations, as sent out by the Department of Health, are as follows:

"On and after October first, it will be necessary to detain shipments of dried fruits (apricots, peaches, pears and apples) until samples taken from these have been examined and reported upon by the Dominion analyst. All shipments, samples from which are found to contain more than five parts of sulphurous acid per two thousand of samples, will be refused entry into Canada through customs."

The department explains: "It is well recognized that excessive amounts of sulphites are injurious to health and injury may result from the continued use of foods containing large quantities. The limit set for dried fruits is higher than for other foods, for the reason that in the ordinary processes of washing, soaking and stewing, a considerable amount of the sulphur is expelled. Imported fruits, such as apples, pears, peaches and apricots have been found to contain sulphite equivalent to from one to ten parts of sulphur dioxide per 2,000 parts dried fruit. Where very large amounts of sulphite are found, indications point to the fruit being either improperly dried, handled in an unsanitary way, or to have been dangerously near to spoilage at some time. It is felt that the regulations will ensure not only protection to consumers from the standpoint of health but will prevent the inferior grades from being dumped into our markets."

"The artifices of man to change nature's products by artificial means are various, but danger appears to lurk in some of them. A writer to one of the Toronto papers last week deplored the "pollution" of pure drinking water by quantities of chlorine, which, he said, acted as a mild type of poison to many systems. In the above instance, we have the Government stepping in to protect us against too much sulphite in our dried fruits. Then, we have the energetic fruit dealers who impart an artificial glaze to their table apples by the use of some varnishing medium, oranges and lemons have their peels impregnated with a gas used to color the otherwise pale skins, celery stalks are bleached white, and butter is colored artificially. The wheat in much white bread, we are told, has become so denatured and refined that instead of being the staff of life it has become a menace and the primary cause of many of the cancerous conditions so prevalent at the present time.

FABLES ON HEALTH

There was a nerve specialist in Anytown who was fond of telling a story about a woman who came to him for consultation.

When she had been a child, the psychiatrist learned, she developed the habit of "getting sick" whenever there was anything hard to be tackled at school.

On the occasion of a particular arithmetic quiz the child realized that she had been negligent in her studies and was likely to "not pass." So she made an excuse to her mother. Three months before this child had been quite ill. Memory of this illness and its escapes from duties occurred to her and she pretended to be again troubled.

It worked. She escaped.

Now at this period of her life the "attack" was intentional and premeditated. But continuous use of the same device to get out of perplexing problems resulted in the "sickness" being registered by the "unconscious mind." In later years the sickness would bob up handily whenever any difficulty was encountered. By this time the woman did not realize that the whole thing was not sickness at all, but a form of defense built up through the years and now seeming to be a reality.

Such cases are numerous and should cause parents to watch carefuly the actions of their children lest they develop conditions similar to that here described.

"My land! All of us?"

"Yes, of course. There are several men detailed for that purpose. Well, Miss Raynor, I don't see that we can learn anything more here."

With the book on poisons, carefully wrapped to preserve possible finger-print clues, he went downstairs, Miss Raynor accompanying him.

They found that in their absence a newcomer had appeared, who brought with him a new element of mystery.

In the living-room, addressing himself to Nan, was a young man of, perhaps, thirty or so. He was tall, dark and lean—a man of fine face and figure, but with crafty black eyes that darted here and there, seeming to read the attitudes of the others.

Orville Kent, in attendance on his sister, was also listening to the announcements the stranger was making.

He was, he told Dobbins, Lionel Raynor, son of Douglas Raynor by his first marriage.

"Had you ever heard of this son before?" Dobbins asked of Nan.

"Yes," she said. "I knew of his existence, but I have never before met him."

"He was apprised of his father's death?"

"You didn't get here for the funeral, Mr. Raynor?" said Dobbins.

"No, I came on from the west and couldn't make connections. But now that I am here, I wish to take possession at once. I have with me my father's will, which bequeaths to me everything he possessed. I want also to push the investigation of his death —his murder"—he looked straight at Nan—"and I want to see justice done."

"You are making any accusations?" asked the detective.

"Not that—I leave that to you and your assistants. But it can't be a difficult case, given the elements of an unloving wife and her former suitor."

"But my husband made a later will," Nan declared, her spirit roused by these continued blows of misfortune.

"Yes? Have you it?" Lionel Raynor's tone was insolent.

"It is in Mr. Raynor's desk," Nan said, quietly.

"Produce it, then." This was said with a sneer, as if the new claimant to the property had no fear of the will being forthcoming.

Nor was it. Though the desk was ransacked by Dobbins, assisted by Goddard and Orville Kent, no trace of a will could be found.

"But it has always been there," said Nan, looking perplexed. "I mean ever since it was drawn up, a year or more ago."

"Who witnessed it?" asked Dobbins.

"Mr. Gannon, for one," Nan said, "and the butler, for another. But not the butler we have now. It was Peters, the one we had last year."

"Grimshawe Gannon? Then he is easily available, and will know where the will is," Goddard said. "This matter should have been looked into sooner."

"I know," Nan said, "the lawyer, Mr. Stratton, said so. But I begged him to wait till to-day. He is coming this afternoon to read the will."

"How can he read it, if there isn't any to read?" asked Lionel Raynor, flippantly. "I fear, Mrs. Stepmother, you won't be able to find that will."

Nancy Raynor gave him one scornful glance but said nothing. As a matter of fact, she knew all about the will her husband had made in her favor, knew how little he had left to Lionel, and knew of its other bequests.

"It must be that Mr. Gannon has the will in his possession," she said, "or more likely, Mr. Stratton has it. At anyrate, I know that it exists, and that its provisions for myself is entirely satisfactory."

Lionel Raynor threw her a quizzical glance, but his eyes rested for a moment on her beautiful face.

For Nancy Raynor, in her black gown and tiny white crepe collar, was very fair and sweet to look upon.

"Well, Mrs. Raynor," Lionel said, "It rests between you and me, then, as to who inherits my father's estate. I have here the will that names me the heir. If you produce a later one, giving you the right to it, I have nothing more to say. But you must put up the goods."

"Why have you never been here before, Lionel?" Nan said. "Why have we never met?"

"Oh, to be frank, I rather resented the governor's marrying again, and I think I didn't care about seeing the new incumbent. Now, if we're to share the property, I suppose we'd better call a truce until the settlements can be made."

"Why a truce? Why not a permanent friendship—whatever the outcome of the settlement?"

Lionel looked at her accusingly. "I don't form friendships with people who—who tried to poison my father!"

Nan shrank as if from a blow, and Dobbins thought this a good time to thrust a question at her.

"That reminds me, Mrs. Raynor," he said, "is this book yours?" He held out the little volume.

"Why—where did you find it?" she asked, "where did you get it?"

"Hidden behind some other books on your bookshelf. Is it yours?"

A sudden and decided change came over Nancy Raynor.

"Yes," she said, raising her chin with a touch of obstinacy, "yes, it is mine."

"Why did you buy it?"

"Because—because I thought somebody was poisoning my husband and I wanted to learn the truth about it."

"You know, do you not, that he was being so poisoned—and that you are suspected of being the poisoner?"

"I know it," Nan sat bolt upright now, and her head, held high, was defiant in its pose. "Can you prove it?"

"I don't advise you to take that attitude, Mrs. Raynor," Dobbins said, not unkindly. "It won't get you anywhere."

"No, don't, Nan," said her brother. "You've got a hard row to hoe, but we're all back of you, and if you'll just tell the truth, it will all be smoothed out very soon."

"Smoothed out, indeed!" Miss Mattie bristled. "I insist on the fullest investigation of my brother's death. I can scarcely believe Nan is responsible for it, but I must know. Also, I want to know about this will business. Can't we send for Grim Gannon, and get at something!"

"Why not?" said Kent, and leaving the room he dispatched a servant to bring Gannon.

At last the big man lumbered slowly in. It was plain to be seen he was ill at ease in the presence of more refined people."

"Whatcha want o' me, Mis' Raynor," he said, as he awkwardly took a chair.

"You can tell me what you know of my husband's will, Mr. Gannon. You witnessed it, I think."

"No, Mis' Raynor, I didn't." The cold light blue eyes of Grimshawe Gannon looked into her own, without any expression of concern or even interest in the matter.

"Why, Mr. Gannon, my husband told me that you did—you and Peters —the butler we had last year."

"Yes'm, I remember Peters—a good man, but stupid. Well, him an' me, we never signed no will for Mr. Raynor—leastwise, not me, anyway."

"That man is telling a falsehood," said Nan, quietly. "You did witness Mr. Raynor's signature to his will, Mr. Gannon, and you know where that will is."

Gannon gave a helpless look around the room, as if to say, "What can I say to that?"

But he only shrugged his great shoulders, and repeated his entire ignorance as to the existence or whereabouts of any will; he rose and lumbered off.

"Well," Dobbins said, "it begins to look serious. Can we get hold of the other witness, Mrs. Raynor?"

"I don't know," Nan said, looking thoughtful rather than confounded. "I can't understand it at all!"

CHAPTER VIII.

The Secret Parcel.

Malcolm Finley was not at all pleased with the role in which he found himself cast. He was a man of action, and he was obliged to keep quiet.

Most of all, he was desperately in love with Nancy Raynor, and was not allowed to tell her so.

"Your time will come," Goddard told him. "If your love for her is the real thing, and if she reciprocates, no harm can come of waiting until a right and proper time to tell her of it. It would be unwise, as well as untimely, to tell her now—and, too, Finley, there's a big mystery to be solved by somebody. Between you and me, I don't think much of that detective—"

"But for that reason he's a good one to have on the case. He gets nowhere, he befogs all the issues—"

"And is that a good thing?"

"It most certainly is—for all concerned."

Finley went off, and Goddard mused over what he had said.

Ezra Goddard carried a heavy heart. He felt that there was no solution to the mystery of the shooting, but to ascribe it either to Nan or Malcolm, and he couldn't bear to think it was either of these. Moreover, Nan had confessed to the ownership of the book on poisons, she had been secretly slipping tablets into her husband's teacup—what theory was there except the guilt of one or both?

Just now, matters seemed to be temporarily held up because of the absence of the will which Nan declared existed.

If this could be found and Nan inherited the estate, things would be quite different from the event of Lionel Raynor owning the place.

Yet his opinions made small difference if the will Lionel possessed was the only one extant. For it was in every way, Goddard knew, a true and legal document—the only question being whether there had been a later one—or whether—this just occurred to Goddard, whether Douglas Raynor, in a fit of anger, had destroyed the will he had made in Nan's favor.

Goddard longed to send to New York for a detective he knew of, but, somehow, he feared the things such a detective might discover.

On the theory of many people, Nancy Raynor and Malcolm Finley were glad to renew their old-time friendship, and it had quickly ripened into love.

Both were of intense and passionate temperament. He could not deny the possibility that, goaded beyond endurance by her husband's cruelty and longing for love and peace of Finley's protection, Nancy had let herself be driven to the point of poisoning the one that stood between her and happiness.

Also, it could be, that Finley, utterly exasperated at Raynor's petty cruelties to the woman he loved, had shot him down.

While he was pacing the east veranda and thinking these things over, Malcolm Finley had at last found Nan alone.

Yet when he chanced to see her alone, on the west terrace, half hidden in the shadows of a great wistaria vine, he went to her at once and sat beside her.

"It's no use, dear," he said gently; "I can't keep away. Now, Nancy, what do you want me to do?"

"What do I want you to do?" she whispered, half unconsciously repeating the words, and then a realization of her great trouble, her great loneliness, surged over her, and she raised her eloquent, sad eyes to his, saying: "Help me, Malcolm; help me—somehow!"

"Yes, dearest; yes, of course, I will. It's hard. Nan—darling! you've no idea how hard it is——"

"Yes, I have, Malcolm"—she looked at him piteously—"but—oh, Malcolm! you don't know what I went through with that man You don't know! It was like a living death—oh, I mustn't talk like that! Forgive me, Malcolm —forgive me, dear——"

"Forgive you? Sweetheart! When I love you so I'm just holding myself together lest I break all bounds and tell you how I love you! I can't help it, Nan—I must take you in my arms —just once—please—my little girl—"

Just for an instant she swayed toward him, and then drew back, with a heart-breaking sigh.

"No—dear—I see I must be brave for both of us. Listen, Malcolm, I am in deep waters—I can't tell the truth—I can't——"

"What! Then, Nan, if it's as bad as all that—you must have a lawyer, a good one, at once. You must tell him everything."

"But, listen, Mal—if this will of Lionel's holds—I am penniless."

"Never, while I am in the world! What's mine is yours——"

"But that won't do, I can't take your money——"

"Indeed you can! No one need ever know. I'll get Wadsworth for you—he's great—and most discreet. Yes he's our man."

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

BUTTERICK 5641

A wrap-around lower part of dark-blue kasha with a long upper part of butter-yellow crêpe de Chine worn with a long coat of the kasha is a Parisian version of the ensemble costume.

THE French dressmakers who design especially for the young girl give her lovely colors—costumes of cream and mahogany, gray and brick, almond and fir green, dark blue with butter yellow, jade green, scarlet or king's blue. A bit of the coat material at the bottom of a slim straight dress does not have the subduing effect on the lovely color above that a skirt would have, and yet it makes the frock perfectly practical for the street under a long or nearly long coat. The coat and lower part may be of kasha, cashmere suitings, wool rep, soft twills or velours with the upper part of plain or printed Georgette, silk crêpe, etc.

BOARD MEETING OF YOUNG GIRLS' CLUB

Young Women's Association Report a Very Successful Year.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Young Women's Christian Association was held when various reports were presented and the committees struck for the year.

The Educational Committee reported on the organization of different classes for the ensuing year, as follows: A class in elocution, in basketry, in first aid work, in home nursing, in Canadian cooking (designed to be of especial benefit to newcomers to Canada), in junior cooking (to teach children to prepare simple foods properly), a story hour club for babies and juniors on Saturday morning, and a charm school, whose curriculum includes a series of practical talks and demonstrations on subjects such as charm in dress, in the interior decorating of the home, in speech, in entertainment, in personal appearance, in health (to be given by a doctor), in mind (to be given by a teacher) and inner charm (to be given by a minister).

It was decided to hold a book shower during book week in November.

The annual campaign for funds will be made during the last week in October and the first week in November.

The Religious Work Committee decided to continue the sing-songs, starting the first of December and continuing until the first of March, and the Sunday afternoon friendly hours, to commence the first of December. It will also co-operate with the Educational Committee in the story hour for children before gymnasium classes on Saturday morning.

HUGE DIRIGIBLES FOR USE IN WARS

"Los Angeles" Cannot Be Used For Conflict and England Building Giant Airships.

By LUDWELL DENNY.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(United Press).—The good ship "Los Angeles," which crossed the Atlantic by air under the name ZR-3, has started an argument among aviation officers here over the military value of dirigibles.

Although the Los Angeles, under the terms of the Versailles Treaty, can NOT be used for war purposes, her remarkable maiden voyage has intensified the demand for another military ship of her type for use with the Shenandoah in case of war.

Many flying officers, however, question the military worth of rigid lighter-than-air craft. While granting the dirigible's value as a trans-oceanic commercial carrier of the future, they maintain that the hugh exposed bulk of such ships and their slower speed rate than airplanes would leave them defenseless against bombing planes.

But England is going to build two dirigibles twice the size of the Los Angeles and Shenandoah, and at any time can re-commission her three derelict Zeppelins, is the answer of officers anxious to maintain in the air the same 5-5-3 ratio for seacraft established by the Washington Arms Conference.

Advocates of the dirigible, who hope the Government will soon let a contract for the construction of another ship, make the following claims:

1.—Dirigibles are the most effective and economical weapons in enforcing a blockade;

2.—Are the best scouts because of their incomparable cruising ability, both as to distance and low cost of operation;

3.—Are the mother-ships of the air, which can be developed to carry whole broods of planes over the sea:

4.—Are safer than planes, since the introduction of non-inflammable helium gas.

A Blockade Weapon.

Superior ability of lighter-than-air craft as a blockade weapon is pretty generally admitted. A Zeppelin can remain on the track of blockaded runners for several weeks at a time without returning to her base. She can float back and forth with little expenditure of motor fuel, compared with the expense of keeping squadrons of planes in the air.

While her cruising radius makes her the best scout for a surface fleet, critics point out that she can easily be brought down by anti-aircraft or rapid pursuit planes of the enemy fleet.

To overcome this objection naval aeronautical engineers, are planning a rigid lighter-than-air ship large enough and steady enough to carry anti-aircraft guns of her own as protection against enemy planes. Provisional plans provide for guns mounted on top of the gas envelope.

Carry Fast Planes.

Underneath the bag the ship will carry small rapid planes which can be launched in mid-air to engage the plane squadron of the enemy, while she returns to report the results of her observations of the enemy forces. Even if she lost her subsidiary planes in such an escape, her purpose as a scout would be fulfilled, according to dirigible flyers here.

Though anxious to build military Zeppelins for the United States, these officers say that air preparedness depends in the long run upon an adequate number of commercial airships which can be used for war purposes if needed.

Counting on the opposition of surface fleet officers who are unwilling to sacrifice fleet appropriations to build up the air-service, the military aviators believe that their best bet is to stimulate commercial aircraft construction.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(Canadian Press.)—The engagement of Roszika Dolly, of the well known "Dolly Sisters," musical comedy favorites, to Edgar Allen Woolf, playwright, was announced to-day. Miss Roszika obtained a divorce from Jean Schwartz, composer, in 1921.

Keeps Linoleum and Congoleum looking like new

Principal uses of Bon Ami for cleaning and polishing

Bathtubs, Tiling	Windows
Fine Kitchen Utensils	Mirrors
White Woodwork	Refrigerators
Aluminium Ware	White Shoes
Brass, Copper and Nickel Ware	The Hands
Glass Baking Dishes	Linoleum and Congoleum

Have you tried cleaning your linoleum and Congoleum with Bon Ami? You'll be surprised to find how swiftly and easily this soft scratchless cleanser brings results.

Just sprinkle your floor with a little of the Bon Ami powder—and go over it with a well dampened mop. Then wipe it off with your mop wrung out in clean water. The pattern re-appears as fresh and bright as new!

Bon Ami blots up all grease and grime with a gentle absorptive action that cannot harm even the most delicate surface. That's why it's good for all the purposes listed above. And for the same reason it never reddens or roughens your hands.

VOTING HEAVY LONDON AREAS

Result Will Be Known Some Time To-morrow.

LONDON, Oct. 29.— (Canadian Press.)—Balloting is in progress in England, Wales, Scotland and Ulster to-day in elections to fill 583 of 615 seats in the British House of Commons. Thirty-two acclamations on nomination day resulted in the return of 9 Labor, 16 Conservatives, 6 Liberals and a Nationalist. It is expected that results of the voting in 224 constituencies will be known to-night or early to-morrow and a great majority of the remainder will be known later to-morrow.

Voting in the London area was heavy throughout the morning, a majority of those going to the polls being women. Stanley Baldwin returned to London from Lancashire to-day without voting, because there was no contest in his constituency where he automatically was elected.

Following are members returned unopposed at nominations on October 18:

Labor.

Carmarthon, Dr. Williams; Glamorganshire Neath, W. Jenkins; Glemorganshire Ogmore, Vernon Hartshorn; Monmouthshire Abertillery, George Barker; Monmouthshire Bedwellty, Charles Edwards; Monmouthshire Ebbw Vale, Evan Davies; Rhondda East, Col. Watts Morgan; Yorkshire Normanton, F. Hall; Yorkshire West Wentworth, G. H. Hirst.

Conservative.

Belfast Queen's University, T. Sinclair; Belfast East, Captain R. Dixon; Belfast South, T. Moles; City of London, E. C. Grenfell; City of London, Sir Vansittart Bowater; Kensington South, Sir William Davison; Lancaster, Fylde, Lord Stanley; Liverpool, Exchange, Sir Leslie Scott; Paddington, South, H. D. King; Salop Ludlow, Col. Windsor Clive; Warwickshire Tamworth, E. M. Iliffe; Westminster, St. Georges, J. M. Erskine; Worcestershire, Bewdley, Stanley Baldwin; Yorkshire, East Howdenshire, Hon. F. S. Jackson; Yorkshire, North Richmond, Col. Murrough Wilson; Yorksire, West Ripon, E. F. L. Wood.

Liberal.

Caithness and Sutherland, Sir A. Sinclair; Cardigan, R. H. Morris; Halifax, J. H. Whitley; Middlesbrough West, Trevelyan Thomson; Orkney and Shetland, Sir Robert Hamilton; Ross and Cromarty, Ian MacPherson.

Nationalist.

Liverpool, Scotland, T. P. O'Connor.

While some of the Laborites still expressed confidence that result would show people favorable to their remaining in power. General opinion was that the Government would be repudiated. Respective strength of parties in the new house, however, was a subject on which no political observer would venture to give public prediction. Weather forecasts indicated mild temperature with alternate spells of fine weather and rain. Heavy voting was indicated by queues which formed at many of the polling places in the early morning.

CONCERT AT GEORGE STREET.

(By Jeannette).

The entertainment last evening in the George Street Methodist Church Sunday School that marked one more item in the programme of entertainment of the Jubilee Inaugural Week was extremely successful. Between four and five hundred people filled the big hall and applauded with enthusiasm the unique offering entitled "The Old Family Album," which formed last night's contribution to the week's series. It was a delightful entertainment, quite out of the ordinary, the entire programme being a series of living pictures presented in a large picture frame, with the hall darkened, the only illumination being the light centred on the performers from a picture lantern, operated by Mr. Ross L. Dobbin. The various characters were costumed according to the character delineated, each one singing or reciting an appropriate selection.

After a few words by the director, Mr. J. H. Renwick, the entertainment opened with a prologue, "Dream Faces," Mr. Maurice H. Park singing the old song. Mr. E. E. Ingall acted as interlocutor, reading the monologue which preceded and explained the action of the piece, and introduced in turn, the various people who stepped forth for a brief moment from the pages of the old album. Pathos and humor were woven in the clever lines of the monologue, for which, although his name did not appear on the printed programme, it was whispered that Rev. Mr. Young was responsible.

Mrs. J. Kenmuir and her small son, Georgia, formed the first pretty picture for Mr. Park's solo, which was followed by a charming duet by Hazel and Mildred Tretheway, singing "Whispering Hope" to their own Hawaiian guitar accompaniment, and enacting the roles of Patience and Mercy Wilkins, daughters of Josiah Wilkins. Jerusha Sproggins, in old-time garb, was enacted by Mrs. Norman Foote, who sang very sweetly, "In the Gloaming," in keeping with her story, as told by Mr. Ingall, of a love-lorn maiden, mourning a recreant lover.

As Samantha Sputterfuss, a small creature with dark "Sis Hopkins" braids and pathetic demeanor, Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland made a real hit, her reading of the forlorn mite's plaint, "Nobody's Child," bringing her renewed applause. An encore was the brief bit about Mary and her naughty lamb.

Mr. R. A. Brown made a splendid old negro, Ebenezer Hopholme, and sang in fine voice, "Old Black Joe," giving an encore in one of the popular negro spirituals, "Nobody Knows de Trubble I've Seen."

One of the best characterizations of the evening was that of Norah O'Hea, by Mrs. J. H. Renwick, in the curls and frills of a comedy Irish maiden, singing very effectively the old-time rollicking Irish song, "Barney O'Hea," and responding to repeated encores with a repetition of the last verse.

Priscilla Popham, in jaunty suit of Scotch plaids and feathered cap, was Miss Winnie Evans, playing a violin number, Beethoven's "Minuet," and the "two best-known gooseberries of the village, all dressed up for Saturday night at McCracken's Landing," were J. Renwick, Junior, and A. V. Lillow, as Aaron Pettigrew and Lemuel Penderberry, singing in duet "Love's Old Sweet Song." President Wilson's famous limerick about his own facial beauty was incorporated in the monologue that accompanied the appearance of the two old-time beaux, with high toppers and flowing ties.

The outstanding solo of the evening was that of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, in the role of Jenny Lind, singing in unforgettable fashion the lovely "Nightingales of Lincoln's Inn." The artistry that marks Mrs. Park's singing was never used to better advantage than in her rendition of the poignantly sweet strains of this beautiful song. Her audience held its breath as the voice of the singer echoed in vibrant pianissimo sweetness the notes of the nightingale, and they called her back with repeated encores for a repetition of the final verse. The quaint, effective spelt of old-time music and costuming was at its height during Mrs. Park's memorable solo.

Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland's second appearance of the evening was in the role of Aunt Mehitabel, a stern lady with tight basque and smooth locks, reading in splendid style the old favorite, "Curfew shall not ring to-night."

Major Reggie Higginbotham, V.C., was an imposing figure in bright red tunic, white bandolier and enormous black busby, a "straw soldier," enacted by Mr. M. H. Park, singing in his melodious tenor the stirring "Soldiers of the Queen."

Miss Elva McIntyre, a demure, dainty figure, as Prudence Perkins, sang very sweetly "The Last Rose of Summer," and a quartette of male voices, heard in "Tenting on the Old Camp Grounds," was composed of Messrs. R. A. Brown, M. H. Park, A. V. Lillow, and J. F. H. Renwick, as Ezekiel Calkins, Caleb Judd, Moses Snodgrass and Ephraim McGillicuddy. Mr. Park took the solo in this number, which was followed by a finale effective tableau, an ensemble of the entire cast, entitled "The Family," singing "Good-Night, Ladies," as a closing to an extremely interesting entertainment.

Accompaniments for a long and exacting programme were played very satisfactorily by Mrs. W. H. Young.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the Old-Time Concert was composed of J. H. Renwick, Mrs. W. H. Young, Mrs. M. H. Park, and Miss Mary Elliott.

AT THE GRAND.

A RARE TREAT FOR EVERYBODY

Grand Opera Festival at the Grand

It happens only once in a few years that this city is treated to a great artistic festival like the appearance of the De Feo Grand Opera Company, coming to the Grand, this Saturday evening, for one performance only.

It is the highest class of entertainment and also the most costly to produce. It requires a certain number of highly paid singers, an orchestra, costly scenery and costumes and many other expensive items, which bring up the daily maintenance cost of a traveling opera company to close to a thousand dollars a day.

Mr. De Feo's aim has always been to spread the love of better music among the people, and the present tour given under the auspices of various local musical societies, is part of a great educational campaign. It is the only explanation for the ridiculously low prices of admission that have been established for such a high clas entertainment. It will give everybody a splendid opportunity to hear the best singers in the interpretation of the best operas.

It has been a common mistake to think that one has to be specially educated to understand and enjoy opera; pure and beautiful melody appeals to every soul just like beauty in form and in color flatters everybody's eye.

In view of the excessively moderate prices of admission, it is to be hope that everybody in Peterboro will avail himself of this rare treat, and that the Grand Opera House will be packed to the doors on Saturday evening.

AT THE ROYAL.

IRISH NIGHT AT ROYAL ON THURSDAY—IRISH PLAYERS IN IRISH PICTURE, "APRIL SHOWERS."

Old-Time Irish Songs Will Be Sung By James Browne.

Many of us who are ardent picture fans are rather sure we have seen everything novel which the screen has to offer. However, "April Showers," which will be shown for the first time to-morrow evening at the Royal Theatre, has something entirely new.

Fascinating Novelty.

This Preferred Picture is replete with humor, human interest and romance and being played by one of the best cast assemblages of the year, it easily ranks as a picture of unusual appeal. But, in addition to being an exceptionally good picture, Director Tom Forman gives screen patrons a scene of fascinating novelty in the nature of a cabaret performance staged to appear as though it were entirely under water.

If you have ever taken a trip in a glass-bottomed boat you know how fascinating and beautiful are the wonders of the deep. Graceful green sea-weed and mosses, coral reefs, jagged rocks and darting fish have all been transferred to the screen by Director Forman and his cameraman has created some of the finest under-water effects ever shown. Mermaids, pirates and a deep-sea diver are the cabaret entertainers in this novel cafe scene.

The Human Touch.

"April Showers" is a story of Irish immigrant life of the lower East Side of New York. It is a tale woven about the intimate family life of the Irish tenement settlement, of the police force and the fight ring.

Fine Cast.

While the story is essentially simple and wholesome, it is a faithful portrayal of life among our Irish-American folk, and the Royal Theatre is fortunate in securing a picture of such splendid quality.

The cast includes such well-known players as Colleen Moore, Kenneth Harlan, Priscilla Bonner, Ruth Clifford, Myrtle Vane and others.

WILLIAM DUNCAN COMES ON THURSDAY TO ROYAL IN ANOTHER THRILLING CHAPTER PLAY.

The thrilling rescue of a train from a huge rockslide forms one of the most dramatic thrills ever placed on the screen, as staged by William Duncan in his new Universal railroad feature chapterplay, "The Fast Express," the first episode of which will be shown, commencing Thursday, at the Royal Theatre.

Duncan directs and stars in the new chapterplay, appearing with Edith Johnson and a great cast, including Harry Woods, Albert J. Smith, Harry Carter and other well-known picture players.

The story was adapted from the famous novelette, "Crossed Wires," a railroad story by Courtney Ryley Cooper, and as a screen play is replete with sensations.

The first chapter tells of the secret plotting surrounding the operation of the new railroad; Duncan, as its president, and Miss Johnson, as the telegraph operator, seek to ferret out the plot behind inexplicable delays. In an attemnt to delay the fast express, the traitors in the railroad's ranks dynamite the cliffs, a gigantic landslide being the result. Through a thrilling bit of bravery Duncan and Miss Johnson save the train from disaster.

Future chapters will show many thrills, including the vanishing of an entire freight car from the middle of a train, by a trick as audacious as it is exciting. This and the explanation will be shown in repaid-fire dramatic action. A desperate battle in Denver's underworld, a spectacular fire, a thrilling chase and a battle on the roofs of racing freight cars are among other thrills to be seen in the chapterplay as its action progresses.

"PERFECT FLAPPER" REVERSES THINGS

Ever hear of a fashionable debutante party where the waiters were served by the guests?

This is the unusual situation that takes place in "The Perfect Flapper," the First National picture starring Colleen Moore, which is now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

Tommie Lou Pember, member of a fashionable younger set, but herself a quiet, modest girl, finds that less than fifty of her four hundred invitations were accepted. The boisterous guests discover that they are outnumbered by the waiters; so the waiters are seated at the tables and waited upon by the guests who are dressed in gorgeous costumes.

"The Perfect Flapper" is said to be even a greater triumph for Colleen Moore than was "Flaming Youth." It was directed by John Francis Dillon and contains an imposing array of stars in Miss Moore's support, including Sydney Chaplin, Frank Mayo, Phyliss Haver, Lydia Knott, Charles Wellesley and others.

REAL VIEW OF ITALY IN BIG GISH SPECIAL

Would you like to see Rome, the city of the seven eternal hills? Would you like to visit Mt. Vesuvius, Italy's death-belching volcano? Would you like to enjoy the charm of Sorrento, the jewel of Italy's north—Naples with its bay of blue—ancient Tivoli, the town of narrow torturous streets?

You don't have to visit Italy to see these natural grandeurs. They form the setting for Lillian Gish's greatest dramatic triumph, "The White Sistre," which is coming to the Capitol Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Inspiration Pictures determined to bring the fascinating beauty of Italy back to America by means of the screen.

"The White Sister" was chosen as the first film to be reproduced entirely overseas. It has been the outstanding artistic triumph of the present motion picture season and the work of Lilian Gish, the screen's greatest artiste, in the leading role, has been characterized as better than anything she has ever done in the past.

MISSING WOMAN TURNS UP AFTER TWO YEARS

LONDON, Oct 29.—Two years ago a sensation was caused in Bath by the disappearence of Miss Apple yard, a wealthy resident. Her mansion at Weston became dereliet. Bath long ago added her disappearance to its list of unsolved mysteries.

Now it is announced Miss Appleyard has been found and that she is alive and in good health. She is in London. It is stated that she left Bath for "purely domestic reasons," and has been travelling.

SCHNARR WITH BOSTON.

Hamilton Tigers Lose Another Hockey Player.

HAMILTON, October 29. — Canadian Press. — Werner Schnarr who came here early in spring to study law and help the Tigers to win the O.H.A. title, is lost to amateur hockey.

Yesterday he signed to play with Boston, and has forwarded his contract to the Boston club.

Schnarr was given the contract by Art Ross about one month ago but absolutely refused to sign it. Ross told him to keep the paper and if he changed his mind at any time to fill in the dotted line and send it along.

KILLED IN ACCIDENT.

FUMBLES COSTLY

Fumbling in football usually proves as costly as the proverbial base on balls in the national pastime. A touchdown or a score is the usual result. Two fumbles by Dartmouth paved the way for two Yale touchdowns and prevented a win for the Green team.

CONFERENCE OPENS HERE NEXT FRIDAY

Older Boys and Leaders of Local Sunday Schools to Gather Together.

Registrations are being received from the churches of surrounding counties for the Older Boys' and Leaders' Conference which opens with a leaders' supper in St. Andrew's Church on Friday evening at 6 o'clock.

This conference will have as delegates boys of 15 years and over who are members of a regular Sabbath School class, and also the teachers, superintendents and pastors.

The local Conference Committee, under the able chairmanship of Mr. Neil Porter, has set up a programme which will contribute much to the assistance of boys' work in the average church of this community.

Following the address of welcome by Mayor Turner on Friday evening the conference officers will be elected and the entire gathering divided into Tuxis Squares to "learn by doing" the authorised programme of the evangelical churches.

A strong team of speakers and leaders will direct all phases of the conference sessions and services of worship. The local Ministerial Association will have charge of the worship period preceding each session.

Rev. C. A. Meyers, secretary of Young People's Societies in the Presbyterian Church; Mr. C. F. Plewman, secretary of Ontario Boys' Work Board, Mr. C. E. Hendry, superintendent Boys' Work, Walmer Road Church, Toronto; Rev. Manson Doyle, secretary of Young People's Work, Methodist Church; Rev. Norten, Baptist Church, Cobourg; and Gordon Lapp, a candidate for the Premiers'ip in the Older Boys' Parliament of Ontario.

These will lead the various discussions throughout the entire programme.

Sessions will be held in St. Andrew's Church on Friday evening, Saturday morning and Saturday afternoon. The event of the evening will be the delegates' banquet in the George Street Church at 6 o'clock, followed by delegates' yells, stunts, etc.

The candidates wor election to the next Older Boys' Parliament will here be given an opportunity to address the voters of this district.

In view of the fact that the city championships will be run off at the Exhibition Grounds and the Collegiate are playing rugby at Riverside the afternoon session will be so arranged that delegates may take in either event.

Sunday morning at ten o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. lobby a devotional period for conference officers, members of Older Boys' Parliament conference and Boys' Work Committees.

In the afternoon there will be a mass meeting for delegates and all Older Boys of the city and community in Knox Church. Every older boy and leader of boys in the city should be present at this mass meeting on Sunday afternoon.

The closing conference session will be held in Murray Street Church at the conclusion of the evening service. The public are cordially invited to this closing session when the conference officers will present reports to be followed by closing ceremonies.

Delegates will be billeted in the homes of the city from Friday evening until Monday morning.

MOVIE RESCUER A HERO BUT NOT TO HIS WIFE

MONESSEN, Pa., Oct. 29. — When Mrs. Raymond Steinmetz read on the front page of a newspaper that her husband saved the life of a five-year-old girl at Emporia Kan., by driving his motor car across the path of a locomotive and snatching the girl from the tracks, she told the police.

A telegram to Emporia caused Steinmetz to be held on the charge of wife desertion.

PLAYIN' HOOKEY

The school bell is ringin', supposed to be bringin' the young folks all into their class. The teacher is waitin', there's some hesitatin' for now hookey days come to pass.

There's Jimmy and Roy and another small boy who are standin' just outside the door. They're dopin' the way they can sneak off to play 'cause their studies have started to bore.

"I'm always awishin' that I can go fishin'," the third little fellow remarks. The others refuse him, so quickly they lose him as off by himself he embarks.

Thus Roydon and Jim keep themselves right in trim and they learn as young boys ought to do. Their pal is out playin', away from school stayin'; what folly if he only knew.

It never can pay to miss even a day 'cause you need every day, as a rule. It is well if you scorn all but Saturday morn' when you want to play hookey from school.

TO STAY YOUNG, STAY ROMANTIC

Advice Of Charles K. Harris Whose Ballads Brought Happiness To Thousands.

"AFTER THE BALL."

BY GENE COHN

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. — Thirty-two years have passed since Charles K. Harris wrote "After the Ball."

Since that time he has made a great fortune by playing upon the heartstrings of the public. His hair has grown chalk-white. He is passing into the sixties. He looks much younger.

"In the rapid-fire change of song tastes during the past quarter of a century, what has become of a lullaby and the ballad?" the correspondent asks him. "And the little group that once gathered around the family piano—what has become of it? Will the radio, the phonograph, the autopiano make the American public forget how to sing?"

The grand-old-man of ballading—the man who wrote "Just break the News to Mother," "Would you care?" "Hello, Central, Give Me Heaven" and a great list that haunts the memory—crashed his fist dramatically upon the desk.

"As long as there is love! As long as there are sweethearts! As long as there are mothers babies, romance and heartaches— just so long will there be ballads and lullabies!

"You can give the people razz and jazz warm mammas and sugar papas, blue and whatnot, but when the saxophone has tooted its last note they'll go to the heart songs for solace and comfort.

"A good cry is as good a medicine as a good laugh. And there's where the ballad comes in and always will. They'll still be singing the heart songs when jazz is a curio in the museums."

"Have you ever stopped to think of the number of romances your love songs have brought about?" he was asked.

"Have I? My files are filled with thousands of letters that came in over the years. Letters from estrang couples, brought together after hearing a certain song; letters of newlyweds thanking me for my part in the romance; letters from heart-heavy folk. I sang over the radio a short time ago and I still get letters telling how the songs recalled romances of years gone by.

"That's what I like to think about. Not that I'm getting old. It's something for the imagination to play with. Think of hundreds of thousands of people you will never know and never see in whose lives you have played an unconscious, but very definite, part."

"And in your own life?" he was asked.

The veteran ballad-maker smiled.

"I wrote one of my best love songs to my wife. I say one of my best, for it must have been pretty good. She married me. My children were brought up on my baby songs.

"You see, I believe that heart songs bring a bond of sentiment into the home. You'll never see any home ties knit by hot mamma tunes. But a man and wife may have parted and, going to a theatre or listening to the radio, hear a heart song that makes them stop and think. There is an immediate appeal to the sentiment They are re-united.

"Youth likes to dance—and thus the syncopated tune. But youth just love and romance — and thus the ballad. No the ballad is not dead, even though it may seem at the moment to have been misplaced.

"It isn't the money— the material end—so much. I could have retired. But writing of hearts and romance and love keeps me young. I'll never quit ballading till I die."

Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.—Matt. 5:9.

COMPLETE SETTLEMENT.

Controversy Between Britain and Turkey To Be Settled To-day.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 29. — (Canadian Press.)—Complete settlement of the controversy between Great Britain and Turkey over the status quo frontier between Turkey and Mosul will be reached at the afternoon session to-day of the Council of the League of Nations in a special session here, it is expected by the League officials. The opinion, it was explained, was based on the belief that a solution of the controversy, worked out by Dr. H. J. Almuer Branting, Swedish Premier, would fix the frontier line acceptable to both Great Britain and Turkey, pending settlement of larger question of sovereignty over Mosul.

ABOUT YOUR TIRES

The tire manufacturer, of course, is interested in his tires giving the highest possible mileage, so a number of them will tell you to keep the tire inflated to a certain pressure which is usually too high for comfortable riding.

When a tire is pumped up to a point where there is but little "give" to it when it passes over a stone or street car track there is but little strain on the carcass. This means high mileage and good advertising for the manufacturer but what of the car?

High pressure means hard riding. Rough riding means excessive strain on every part of the car and many trips to the repair shop. On the other hand, you can not expect to get as many miles out of a tire run on low pressure as you would out of one inflated to the point recommended by the manufacturer. However, you will get much easier riding and will not shake the car to pieces on low pressure. Therefore, inflation of tires is a problem you will have to solve for yourself.

This advice concerns cord tires, the type generaly adopted by car manufacturers. If you are using fabric tires you should not attempt to operate them on low pressure, as the constant bending of the carcass will break it down and cause the tire to blow out before it has gone more than a couple of hundred miles.

If you have been foolish enough to be tricked into buying bargain tires manufactured by "flash-in-the-pan" companies, you had better keep them inflated to exactly the point recommended by the maker, for the majority of them are made to sell and not for service.

Here's how fair ladies are hunting ducks in California this year. They don inflated air-tight boots with skirt effect, and walk right out in the lake with a gun on their shoulder. The inflated trappings are sufficient in buoyancy to keep the body waist high above water. This enables the ladies to negotiate fruitful hunting spots. It's rather rough on the quack-quaks but the dear girls say the excitement is too wonderful for words.

CONTRIBUTORY NEGLICENCE IS PLEADED FOR W. T. BELLEGHEM IN MISS ROGERS' $15,000 SUIT

Defendant Says Second Car Crowded Him To Left of the Road.

DENIES RACING.

At the resumed hearing of the Belleghem case this morning, James W. Fitzgerald said in his survey he found that an oil spot on the road at the scene of the accident was five feet from the ditch and 276 feet south of the elm tree. The spread of the elm tree is 78 feet, of which half extends over the highway. The road is 28 feet wide at the place of the accident. Belleghem's car was 66 inches wide and Bacon's was much the same.

Answering cross-examination by Mr. McElderry, the witness said the accident occurred 415 feet from the top of the hill.

Mr. Fitzgerald said a track turned steadily from the right side of the road to the left, continuing until the scene of the accident. The rut was very marked.

Defendant's Evidence.

Walter T. Belleghem, the defendant in the case, said he had lived in Peterboro 36 years. He had driven nine different cars in ten years, and has at present four cars and trucks in his business. In the ten years he has driven about 280,000 miles.

Mr. Belleghem had been going back and forward from Chemong to Peterboro regularly during the summer, when his family was at his summer cottage there.

On the night of the accident Mr. McMaster and his wife, Mr. Breckenridge and his wife and Mrs. Tyler were in Belleghem's apartment. Belleghem took 20 ounces of liquor and put it in the compartment in the back seat of the car. He did not drink any liquor, but took medicine that he had been taking by Dr. Loudon's orders since February. The liquor also was prescribed for heart trouble.

Mrs. Tyler and he started on the trip to Chemong about 10.15. It was a dark night, and the roads were dusty, with mist on spots.

The rate at which he travelled was 16 or 18 miles an hour. Some cars came from behind and passed him, and on Finlay's Hill he tried to pass a car behind which he had travelled for a mile. On the way down the hill he had made about 25 miles an hour. The second car was going slowly—about 15 miles an hour, and slowed down on the hill.

Hon. Mr. Justice Orde—"You don't seem to have used your head. The fact that the man in front reduced his speed should have been warning that there was care needed."

Belleghem continued his narrative by declaring the car crowded him to the left and he did not see any car approaching. His car was three feet ahead of the other car when Bacon's auto came into sight, ten feet away. He immediately applied all his brakes, and the accident took place. His left wheel was six feet from the edge of the grass on the left of the road at the time.

Hon. Mr. Justice Orde—"Then it was on the wrong side of the road. It's a question of common-sense that a man overtaking another car must be certain there is no other car approaching before he goes on to the wrong side of the road. If there was a mist, that is all the more reason why he should have exercised care. You are throwing all the responsibility upon the unfortunate automobile on the right hand side."

Mr. Gordon explained that the non-glare lenses on Belleghem's car prevented his seeing the fog until he was in it.

Belleghem said Mrs. Tyrer is at present in Ottawa, suffering from an injured knee, and unable to attend Court.

On the night of the accident Belleghem was taken to Dr. Loudon, where he was given treatment, but does not remember of what nature. He remembers very little of what happened after the arrest.

"We never had liquor in our ambulance," Belleghem said, " and if I said I got the liquor from the ambulance, I must have connected 'ambulance' with 'accident' in my mind."

Bacon must have been coming quickly, and this combined with the mist and the overhanging tree prevented Belleghem's seeing the lights.

Hon. Mr. Justice Orde: "What bearing had the tree on it? I don't see how the tree could have obscured the car all the one hundred yards."

Cross-Examination.

Answering Mr. McElderry, Belleghem said he was out on Sunday preparing his defence to this action. He could not say the rut he pointed out to Mr. Fitzgerald was that made by his car.

At the time of the collision his car was travelling 25 miles an hour, and the car he was passing was travelling fifteen miles an hour. He could not say how many yards he would have to travel to pass, but knew that it would take some distance.

"When he wouldn't let you pass, wouldn't that indicate you were racing?"

"No."

"You don't remember seeing Constable Maker and Mr. Hunter on the road?"

"No."

"Wouldn't you have seen them if you had been sober?"

"I was sober. My car passed them."

"These three men and you go to and fro all summer on that road?"

"Yes."

"And your car is a well-known car on that road and at Chemong Park?"

"Probably."

"And now you say these men are mistaken when they say you passed them and that your car was in the lead?"

"Yes."

"That is your explanation of this evidence: That they are mistaken?"

"Yes."

On Wrong Side.

Belleghem admitted that his car was altogether over the centre line when it struck Bacon's car.

He did not know how his truck got out there; he did not know whether he 'phoned for it.

"Would one of your intentions be to get your car out of the tell-tale position on the left of the road?"

"No. I wouldn't do that."

Belleghem said he remembered nothing until he saw the lights of Peterborough. Mr. Hunter drove him in and he recognized Mr. Hunter by the light of the night and the lamps on the dashboard. He remembered going to the doctors' door but nothing more until the doctor started stitching his head. He remembers very faintly going out again with Dr. Loudon and seeing Pearson there but not Maker. He does not remember telling Constable Pearson he had gone in to get his truck. He does not remember seeing the truck or anything in the car on the way back to the city.

The only statement I remember making to Constable Maker was 'I don't want to be questioned.'

Pressed by Mr. McElderry the witness remembered leaving Dr. Loudon's office, before the wound was sewed up, because he wanted to get to the scene of the accident.

Mr. McElderry: "You remember quite a number of things, eight or ten—and none of them of any importance? You remember seeing the lights of Peterborough; saying 'Chemong Road' to the doctor and so on, but you have forgotten your statements to Constable Maker, Constable Pearson and everything else of importance?"

"That's all I remember."

"Your cousin was sitting on the seat in the rear of your car. It would be necessary for you to turn around to see her?"

"I didn't turn around."

"You had some conversation with her?"

Belleghem, "Yes."

His Lordship, 'Why shouldn't he?'

Mr. McElderry, "No reason at all my Lord."

Bruce Hunter said he brought Walter Belleghem to town, and found him nervous but not drunk. "He seemed to have his faculties. He wanted me to drive faster."

Mr. Hunter told Mr. McElderry that Belleghem wanted to get the wreck cleared up.

Atmosphere was Thick

Gordon Mein, proprietor and driver of the Comet Bus said the atmosphere was anything but clear. In the valleys it was almost impossible to see, because of dust and mist. There were three occasions that night, when he had to stop until the dust settled. On one trip he had to stop at the foot of Finlay's hill. The overhanging tree obscures the lights of oncoming cars.

Mr. McElderry, "You took the greatest care on that hill that night."

"Not any more than any other time."

Answering His Lordship, Gordon Mein said he stopped while travelling towards Peterborough. If a car had passed the elm tree, it would be quite visible to anyone coming down the hill.

Under circumstances where a car was crowding him, if he saw another car approaching 200 yards away he would drop in behind.

A. C. Darling identified photographs he took at the scene of the accident.

A taxi driver said he saw both cars and considers the seating of three adults in the front seat of a Chevrolet a dangerous practice. The car cannot be driven properly, and the emergency brake cannot be reached without difficulty. On the night of the accident the air was foggy on the Chemong Road.

Perfectly Sober.

R. C. Breckenridge of Asphodel, said he was in the Belleghem apartments on the night of the accident. Belleghem was perfectly sober. The road was dusty and misty.

Answering Mr. McElderry, the witness said he did not smell medicine from Belleghem's breath.

Didn't Smell Medicine.

James Beacock, an employee of Belleghem & Sons, said that he received some instructions from Mr. Belleghem fifteen minutes before he left for Chemong. Belleghem had not been drinking then.

Answering Mr. McElderry, Beacock said that he did not smell medicine.

Slight Concussion.

Dr. T. G. Loudon remembered treating Belleghem on the night of the accident. Belleghem was in a state of shock and didn't say anything. He didn't seem to know where he was, and was wandering around. Dr. Loudon made him sit down and found a severe wound on top of his head. There was no odor of liquor.

Belleghem was getting pale and his pulse was shallow, so Dr. Loudon gave him whiskey, about an ounce. That revived Belleghem in about five minutes, and the doctor gave him about a quarter grain of morphia as a sedative. In this case the reaction was to make him more excited. He spoke in broken syllables and the doctor could not understand what he was saying. This was caused by concussion of the brain.

Answering Mr. McElderry, Dr. Loudon said he had attended Belleghem over a year. Whiskey had been prescribed in May and before that while he was in the hospital and in last October. This amounted to two quarts, six ounces, and some while he was in the hospital.

Belleghem telephoned from Dr. Loudon's office on the night of the accident, perhaps to the police station. Under his condition the doctor said Belleghem might not remember this. The effects of a slight concussion might last for two or three days.

In re-examination by Mr. Gordon, the witness said the prescriptions given Belleghem were necessary in the treatment of the illness from which he suffered.

Supports Dr. Loudon.

Dr. T. W. H. Young, introduced by Mr. Gordon as a city medical officer of health, said the scars on Miss Rogers' face will improve in appearance as time goes on until in a couple of years they will scarcely be visible at a couple of feet distant.

Regarding Belleghem's condition, Dr. Young said he thought Dr. Loudon's diagnosis was right. The whiskey is a usual treatment.

In an endeavor to show that Dr. H. B. Mann, who gave evidence yesterday, disbelieves in prescribing liquor, Mr. Gordon asked Dr. Young —"Dr. Mann does not believe in prescribing liquor at all?"

His Lordship objected on the ground that Dr. Young has no peculiar knowledge and Mr. Gordon replied that it is common knowledge in Peterboro. "I want to show that they always get a prohibition doctor at the police station to smell a suspect," Mr. Gordon said.

Answering Mr. McElderry, the witness said he had not seen Belleghem at the Police Station. The shock might cause a man to say things that were untrue, but not deliberately untrue.

Mr. McElderry: "You have had considerable experience in giving evidence in court. You have been in nearly every case in the past two years where medical testimony was required?"

"I have appeared in a good many."

This concluded the evidence and several witnesses were called in reply.

Technical Evidence

Constable Maker called, in reply said, that from 11.20 to 1.20 on the night of the accident there were 40 or 50 cars passed.

Oliver Smith, recalled, said with one car travelling 15 miles an hour and a second endeavoring to pass it at 25 miles an hour, the second would be alongside the first for 94 feet.

Mr. Smith gave evidence of the distances travelled by the different cars in the case in certain times.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. May, of No. 88, Englewood avenue, Buffalo, last evening announced the engagement of their daughter Miss Edna May, to Mr. R. John Yarnold, formerly of Peterborough, Ont., the marriage to be solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, here on Saturday, November 15.

WEDDING BELLS.

SKINKLE—DOWN.

COBOURG, Oct. 29.—(Special). —The marriage took place last Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Down, Alnwich Township, of Ethel Hilda, their youngest daughter, to Mr. Earl Skinkle, third son of Mr. and Mr. Korah Skinkle, Warkworth. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore white satin, with pearl trimmings, and wedding veil arranged with orange blossoms, and carried white roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Edna Down, wearing sand crepe de chine and carrying pink roses. Miss Vera Varcoe played the wedding march. Mr. Charles Skinkle was groomsman for his brother, Rev. J. N. Lovelace officiated. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Skinkle motored to Cobourg, where they took the train for Niagara Falls and other western points. The bride was wearing a radio blue dress, with sand coat and hat. Mr. and Mrs. Skinkle will reside near Warkworth. — Toronto Globe.

OBITUARY.

AVERIAL PATTERSON.

The death occurred this morning of Miss Averial Kathleen Patterson, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Patterson, of Hamilton.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Charles Shannon, who died Oct. 29th, 1920:
The gates of heaven flew open
And Jesus bid him near
For on earth he'd done his duty
To the ones that loved him dear.

Four long years have parted
But we think of him day by day
And there's a chair that's always vacant
Since he was called away.

PETER VEREGIN DEAD IN BLAST UNDER C.P.R. CAR

Suspicion That Doukhobor Leader Was Victim of Plot —Gas Tank Exploded.

FIVE ARE DEAD

Eleven Others Injured—Rest of Train Was Undamaged.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 30. — J. L. Mackie, British Columbia legislator, Peter Veregin, head of the Doukhobor colony of British Columbia, and three unidentitfied persons, were killed yesterday, when a gas tank exploded on a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train west of Farron station, British Columbia, according to word received here.

Plot Against Leaders.

Nelson, B.C., Oct. 30.—Officers of the Canadian Pacific Railway, after an examination of the ruins of a railway car in which an explosion occurred near here, killing five persons, said that the explosion happened inside the car and could not have resulted from a gas tank.

The explosion set fire to the ruins which were consumed. The rest of the train was undamaged. Two of the victims were killed outright, two died on the way to Castlegar and another on the final stage to Nelson. The gas tank that exploded was the large cylinder used under day coaches containing illuminating gas for the lamps, the gas being obtained in Vancouver in sealed containers. This is said to be one of the first accidents of this nature recorded.

The belief is entertained by company officials that a plot was designed against the life of Peter Veregin, leader of the Doukhobor colony in British Columbia. The official statement of the vice-president, however, concludes that, according to information available, "the explosion was caused by some human agency within the car, either intentional or accidental."

Of those injured Harry Bishop, of Nelson, B.C., is not expected to recover. The injured are being cared for in hospitals at Grand Forks and Nelson.

Eleven Injured.

Eleven other persons were injured. The explosion occurred in the first-class passenger car on train No. 11 on the Nelson-Grand Forks line. The train left Nelson Tuesday night for Vancouver. The explosion set fire to the car, which was consumed. The remainder of the train proceeded to Grand Forks with its passengers and with five of the injured.

Veregin has been Doukhobor leader in Canada for tweny-five years. Back in Russia his sect was led by a woman, on whose death Veregin took charge until driven into exile to Siberia. After that a sleigh travelled 2,000 miles over snow and ice carrying correspondence to keep him in touch with his people. He was released from Siberia to immigrate to Canada to control his followers here, and he has since been a benevolent despot over them in Western Canada, plotting, planning and scheming to advance their cause, but not to enrich himself.

Since last spring some five schoolhouses have been burned as the result of the efforts of the Government to force a modern system of education on them.

FIFTY MILLION LOAN

J. L. ARLITT.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 30.— Ten years ago J. L. Arlitt was just an obscure candy merchant here. Then he began buying municipal bonds—and selling them, too.

To-day Wall Street sits up and takes notice of him.

He has floated a $50,000,000 loan to the Mexican government.

A trip to Mexico City, after the Obregon government had defaulted in the debt agreement with the international bankers, cinched the deal.

Mexico expects to meet the debt through receipts from the oil production tax.

VICTORIA COUNTY "DRYS" ORGANIZED

J. D. Flavelle Recommends Prison Term for Bootleggers —Newton Smale President.

LINDSAY, Oct. 30.—At a meeting of the prohibitionists of Victoria County, held in the Council Chamber yesterday, an organization was effected for the purpose of assisting the Government in the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act. Mr. Newton Smale presided, and the officers of the association were elected as follows:

President—Newton Smale.
Secretary—H. S. Johnston.

The vice-presidents will be representatives from the different municipalities in the county.

Mr. J. D. Flavelle, who was present, was tendered the presidency; he declined to act in that capacity, but assured the meeting that he was behind the movement. He approved the idea of organizing committees in every municipality to handle information and to get behind the authorities in their endeavor to enforce the Act. He believed that, if the Government furnished the facilities, the Act could be enforced. It was cruel, he said, to condemn one officer in a district for his failure to catch the bootleggers. He considered that the crime of bootlegging should be punishable by a prison term. He referred to the manner in which the law was prostituted by certain doctors and druggists, and cited the case of one doctor who had issued over 3,000 prescriptions in three months. This practice, he claimed, could be curtailed if the Provincial License Board had the power to limit the prescriptions issued by any one doctor.

A resolution was passed by the meeting favoring the organization of a Vigilance Committee in every municipality. These committees would be selected by the vice-presidents of the different municipalities and their duties would be to lay definite information against all those who violate the O.T.A., and be prepared to go into court and bear witness.

Another resolution will urge upon the Government the appointment of one doctor and one druggist in a municipality, under salary, on the basis of population, fixed by the Government, who will have the sole authority to issue the prescriptions and fill them.

A resolution expressive of the appreciation of the firm stand taken by Premier Ferguson and Attorney-General Nickle relative to the enforcement of the Act, immediately following the plebiscite vote, was also adopted.

A copy of these resolutions will be forwarded to the Government.

DARROW ARGUES AGAINST DEATH FOR CRIMINALS

NEW YORK DEBATE

Judge Talley Declares Extreme Penalty Only Deterrent to Crime.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Not one of the nineteen men under sentence of death at Sing Sing Prison would be there if they could have afforded good attorneys, declared Clarence Darrow, Chicago lawyer who defended Loeb and Leopold, in a debate at the Manhattan Opera House. He opposed Judge Alfred J. Talley of General Sessions, who argued for retention of the death penalty for murder.

"I'll guarantee," said Mr. Darrow, "that every man awaiting death in Sing Sing is there because he was without a good lawyer. Do you suppose you can get a good lawyer to defend poor clients? No, they are too busy looking after the wealth of great corporations."

The Chicagoan's assertion that the victims of the law were the "poor, the weak and the friendless" came out in reply to Judge Talley's statement that there were enough college graduates in prison to-day to equip the faculties of every college in the land. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Darrow, citing the fact that the old English law had 160 offenses for which the penalty was death, declared that the law was remodelled only when juries refused to convict, despite judges' instructions to the contrary.

The Chairman Intervenes.

Louis Marshall, who presided, took exception to Mr. Darrow's criticism of the bench and especially of his statement that lawyers of the highest type were not assigned to defend penniless defendants. Stepping from his neutral position, Mr. Marshall said:

"It has been said that the Courts never assign first-class lawyers to defend men charged with murder. I can give testimony that this is not true in New York City. DeLancey Nicoll, Samuel Untermyer and Mr. Hornblower were assigned during one term of Court to defend in homicide cases. Another thing, the reformation of the English code was through the judges and against the Parliament. I say this in the interest of a fair view of a great subject and of justice which we do know to be an existing element of our American life."

The debate, held under the auspices of the League for Public Discussion of 500 Fifth avenue, New York, was not free, yet every seat in the big theatre was occupied at prices bringing from $1.65 to $4.40. Lewis Lawes, Warden of Sing Sing, was temporary chairman. He indicated that he was opposed to capital punishment.

"Is it true," he asked, "that rich men escape the chair and that the poor do not?" Well it is possible for rich men to hire able counsel, and thus present his case. Try to find one who went to the chair."

Cites Prison Amusements.

Arguing for the retention of the extreme penalty, Judge Talley asserted that even after criminals went to jail conditions were made rather pleasant for them. The jurist said that movies brightened every evening and that convicts' time was often lightened by performances in Sing Sing and elsewhere by Broadway stars, whom the law-abiding poor outside the jails could not see because they hadn't the money.

"If you go to jail," he said, "you shall be given three square meals a day, supervised by a dietician. Then if you don't like the meals you can get them from a private cafetaria. Even under the able and excellent administration of Warden Lawes, more than half of the Sing Sing prisoners eat otuside. According to the warden's report, about $50,000 was spent in the first six months of 1923 for meals otuside.

"If I as an individual have the right to kill in self defence why has not the state, which is a group of individuals, the right to defend itself against aggression. Does any dispute the right of a nation to kill in defence of its citizens? Those who would seek to take away from the State the power of capital pun-

WU'S INTENTION TO EXTERMINATE FENG

"I have received special instructions from the president's representative, giving me full authority to take whatever steps are necessary to cope with the situation," he said to the diplomatic corps. "My troops from Chekiang, Kiangsu, Hupeh, Honan, Shensi, Shansi and Shantung have been ordered to proceed north to a fixed rendezvous, where more than 100,000 will assemble in a few days. My purpose is to rid the country of this ingrate, Feng Yu-hsiang and with my overwhelming army I hope to restore peace and order. When my army enters the capital I guarantee absolute law and order. I want to assure you that there will be not the slightest disturbance to foreign lives and property. My only purpose is to uproot evil and to support the friendly powers."

Feng Reported Assassinated.

There are persistent but unconfirmed reports in Shanghai that Feng Yu-hsiang has been assassinated. Local Chinese political circles, commenting on the fact that Wu was able to move his crack third regiment without Chang Tso-lin's taking advantage of his weakened front, offer three explanations: First, that Chang dislikes Feng Yu-hsiang more than he dislikes Wu Pei-fu and has an understanding with Wu not to interfere with the ousting of Feng. Second, that Chang severely defeated the 24th regiment, weakening its morale, and third, that the Fengtien generals led by Li Cheng-shen have formed a cabal, declaring their independence of Chang and recognizing the Peking coup.

The 10th division of Chekiang troops, still here, though it was intended to take it north, has assumed a sullent attitude and demands more money. Chang Yuen-ming's Hupeh troops have not yet gone north, though ships are waiting to take them. It is believed that matters will be adjusted and that the troops will leave soon. The attitude of the 10th division is attributable to the return of Lu Hsiao-chao, Lu Yung-hsiang's son from Japan, who is here conferring with the Anfu leaders.

HIGHT TO ASK NEW VENUE

Attorney Gives Notice of Motion, Charges Prejudice

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Oct. 30. —Notice was given Tuesday by Nelson Layman, attorney for Lawrence M. Hight former clergyman of Ina, Ill., that he would file a motion for a change of venue in the cases in which Hight is charged with poisoning his wife Anna, and Wilford Sweetin in order that he might marry Mrs. Elsie Sweetin.

Layman said the venue change would be asked on the ground that prejudice against Hight was so strong he could not get a fair trial.

The sanity hearing for Hight, asked by his attorney, is scheduled to begin to-morrow in the Jefferson county circuit court.

MONTREAL BANK TAKES MOLSON'S IN NEW MERGER

Amalgamation of Two of Canada's Oldest Banks Approved by Minister.

ASSETS BOUGHT

Two Shares Molson's for Three Montreal Plus $10 for Each Molson's.

MONTREAL, October 30. — Official announcement was made last night that the Bank of Montreal had taken over Molson's Bank.

Official announcement gives the deal as follows:

It is announced that with the consent of the Hon. J. A. Robb, acting Minister of Finance, an agreement has been entered into between the Molsons Bank and the Bank of Montreal, whereby subject to the approval of the shareholders ob both banks and the Governor General in Council, the Bank of Montreal is to purchase the assets and assume the liabilities of the Molsons Bank on terms which it is believed will be satisfactory to the shareholders of both institutions.

"The basis of the agreement is that the Molsons Bank and shareholders will receive two shares of the Bank of Montreal stock for three shares of Molsons Bank stock, and in addition a cash bonus of $10 for each Molson's Bank share.

"The Molsons Bank shareholders will receive their regular quarterly dividend in January next, and the shares received from the Bank of Montreal for distribution to the Molson Bank shareholders, will rank for regular dividend as from December, 1924.

"It is unnecessary to add that the taking over of the assets and liabilities of the Molsons Bank by the Bank of Montreal will conserve and extend the facilities formerly given by the Molsons Bank."

Two of the Oldest Houses.

The assumption of the Molsons Bank by the Bank of Montreal combines two of the oldest banking houses in Canada. The Bank of Montreal was founded in 1817 and Molson in 1855. Both have their head offices in Montreal. The directors of the Molsons are all Montreal Bank men with the exception of one who resides in Quebec.

The Molsons Bank had an authorized capital of $5,000,000, and a subscribed capital of $1,000,000, all paid up. It had a reserve fund of $5,000,000. The Bank of Montreal has an authorized capital of $31,175,000, and a subscribed capital of $27,250,000, all paid up. Its rest and undivided profits at the last annual statement were $28,228,567.

A hint of what was coming must have reached the street because there was unusual activity on the stock exchange in Molson Bank shares on Tuesday and yesterday, though as the issue is closely held there was not much trading. The stock, however, jumped six points on Tuesday, and five on Wednesday, to 172.

"A Natural Course."

The Gazette, referring editorially to the transaction, says:

"The taking over of the Molson Bank by the Bank of Montreal is a natural course. The smaller institution is strong and stable. It has behind it nearly seventy years of service, in a fine reputation, and a large and profitable business.

"As long ago as 1855 the Molsons Bank was founded and it is with no small regret the public will feel the disappearance of a bank with which the Molsons name has long been linked. Yet it is the course of things to use a title phrase—in union is strength."

STOCKING BOOTLEGGERS.

MOSCOW, October 29 (United Press). — Ladies' silk stockings have been the ruin of more than one man, but in Russia they are bringing misfortune in an uusual form.

Durig the past month alone, 179 smugglers and vendors of smuggled silk stockings have been arrested and fined to the tune of $26,000.

The stockings confiscated this month are valued at $14,000.

Silk stockings are available in Russia only to the very rich at dizzy prices. This has resulted in widespread smuggling of the treasured hosiery from Germany.

LEADER DEFEATED

H. H. ASQUITH

The Right Honorable Herbert Henry Asquith, who was defeated in Paisley, has had a long and distinguished career in British politics, having run the gamut from an ordinary member of parliament to prime minister. He has been regarded as one of the most able, scholarly and hard working men in the political arena.

Asquith was prime minister at the outbreak of the world war. When the Germans were making their first mad rushes, Asquith, in his usual stolid, quiet way, led his cheering nation into the war. His lack of what was considered the necessary vim in prosecuting the war led to domestic crisis and a coalition government headed by Lloyd George.

HUSBAND HELD FOR SLAYING OF WIFE

Woman's Body Discovered in Abandoned Mine—Quarrel Over Property.

WASHINGTON, N.J., October 30. — An hour after Frank Thomas, Jersey Central section hand, identified as his wife Grace, a woman whose nude, bullet-pierced body was found down an abandoned mine mouth near their home in Glen Gardner, N.J., he was held in the Warren County Jail at Belvidere without bail as a material witness.

State police reported they found in Thomas' effects a deed to the Thomas home which the couple were about to sell to some New York city buyer. The real estate agent arranging the transaction said that, after long dispute and considerable feeling, Thomas had waived his right in the property in favour of his wife.

The deed, according to the agent, bore Thomas' signature to that effect. The deed, so far as the realtor knew, had last been in the possession of the slain woman.

The Thomas home was a small one-storey dwelling in the Rocky Run section of Glen Gardner, remodelled from a school house. The Thomas's sold it several years ago, then bought it back. Watson Rinehart, the real estate man who was helping to negotiate its sale for them a second time, said on Tuesday that from the outset Mrs. Thomas was determined Thomas must "sign off."

He said she threatened him if he did not comply. Much against his will, according to Rinehart, Thomas signed the deed in Rinehart's office to that effect, quitting all claim to the $1,000 or so the transaction called for. Thomas says now that he has not been living with his wife for the past week. Apparently, it was about then they separated.

Husband Ousted Boarder.

The authorities, however, are not disposed to announce conclusions until they have disposed of other circumstantial evidence as well. For one thing, the police learned, Thomas and a boarder, Edward Bean, the same name as that of his wife's family, but no relation, had trouble which ended in Thomas ordering the boarder from the house. There will be further questioning of all concerned.

Mrs. Thomas was apparently murdered on Sunday night when Thomas said he came home and found the house in disorder, a window shattered and bloodstains on the floor. Her body was first seen on Monday by a schoolboy, Matthew Mooney, Jr. His mother would not believe him at first, but the next morning she went with him, and looking down the ten-foot shaft of the old iron mine saw a nude body covered with burlap sacks, resting on a ledge.

The mine, which had not been worked in 20 years and was overgrown with brush and trees, was about twenty feet off the road. It was surrounded by a small woods

LABOR ROUTED; CONSERVATIVES GAIN MAJORITY OVER ALL OTHERS IN BRITISH ELECTION RETURNS

MAJORITY OVER ALL.

(By LLOYD ALLEN, United Press, Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The Conservative Party, headed by the Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin appeared to-day to have won a clear majority of Parliamentary seats of all other parties in the British general election.

A tremendous Conservative landslide—started by the cry of "Bolshevism" and given impetus at the last moment by the Zinoviev letter—swept the country yesterday.

Voters who gave Great Britain its first Labor Government ten months ago, turned from Ramsay MacDonald and his colleagues to the Conservatism of Baldwin.

With the forecast of a majority for the Conservatives fulfilled, ex-Premier Baldwin will be able to form a ministry and carry on in Commons without the necessity of effecting a coalition with the Liberals.

The Daily News, Liberal, conceding defeat, said this morning:—"It looks now as though the Tory majority in the new Parliament would not only be absolute, but strong enough to ride rough shod over a united opposition."

With a majority of 183 over their combined opposition, which will in all probability be stretched to nearly two hundred, the Conservative party, under Stanley Baldwin, was returned to power in the general elections yesterday. At 5.30 this afternoon, 384 Conservatives had been returned, together with 148 Laborites(40 Liberals and 13 representing other parties. Seats heard from total 585, or thirty short of the total number of constituencies in the country. Gains for the Conservatives numbered 143, while Labor lost 40 and Liberalism lost 104. The only other gain was that of a Communist in Battersea over a Liberal. The utter rout of the Liberal and Labor parties means that the Conservtaive party may be able to stay fixed in the Governmental saddle for the full parliamentary lifetime of five years if they so desire, so strong was the tide that carried them to triumph.

STRONGEST MAJORITY.

The Conservatives have returned to power with one of the strongest majorities recorded during the past century. In this sweeping political change, the Liberal party has sunk to the weakest position it has experienced since the realignment of the British political parties more than ninety years ago at the time of the Reform Bill.

There was no part of the country in which the Tories did not increase their strength. They recaptured long lost seats in cities and rural districts alike.

Labor held tight its grip upon most of the congested areas in the great urban centres but some of these shifted to Conservatives.

Despite their huge majority in the number of seats, the Conservatives had polled only seven votes to each of Labor's five in the 540 con-

Standing of the Parties On Dissolution of House

LONDON, Oct. 30 — (Canadian Press).—The standing of the parties in the House of Commons on October 9, when parliament was dissolved was as follows:

Labor 187; Conservatives 246; Liberal 156; Ulster Unionist 11; Cooperative 6; Independent 3; Independent Liberal 2; Nationalist 2; Sinn Fein 1; One vacant seat.

The total membership of the House of Commons is 615 but at dissolution there was a vacancy for the London University constituency caused by the death of Sir S. Russel Wells, the Conservative member.

British Election Summary.

With 585 seats heard from having only 30 to report, the standing in the British Election this afternoon was:

Conservatives, seats won 384; net gain 143.

Labor, seats win 148; net loss 40.

Liberals, seats won 40; net loss 104.

Other parties, seats won 13.

tests, which had been fully tabulated this evening.

The Liberal press generally agrees that the result was a "panic vote."

Canadian General Lost.

Major General J. E. B. Seeley, who commanded the Canadian Cavalry division in the world war was defeated in the political arena in the Isle of Wight.

Among the mighty fallen is Frank Hodges, Civil Lord of the Admiralty in the MacDonald government, who was defeated at Lichfield by a Conservative who had a majority of 2,000.

MacDonald himself won his seat at Aberavan with a majority of 2,000 over his Liberal opponent. Lloyd George continued his triumphant

MACHINERY FOR EMPIRE CRISIS

SHOULD CO-OPERATE

OTTAWA, Oct. 30. — (Canadian Press).—Some kind of machinery which would be adequate for normal times and enable the British Empire in a crisis to act as one in the common interest, was urged by Col. John Buchan, noted historian and novelist, in the course of an address to members of the Canadian Club at at luncheon here yesterday.

He urged co-operation as far better than isolated action. The old way of delegating foreign policy to the government of one state in the Empire, the British Foreign Office, was out of date. Independent states could not be bound to decisions in which they were not parties, he said. Co-operation of the Dominions was immensely desirable on the grounds of efficiency.

Col. Buchan said that in his view the result of the experiment of a Labor Government had been that the Labor party had accepted once and for all the British Empire as a foundation of policy.

"They are practical Imperialists," he said, adding that he believed Colonial Secretary Thomas was the most "fruitful and vigorous mind" that had been applied to the Colonial Office since the days of Joseph Chamberlain.

A PIONEER MINER DIED EARLY TO-DAY

David Alexander Dunlap, Widley Known Mining Magnate Passed Away.

TORONTO, Oct. 30. —(Canadian Press). — David Alexander Dunlap widely known mining magnate and one of the founders of the Canadian National Institute of mental hygiene died early this morning, at the age of 61 years, after an illnessf of some months.

Mr. Dunlap was a man of varied interests but it was in connection with the Hollinger Mines that he was best known. He was one of early pioneers in the Porcupine district where, in association with the Timmins and McMartin he acquired interest in a large number of mining claims, chief of which were four claims comprising of the original Hollinger Mine and surrounding claims formerly known as the Acme and Milleton properties, out of which grew the Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines Ltd., of which Mr. Dunlap was vice president and treasurer. Mr. Dunlap is survived by his widow, one son Moffatt attending St. Andrew's College and one sister, Mrs. Frank Cochrane, widow of the late Hon. Frank Cochrane.

PRINCE NEARS HOME.

ON BOARD THE S. S. OLYMPIC, Oct. 30.—(United Press).— Satisfied with his American trip the Prince of Wales is nevertheless glad to be home, after a good rest. The Prince is spending his last whole day of the trip playing squash, dancing and playing shuffle aboard with children who don't realize who their partner is.

The Olympic will arrive at Southampton to-morrow at 1.30 p.m.

TWO WOMEN FINED.

TORONTO, October 30. — Heavier fines were imposed by Magistrate Cohen in the women's court yesterday, for breaches of the O.T.A.

Mary Weisblatt, convicted of selling liquor, was sentenced to a fine of $300 or four months plus one week in jail.

For illegal purchase, instead of the usual fine of $50, Lillian Patterson was fined $100 and costs or two months in jail.

HOW TO GET A FARM.

CHICAGO, October 29 (United Press). — Returns show that 33 per cent. of the farm land in the United States was acquired via matrimony. The Sears-Roebuck agricultural foundation has completed a survey of the land tenure problem.

While no figures are availble from the past, 33 per cent. is believed to represent a marked increase in marriage titles for the past quarter-century.

In five north central states, an average of 8.4 per cent. of the farm owners hold their land by marriage. The biggest percentage lies with seaboard states.

Are You Fat? Just Try This

Thousands of overfat people have become slender by following the advice of doctors who recommend Marmola Prescription Tablets. These little fat reducers are made from the same formula as the famous Marmola Prescription. If too fat, don't wait—go to your druggist now and for one dollar (the same price the world over) procure a box of these tablets. If you prefer you may secure them direct by sending price to the Marmola Co., General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich. They reduce steadily and easily. No need for tiresome exercise or starvation diet and no unpleasant effects.

GRAIN THEFT CHARGED.

Three Otonabee Men Appear In County Police Court.

In Magistrate O A. Langley's County Police Court yesterday William John O'Leary and Robert Heffernan were charged with stealing grain and Russell Wattman was charged with receiving stolen grain.

They were remanded until Tuesday next.

ALD. MEYERS RETURNS

On his arrival from Toronto, where he has been in hospital over twelve weeks suffering from a severe illness, Alderman J. W. Meyers was met yesterday by Mayor J. J. Turner and Alderman Walter Stockfer.

Alderman Meyers has been missed from the deliberations of the City Council, where his voice was always raised in the interests of sane civic government.

COBOURG NEWS

COBOURG Oct. 30.—An instance of the Government being called upon to pay for the "spirits" required for the proper prosecution of works of construction is afforded in the unpublished history of Ontario. In 1782 and 83 the Government engaged Robert Clark of Evertown to erect the Kingston mills. In 1785 he was given a contract to erect a mill at Napanee. He was systematic and kept on account work, which later fell into the hands of Dr. Wm. Carniff, through kindness of the former's descendants, and in it among others, were following entries: March 23, 1876: For raising the sawmill, 2 gallons and 3 pins of rum. April 20: 1 quart of runm, 2s. May 25th: 4 gallons and 1 quart of rum for raising the grist mill, 7s 6d. 26th: 1 quart of rum for the people at work at the dam. On July 20 the Government was again charged with 3 quarts of rum and a few days later a pint was required.

JURY ALLOWS $7,500 DAMAGES TO CECILLA ROGERS FOR LOSS OF HER EYE IN MOTOR SMASH

Hon. Mr. Justice Orde Commends Jurors for Their Just Verdict.

OUT LESS THAN HOUR

Claim Was for $15,000 Against Walter T. Bellegham

TAKE APPEAL.

Judgment for Cecilia Rogers in the sum of $7,500 was given yesterday evening in the case in which she sued Walter T. Belleghem for $15,000 for damages said to have resulted from injuries sustained when the defendent negligently drove his automobile against the car in which she was riding on July 5 last.

The jury was out less than an hour and found its verdict along the lines suggested in the summing up by Mr. Justice Orde. Six questions were suggested to be answered, covering the scope of the jury's inquiry.

Mr. Gordon is now preparing an appeal from the judgment entered against him.

The hearing of this case closed the Fall Assizes, presided over by Hon. Mr. Justice Orde. V. J. McElderry was the successful counsel acting for the plaintiff, and G. N Gordon, K.C., handled the defence, assisted by J. A. O'Brien.

Argument of Counsel.

All the evidence in the claim was concluded at 1.45 yesterday, and after a discussion of the issue by Hon. Mr. Justice Orde, counsel proceeded to argue the points raised.

G. N. Gordon, K.C., defending Mr. Belleghem, claimed contributory negligence and declared his client was unable to see the approaching car through the veil of dust and fog that lay in the hollow. Mr. Bacon, Mr. Gordon averred, could see the non-glare lights on Mr. Belleghem's car reflected from the white surface of the road.

Attacking the system pursued by constables in getting information from shaken men, Mr. Gordon declared in this case Belleghem was not in a position to give any lucid information at the time he was questioned at the police station.

Mr. Bacon, Mr. Gordon said, had lights of 21 candle power strength, which blinded Mr. Belleghem. Miss Rogers, being an adult, should have appreciated the fact that danger resulted from the seating of three persons in the front seat of a narrow car.

On this point Hon. Mr. Justice Orde remarked that even if Bacon was negligent there was no contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff unless she was a party to it.

Gordon Mein's was the feature evidence of the day, Mr. Gordon said. Mr. Mein made five trips a day to Chemong throughout the week and seven on Saturday. He knows the road from end to end. When he says he had to stop three times that night because of the heaviness of the mist and dust, in his care for his passengers, his evidence is worthy of credence.

Mr. Gordon denounced Bacon for claiming $1500 for a car he bought two years ago for $495. The claim has not been pressed yet, but Mr. Gordon insinuated that its prosecution would be easier if his client was held responsible in the present case.

Mr. Belleghem was doing nothing criminal in carrying liquor from his home in Peterborough to his cottage at Chemong, Mr. Gordon claimed. He was lawfully on the highway; lawfully passing another car going in the same direction; he did not see the misty air or dust screen; and when Bacon's car emerged suddenly the collision was a pure accident.

Mr. Gordon submitted it was very fortunate that Miss Rogers only lost her eye, which does not impair her earning power as the loss of a limb would, or as the loss of the eye would if she were a clerk. The scars will disappear and the loss of the eye will be scarcely noticeable.

V. J. McElderry.

Mr. McElderry submitted that the evidence indicated a reckless disregard of the safety of others as Belleghem turned around the other car without knowing what was ahead.

There is no hand brake on a Chevrolet car, Mr. McElderry said, and the persons in the front seat could not interfere with its working or with the running of the car. "If the three were of the portly build of my learned friend," Mr. McElderry said, "I could readily conceive that they would be crowded, or in fact might not be able to get into the seat. But all of these were of slight build."

Bacon was entitled to be where he was, and in six seconds from seeing the two cars coming down the hill he had no chance to do anything. He was trapped. " All he could have done would be throw his car into the air and allow Belleghem to drive underneath and unfortunately motor cars are not built to do that—yet."

Regarding the lights on the car, Mr. McElderry pointed out the law that where the lights are more than 4 candle power with reflectors behind them they must not cast their glare in the eyes of an approaching motorist at 75 feet. Suppose they were not equipped with deflectors, that means they were casting their full glow to the heavens and were more visible than even the law demands.

It is not contrary to the law to have three persons in the front seat, but all the charges against Belleghem are covered by the Highway Traffic Act.

(1) No intoxicated person shall drive a motor vehicle. Facts and circumstances cannot lie. There was a half emptied bottle of whiskey in Belleghem's car. Do you remember when Robinson Crusoe came on the foot print in the sand? That was a fact, and it was startling.

"Shake Hands Old Fellow."

What is the first thing a drunken man said when he met you on the street in the old days?

"Shake hands old fellow, shake hands."

That is the first thing Belleghem does. He has just been in the most atrocious accident imaginable and he goes to the man he has injured and says: "Shake hands, old man."

Bacon doesn't want to shake hands but finally does so to pacify him.

Then Belleghem says "Have a cigarette" and again Bacon takes one to pacify him.

Belleghem says "We'll all soon be dead."

Can you attribute that remark to any other thing than drunkeness?

When Belleghem was passing that car there were six strong lights blazing on the road in front of him and he says he did not see the fog or dust or whatever it was or the approaching car. Was that the action of a drunk man or a sober man?

There was a lady in the car with Belleghem that night, and if anyone in the world knows his condition, she does. But she is not here to tell.

(2) No racing is allowed on the highway. Witnesses say two cars passed them, Belleghem leading. At the scene of the accident Belleghem was not leading but was trying to pass, and Belleghem says the other man was crowding him. What does that show but that Belleghem was racing? He had been passed and was trying to get the lead again.

(3) Passing other vehicles on the highway is prohibited unless and until the travelled portion of the highway in front and to the left of the car in front is safely free from approaching traffic.

Belleghem attempted to pass when the road was not free at all.

What Is It Worth?

"What happened there to Bacon might have happened to you or to anyone. If you had been there it certainly would have happened. Suppose you had been there and one of you had lost his eye through the reckless and furious driving of this man?"

Mr. McElderry pointed out the dangers of factories and especially for this girl with 35 degrees of her sight cut off. To the infirmities of old age must be added to this handicap. Her mother is a widow, and she must rely upon her own skill to make her living.

Mr. McElderry referred in touching tones to the loss in the attractiveness suffered by the victim of a tragedy such as this. "The beauty of the human countenance is one of the most wonderful things in the world and the eyes are the most attractive part of the face. The eyes say "thank you" long before the lips frame thanks for a kind deed and show pain before expression is given to it. They are the windows of the soul.

You would not take $500 a year to do without one of your eyes, and in an average life that would be $20,000. You wouldn't take that."

Mr. McElderry pointed out that Miss Rogers has actually lost $1378 in cash, but this is not the principal loss in a case where the girl is just starting life.

Charge to the Jury.

In opening his address to the jury Hon. Mr. Justice Orde said he did not think there would be much difficulty in arriving at a conclusion. The case rests on simple outstanding facts. Plaintiff is travelling as a guest in the car of a friend, proceeding up a hill upon its own side of the road, wide enough for three cars to pass easily.

While there that motor car is struck by another coming down upon its wrong side of the road.

You are to determine whether Belleghem's car was justified in being where it was.

It is a matter of common sense having regard to the provisions of the Highway Traffic Act that the car on its own side of the road has the right of way.

His Lordship thought everyone would agree with him that the seating of three persons in the front seat was dangerous and reprehensible. It cannot be said that her being there had anything to do with bringing Belleghem to the wrong side of the road. Bacon was as near his side of the road as he could be expected to drive and as close as anyone driving in the opposite direction could anticipate. He was not bound to drive his car in the ditch to avoid the oncoming car. "In those circumstances what does it matter whether there were two or three in the seat? If I were finding in the case I would be inclined to find that there is no contributory negligence, but you are the judges of fact.

The questions submitted to be answered by the jury were:

1. "Was the defendant Walter T. Belleghem guilty of negligence?
2. If he was negligent, in what did his negligence consist?
3. Was the plaintiff, Cecilia Rogers, guilty of negligence or contributory negligence?
4. If she was negligent, in what did her negligence consist?
5. At what sum do you assess the entire sum to be awarded?
6. If you find the plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence, in what degree was each party in fault: plaintiff Cecilia Roger—%; defendant W. T. Belleghem —%?

On being told that any ten men agreeing on a question settles it, the jury retired at 4.30 and returned with the verdict at 5.25.

Answer to the questions suggested by the court were: 1. Yes. 2. Not taking proper precautions in passing the car ahead. 3. No. 4. No answer. 5. $7,500. 6. No answer

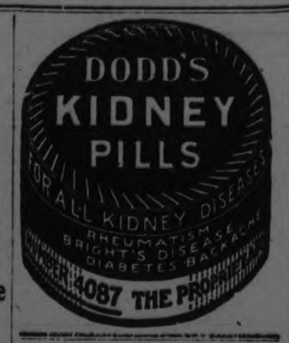
Official Guardian.

In view of the infancy in law of the plaintiff, who was 18 on April 22 last, His Lordship decided to make the sum of the damages payable to an official guardian. The expenses entailed in doctors' bills and immediate needs will be paid and the balance held in trust until Miss Rogers is 21 years of age.

A stay of 15 days was granted.

Commends Jury.

His Lordship considered the verdict of the jury the right one under the circumstances, and the allowance a fair one. He questioned whether any sum could compensate for the young lady's injury, as the loss of an eye is impossible to measure in dollars and cents. "On the whole," he told the jury; " I think this verdict a very fair and just one."



NEW LAMP BURNS 49% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even bettert than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U.S. Government, and 35 leading uniersities, and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up; is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coil oil).

The inventor, F. S. Johnson, 246 Craig Street W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

GERMANY SEEKS BRITISH TRADE

Berlin Banking Firm Seeks Connection With English Capitalists.

UNDER DAWES PLAN.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(United Press).—The concentrated effort of German traders to revive business relations between Great Britain and Germany is under close scrutiny of U. S. Department of Commerce economists.

Success of failure of British and German traders, manufacturers and financiers to work together to mutual advantage is of great importance to the United States, they say. With extensive trade intercourse between two such great producers and consumers, there must naturally be a pronounced effect on the business of both with this country.

Records transmitted to the Department from its London trade commissioner's office, show that 15,000 Germans visited the United Kingdom in the past six months. They may be called "ground floor" Germans as they were making plans to enjoy any trade revival resulting from the Dawes Plan application and the lapsing of the McKenna duties and the Anti-Dumping provisions of the British Safeguarding of Industries Act.

An example of this the London Commissioner reports, is the following advertisement in a London paper "Germany,

"Berlin Private Banking Firm of good standing seeks connection with English capitalists and industry groups with a view to procuring credits for first-class German industry works. The banking firm possesses a ware department which is prepared to sell English goods to Germany, and wants to establish agencies for all English branches of industry. Large exhibition rooms and good organization at disposal. Junior principal will proceed in a short time to London. Please address offers to J. M. 12489, care of Advertising Agency, Rudolf Mosse, Berlin, S. W. 19."

"It will be noted" the report states, "that the advertiser gives only his initials—but his tact is more noteworthy for, in seeking British capital to enable goods to put in process in Germany for ultimate sale, in part, in the United Kingdom he speaks of his readiness to find outlets for British goods in Germany.

"The effect of the Dawes settlement on British exports and on German 'dumping' in England is explain de in diametrically opposite ways by different interest. The coal industory has made the most definite attack on the whole arrangement.

"A number of Britishers with memories that reach back to 1914 have voiced their ideas on Anglo-German trade. For example, upon conclusion of the London Conference on the Dawes report a woman wrote her bank that she would withdraw her deposit in order to prevent it being loaned to Germany.

"But trade does not follow the flag and trade relations are not restored by flag-waving."

Soaking takes the place of rubbing—

JUST by soaking the clothes in the suds of this new soap, dirt is gently loosened and dissolved.

Even the dirt that is ground in at neck-bands and cuff-edges yields to a light rubbing with dry Rinso. Not a thread is weakened. The mild Rinso suds work thoroughly through and through the clothes without injury to a single fabric.

Rinso is made by the makers of Lux. For the family wash it is as wonderful as Lux is for fine things.

All grocers and department stores sell Rinso.

Can Left on Stove Burst in a Stirling Home.

STIRLING, Oct. 30.—Miss Esther Green, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Green, suffered from a severe accident on Tuesday morning. A can of floor varnish became overheated on the stove, and she undertook to move it when the can burst, the varnish flying over her face, hands and chest. The burns are quite extensive and severe, but she is resting quite comfortably to-day.

Hallowe'en

The kiddies will be calling on you this Hallowe'en. They'll come as clowns and cowboys, and big Indian Chiefs. Girls will be boys and boys will be girls, for once! Make it a night of fun!

Greet them this year with a two or five pound box of Moir's. Let them all "dig in" and then hear what they say about you.

And if it's the night of the big party for your own hob-goblins, sweeten it up for them and their little friends. Let them eat all they want, because the wholesome deliciousness of Moir's will never harm them. Make a note of it—Moir's for Hallowe'en.

For want of a spoon

FOR want of a spoon—or to be exact—for want of a dozen of them and the rest of a well-rounded silverware equipment, many a family has lost the habit of "giving parties." And, as a consequence, has suddenly found itself left out of other people's parties. Life has become unnecessarily dull—especially for the sons and daughters!

* * * *

Does your present silverware make it easier to give the parties that would mean so much to your family's happiness? Or have you lost the habit of entertaining because your silverware is no longer sufficient for the guests you would invite?

Truly it is unnecessary to let lack of silverware stand in the way of entertaining. In "1847 Rogers Bros." you can add just the pieces you need—conveniently and at small expense—coffee spoons, salad forks, orange spoons or serving pieces. Their beauty will add distinction to every table setting. Their durability has long been accepted. Leading dealers throughout the Dominion carry this finest silverplate.

May we send you a copy of our booklet, "Etiquette, Entertaining and Good Sense"? Its illustrations of table settings are authoritative to the last degree. You will find it full of suggestions for successful entertaining. Write for it to-day. Meriden Britannia Co., Limited, Hamilton, Ontario.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS.

As this article is written, early this morning, the first returns from the British elections would seem to indicate a chance that the Conservatives will have an independent majority in the House, it being certain, of course, that they will remain the largest party.

While the early results do not show anything in the nature of a landslide, overwhelming the Labour party, the Conservatives have made notable gains in many districts, and in seats where the representation was not changed, have won by increased majorities. In the midlands seat after seat that was lost over the protection issue the last election has swung back to the Conservative side, and if there is anything in the old slogan, "As Lancashire goes so goes England," a Conservative triumph is foreshadowed, for in that county the Baldwin party has made a fine showing.

Most observers predicted heavy Liberal losses, and the early returns all go to confirm these predictions. The Liberals dropped many constituencies to the Conservatives, and out of the 237 seats reported but 21 Liberals were elected. Among the slain was H. H. Asquith, former Liberal Premier.

CELEBRATING HALLOWE'EN.

Tomorrow night is Hallowe'en, which suggests the thought that the methods of the so-called "good old days" have disappeared from the celebration of this anniversary.

The change is a welcome one.

Not so very long ago the occasion was hailed as providing a license for a lot of horse-play that too often ended in serious property damage.

Hallowe'en was taken advantage of by the irresponsibles of the community to pay off old scores in some cases and in general to do all the mischief that inventive minds could plan.

The result was that many citizens found themselves considerably out of pocket by the time they had paid for all the damage that had been done their property by Hallowe'en marauders.

The present-day celebration which substitutes harmless fun for the vandalism that once was prevelent, is much more wholesome and sensible.

The youngsters of 1924 manage to have a good evening's amusement without resorting to the pranks that were once considered the height of humour when their parents were their age.

"The good old days" is a much-used expression that doesn't mean very much, and the change in the manner of celebrating Hallowe'en is just another evidence that in spite of pessimists the world is changing for the better.

BY-ELECTION TALK.

Mr. J. A. McCausland, one of the Toronto members of the Legislature, it is rumoured, may resign his seat if the Ontario Government does not "do something for Toronto" along the lines of Government sale in that city in recognition of the large "wet" majority rolled up there last Thursday.

Mr. McCausland is, of course, a recognized "wet" leader, and it is possible that he may go so far as to force a by-election.

But what in the name of common sense would be gained by anybody if he did?

The result would prove nothing.

Mr. McCausland would be re-elected, that is inevitable, for his constituency is largely "wet."

But what of that?

It would merely show what everybody already knows, that the people of his riding want Government control.

Some of the Toronto members doubtless have to continue the argument, because of the views of their constituents, but the Government has accepted the verdict of the majority, as it was bound to do, and talk of by-elections is only wasting time.

Mr. McCausland is merely doing some shadow-fighting, and even the Toronto Telegram appears to have deserted him.

SHE FEARS FOR THE HOME.

The kitchenette apartment is destroying family life and interests, Marie G. Merrill warned the Playground and Recreation Association at its convention recently.

Discussing the old-fashioned home, she says: "Mother was not too busy to occasionally make candy or popcorn, and father and mother were not above playing games which the children could enjoy.

"Nowadays a large percentage of our children live in a place which has not much space between its four walls. They come in at evening time. Mother kills a couple of cans and they have dinner. A door is opened and a bed drops down. Father and mother go out for creation and the children hunt theirs."

Alas! this is a true picture—but not in as many homes as is often feared. It is temptingly easy to observe a few homes that are such in name only, and to jump to the conclusion that these are typical.

Invention, modern industry, high rents, changed customs, the passing of alleys and large yards as playgrounds—all these, indeed, have changed home life.

But the average home, for instance, does not live out of a tin can any more than former generations lived out of glass jars. All cannot afford fresh fruit or vegetables "out of season" and brought from afar. The tin can is a blessing. It is progress.

As regards the folding bed: If anyone prefers the old-time mattress of corn husks and bedsprings of rope, to the modern mattress and steel-coil springs, welcome to it!

And Willie, building a radio while pa and ma go to a movie, may be no worse off than the old-time youngster who played tiddledeewinks or parcheesi with pa and ma. And there still are plenty of homes where mothers make candy and pop corn.

The modern home has, undoubtedly, lost much. In particular, its outdoor surroundings—large open spaces where youth can frolic and romp in abandon and get plenty of fresh air. The only substitute for these, as long as parents are not wise enough to raise their families in or near the country, is the park or public playground.

We cannot have too many of them.

Speed the work.

LIBBEY AND DOCKSTADER.

The world often forgets most easily those to whom it owes most. Once a popular figure has passed from the public eye, the ingratitude of forgetfulness is more common than the graciousness of remembrance. Forty years ago the books of Laura Jean Libbey were to be found in every book store, on every library shelf, in the box of every servant girl, and in the kitchen drawer of every middle-aged cook. For Miss Libbey had hit upon a prescription in fiction that possessed an almost universal appeal. She wrote of love, passionate, ardent, enduring, crossed but triumphant, and she wrote of it with an enthusiasm that communicated itself to her readers in an astonishing measure. Her lovers endured frightful hardships and incredible oppression, were faced with appalling obstacles and the most bitter of crosses, but they always came out on top in the end. Every story she wrote of love ended with the jangle of wedding bells, the hurling of old shoes, and the scattering of rice.

And people read them—read them by the hundred thousand, and literally ate them up. The masses pored over them, and eagerly drank in each saccharine passage, each hectic declaration of eternal affection. It is one of the queer ironies of life that we most delight in that which is farthest removed from the routine of our daily experience. But Miss Libbey did nobody any harm. On the other hand, it is beyond doubt that she gave pleasure to unnumbered thousands during her forty years as an authoress. She provided the feminine sex with that unutterable thrill no words can describe, but which it is the passionate ambition of the vast majority of the sex to experience. The mere fact that it was a thrill of the imagination only in no wise impaired its efficacy of popularity.

So Laura Jean Libbey served her day and generation, in that she added materially to the public stock of harmless pleasure. So did Lew Dockstader, in a different milieu and under different circumstances. His appeal came at the end of the day to a public jaded with toil and eager for anything that would cause them to forget the monotony of the daily round and the common task. He was a purveyor of minstrel humor, and in his day was one of the most popular leaders of minstrelsy. His comedy was clean and he never pandered to the vulgar taste that finds amusement in coarseness. He made millions laugh and he drove gloom from the minds of the multitude. He equally served his public and deserved well at their hands. Now both Miss Libbey and Lew Dockstader are dead, and a new generation has arisen that knows neither—nor cares to know. Fame is as ephemeral as mist; but memories crowd in upon those who find pleasure in recalling the past, and there will be many people today who will find time to give a thought to a beloved writer and a famous entertainer of bygone years.—Montreal Star.

OUR VIGOROUS DEMOCRACY.

In a healthy and virile democracy there will always be conflicts of judgment. Men and women are unable to see alike on a wide variety of issues, and this leads, naturally and unavoidably, to controversy and agitation. All that is possible, however, without weakening the structure. On the contrary, it denotes vigor and independence of thought. Both are necessary to strength and soundness.

In the final outcome, the majority rules. It may not always be right. Decisions are often demanded on questions which admit of different views, and those views vary with changing conditions. The essential for peace and co-operation is that the judgment of the greater number should prevail. If that judgment should be altered by subsequent circumstances or influences, there is always a way open for the assertion of the popular will.

Experience, however, has very definitely disclosed two dangers to the democratic system. The first attaches to numbers. Since majority rule must obtain, safety requires that there should be cast a high proportion of the total number of votes available. Under any other condition it would easily be possible to have a minority appear as a majority. It seems to be necessary to emphasize that point in the light of voting results. For example, it has seldom occurred in any recent appeal to the electorate, whether local or general, that more than 60 per cent. of the total vote has actually been registered.

All democracies have from time to time discussed the expediency of compulsory voting; but that would be a very difficult matter to crystalize into a statute. Nevertheless, it is in the last degree desirable that the responsibilities of citizenship should find expression at the polls. Lacking such expression, there is always the danger that the minority may prevail. One of the most pressing problems of our time is undoubtedly this growing indifference of voters in the matter of exercising their franchise.

The case of women is in point. Last January, for the first time in the history of Ottawa, every adult woman had the ballot within her grasp; and yet in the municipal election which took place in that month, less than 43 per cent. actually went to the polls. Male voters did a little better, with nearly 58 per cent. of their available votes cast. It had been assumed that the very novelty of the situation would have been a stimulus to positive action on the part of women.

The second danger is of an entirely different nature. It arises out of the tendency of the community to break up into classes, and to assert at the polls class consciousness. The direct effect in time will be to weaken the democratic structure as a whole, and to create separations which are opposed to the highest expressions of unity. We have seen a good deal of that sort of thing during recent years, and no one who takes a broad view of national interests can feel otherwise than apprehensive. There is in it the distinct suggestion of peril.

On the whole, however, these things might be regarded as demonstrations growing somewhat naturally out of our exceedingly flexible democracy. It readily permits of such manifestations, and there is always the probability that they will exhaust themselves in that way. At all events, co-operation does proceed, and adjustments do take place. Ideal conditions are perhaps impracticable, no matter how desirable they may be. We blunder along, and, incomplete as may be the expression of popular will, somehow we manage to keep the machine in fair working shape. All will be well so long as we do not lose our ideals.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

"Just a few more days and the golf widow's husband will be home for the winter," says the Ottawa Journal.

The passing of Peter McArthur will be regarded by many Canadians as a personal loss. The Ekfrid writer had a host of readers, who looked forward eagerly to everything from his pen.

So many cases arising directly or indirectly out of the Home Bank failure are being heard that it must keep the lawyers busy getting into the proper courts.

NEVER forget this! It's the first 'cold snap' catching us unawares, that finds the weak spot in throat or chest.

Peps provide the best and handiest means of getting rid of Fall colds quickly and surely. Neglect adds to your troubles later on, most possibly in the shape of a bad dose of bronchial catarrh that lingers through the winter.

The first sign of hoarseness or throat irritation is evidence that you need Peps. Dissolve one or two of these pleasant infection-killing tablets in the mouth right away. Breathe deeply into throat and lungs the powerful healing and germicidal Peps medicine given off in the form of fumes. These cut the phlegm, soothe and purify the tender air-passages and destroy harmful germs that start trouble in throat, and lungs.

Peps remove the cause of coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, etc. By invigorating and fortifying the entire breathing system Peps give valuable resistance against weather dangers.

PEPS
For THROAT & CHEST

IMPORTANT! The immediate 50 per cent reduction in the price of Peps, is only made possible by greatly increased sales, lowered cost of our high-grade drugs & improved methods of manufacture. The public secure the full benefit. They now obtain the same genuine remedy—unparalleled for value & efficacy at 25c. box.

A THOUGHT.

WHEN THEY ARE WISE.

How I enjoy the man who speaks kindly or favorably of his neighbor! How it inspires my confidence in his character!

Genius has given the world plenty of ideas, but from the man who speaks kindly of an acquaintance, we get our ideals.

Put it this way: Few men speak wisely, but all may speak kindly—all wise men are kindly when they are wise.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 30. — One load of export steers, 1,450 pounds each, was bought at $7.25 a cwt., but another load of coarse steers hung fire at $6.25. Export heifers were firm from $6.00 to $6.40, and export cows brought $4.50 to $5.75 a cwt.

There were again very few good to choice butcher cattle for sale, and bunches of plain unfinished steers sold at $5.25 a cwt. The commoner mixed butchers sold from $3.50 to $4.25 a cwt. Butchers' cows were well taken at $3.00 for common cows up to $4.50 for good butchers.

A load of light mixed plain Ontario stockers were selling at $3.75 a cwt. The scales were busy yesterday morning and there will not be much stuff left over.

More calves could be used than are coming in, but the shortage is an advantage to shipper and prices continue strong at quotations. Choice calves are 11 to 12 cents; good calves 10 to 10 1-2 cents medium 8 to 9 1-2 cents, and common calves 6 to 7 cents a pound.

There was a slightly easier feeling to the lamb market on Tuesday, but any reaction in prices did not carry very far. Good light ewe lambs are not hard to sell at 12 cents a pound, but the market is overloaded with heavy lambs that should have been marketed six weeks ago. Buyers are not wanting to pay much over 10 cents a pound for these, and the market was deadlocked up till noon.

Hogs are increasing in the supply and for the week up till yesterday the deliveries totalled about 8,300. The packers' bid stands at $9.25 a cwt. and is being accepted in some instances.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, October 30 (Canadian Press). — Market firm, unchanged. Fresh eggs are very scarce and specials and extras have been advanced about 5 cents per dozen. Shippers at some producing points have found it necessary to bring in storage eggs to supply local trade costing from 40 to 42 cents delivered.

Montreal market firm. Jobbing extras 48 to 49, firsts 38 to 39, seconds 32.

Ottawa market firm. Retailing specials 60 to 65, extras 50 to 60, firsts 43 to 48, seconds 35 to 40.

Winnipeg market firm. Retailing extras 60, firsts 50 to 56, seconds 40.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 30 (Canadian Press). — The foreign demand for Canadian grain here yesterday was limited and no new business of importance was reported. Some business was done on spot in oats and sales of fair-sized lots of No. 2 Canadian Western were made at 1-2 cent per bushel over the November option and rejected oats at 5 cents per bushel under same option c.i.f., Montreal.

The trade in car lots of grain for domestic account was slow, but the tone of the market was steady with Ontario No 3 extra barley selling at $1.08, No. 3 grade at $1.07, No. 2 white oats at 63 cents, No. 3 white at 59.

There was no change in the condition of the local flour situation, the prices for spring wheat grades being steady, but the volume of business showed no marked improvement. Car lots of first patents were quoted at $8.00, seconds patents at $8.15, and strong bakers at $7.95 per barrel. Trade in winter wheat flour was also quiet.

Millfeed was fairly active. A moderate amount of business passed for domestic account in baled hay.

The volume of business was fairly large in a wholesale jobbing way in the egg market, and sales of fresh extras were made at 50, firsts at 42.

The market for potatoes was without any new feature to note.

The receipts of butter yesterday were 1,738 packages, as compared with 5,081 for the same day last week. There was no improvement in the demand from any source which indicates that local buyers have ample stocks on hand.

Receipts of cheese were 2,905 boxes. A stronger feeling prevailed and spot prices were fraction higher with a fair amount of business passing.

New crop beans were quoted at $2.45 to $2.55 per bushel for one-pound pickers.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, October 30 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Demand $4.50
Cables $4.50 3-8

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 30 (Canadian Press). — Corn jumped rapidly in price yesterday, and gave a lift to values in every grain pit on the exchange. Numerous reports were current that husking was showing 50 per cent. reduction from the corn yield which had been looked for.

The corn market closed buoyant, 2 3-4 to 3 7-8 cents higher, with December delivery commanding $1.07 1-8 to $1.07 3-8 a bushel.

Wheat closed firm 1 3-8 to 2 1-4 up, December $1.44 1-8 to $1.44 1-4 and May $1.49 1-2 to $1.49 5-8; oats at 3-4 to 7-8 cent to 1 cent advance, and provisions varying from 25 cents decline to a rise of 32 cents.

MARMORA CHURCH JUBILEE CLOSED

Special Chef From Delora Looked After the Vitals for the Closing Supper.

MARMORA, Oct. 30.—Festivities in connection with St. Paul's jubilee were brought to an enjoyable conclusion on Monday evening by a supper, reception and concert in the Town Hall. Mr. Arthur Hart of Deloro was the chef for the occasion, and able assistance was rendered him by Mr. Arthur Smith of town. At first the gentlemen waiters proved equal to the demands of the patrons, but at 7 p.m. the inrush of the hungry was so great that the fairer sex had to be called out as reinforcements. The attendance exceeded all expectations, and brought mingled feelings of distress and cheer to the services. The onslaught on chicken was so terrific that the late-comers had little or none. Other viands provided, however, well compensated them. The meal throughout was "simply lovely." Among the guests of the evening may be mentioned Archdeacon G. R. Beamish and Mrs. Beamish of Belleville, Rev. John Lyons of Picton, Rev. B. F. Byers and Mrs. Byers of Stirling, Rev. N. R. Stout and Mrs. Stout of Bancroft and Rev. D. R. Clare and Mrs. Clare of town. Mr. E. Guss Porter, M.P., was also present and gave an admirable speech, deputising for Mr. J. Robt. Cooke, M.P.P., who telegraphed inability to speak as advertised. He beautifully eulogized the life labors of the late Canon C. M. Harris, and wished the church a continuation of prosperity in the future as it had enjoyed in the past. Deloro orchestra filled in a good share of the programme with first-class music. Mrs. Ross Hunter as pianist made a favorable impression. A well-acted playette, "Married for Money," was put on by Misses Muriel and Mildred Bedore, Edna Neal and Mabel Archer, under the tutorship of Mrs. F. S. Pearce. The newly formed Deloro Choral Society, with Mr. Ross Hunter as conductor, made their first appearance, and their three numbers indicated that they have a future before them.

The church workers of St. Paul's have cause to be thankful for the extraordinary nice weather on the two days of their project and for the fine attendances at each event.

Personal Mention.

Miss Hilda Phillips was home from Peterborough over the week-end.

Mrs. Robt. Naylor returned from Regina on Friday last after a pleasant two months' stay with her sister.

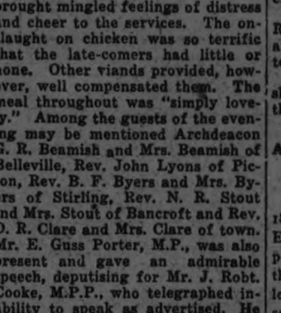
AIRMAIL FORECAST 50 YEARS AGO

BERLIN, Oct. 30. — Writing in 1874 on the postal service between Europe and the United States, the postmaster general of Prussia said the ultimate solution of the problem would be found in a daily mail service by air across the Atlantic.

SO MUCH DEPENDS ON THE LIGHTING

WHAT is more comfortable than good light—and what other comfort so cheap in cost?

A 75-watt Edison Mazda Lamp gives two and one-half times as much light as a 40-watt Edison Mazda Lamp, yet the difference in current cost averages only a third of a cent an hour.



Use light freely—and use it rightly. A living room without a floor or table lamp cannot possess the charm of one containing either or both. Put white or frosted Edison Mazda Lamps in portable floor or table lamps, and clear Edison Mazda Lamps in fixtures that do not permit the eye to see the lamp.

Near you is an Edison Mazda Lamp store, recognizable by the yellow and blue cartons. There you can obtain real information about good lighting.

75-watt gas-filled Edison Mazda Lamp for use in semi-indirect fittings, and fixtures that do not permit the eye to see the lamp.

ANNIVERSARY AT OMEMEE CROWDED

Rev. D. L. Gordon, Of Agincourt, Preached At St. Andrew's Church.

SUPPER ON MONDAY.

OMEMEE, Oct. 29.—Anniversary services were observed in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday, and probably not in the history of the church was there ever a larger congregation than that of Sunday evening, when the auditorium was packed to capacity, and some were turned away rather than stand during the service. There was no service in the Methodist Church, they having kindly withdrawn to join with the sister church in their anniversary.

Rev. D. L. Gordon, of Agincourt, was the special speaker for the day, and with his good clear delivery and ease of speech, he won his way into the the hearts of his hearers when he delivered two excellent sermons. The choir rendered special music at each service, Mr. Norman Deyell assisting in excellent voice by the rendition of "A Clean Heart" at the close of the discourse. The flower decorations were many, consisting of marigolds, asters, salvia, chrysanthemums and other autumn flowers, and were tastefully arranged around the pulpit and altar.

On Monday evening a fowl supper was served in the Sunday schoolroom, followed by a programme in the church, and, again, old St. Andrew's could hardly contain the large gathering after many had partaken of the dinner and preferred to return home rather than remain for the programme.

Prompt on the dot of five o'clock the first arrivals appeared, and not until almost 8.30 did the continued line-up of hungry people show any signs of easing off. A group of thirty-five young people from Lindsay, and many more from the same town, others from Peterborough, Millbrook, Bobcaygeon, and Reaboro, helped to swell the numbers.

The ladies in charge spared no time and care in making the tables look very effective, and too much cannot be said of the willing workers who assisted faithfully and courteously until all had been fully satisfied with the ample supply of fowl, hot potatoes and gravy, salads, jellies, and the abundance of pies, cakes, tarts, etc.

The programme which followed this bountiful repast, was brief. Mrs. E. H. Mitchell, Mr. N. Deyell and Mr. Clarke of Peterborough, with his banjo accompaniment, contributed towards the musical part of the programme, each selection being well rendered and heartily applauded. Rev. D. L. Gordon remained over for the evening's entertainment and appeared on the programme, as did also Rev. E. W. Rowland, who conveyed the greetings and best wishes of the Methodist congregation to the Presbyterians in a few breif words. Owing to illness in the family, the Anglican rector, Rev. A. T. Weir, was unable to be present. The pastor, Rev. J. A. Black, acted as chairman, and in his closing remarks expressed the appreciation and heartfelt thanks of the managers to everyone who had helped make the whole affair a decided success. The proceeds for the evening was $204, and the Sunday contribution was $140.

A.Y.P.A. Banquet.

On Monday evening the A.Y.P.A. of Christ Church held their annual banquet in the basement of the church. The tables were tastefully decorated for the occasion, and the banquet and programme was carried out admirably by those in charge.

Rev. A. T. Weir ably acted as chairman, and after expressing his pleasure on being present with so many young people, he proposed a toast to the King, which was responded to by the singing of the National Anthem. A toast to Canada was proposed by Mr. Willby, who is by birth an Englishman, but who prefers Canada to his native isle. He emphasized the richness of this fair Dominion, and was responded to by Mr. Harry Burgess.

A piano solo was then rendered by Miss Lenore Jamieson, followed by a vocal solo by Mr. W. G. Stephenson.

Mr. Charles Davis, the president of the Omemee branch, proposed a toast to the Society, and expressed his utmost desire to make this a record year in the history of the society.

Mr. Lewis Adams proposed a toast to the Ladies in a humorous manner, and concluded by saying only the ladies could prepare such a dainty supper. Miss Edith Currie responded in a neat speech. Miss M. Pogue then rendered an instrumental piece, and Mr. Wilbert Clemett contributed a vocal solo.

A toast to the men was proposed by Miss Edith Robinson, in which she referred to such great men as Napoleon, Nelson, Edison, Bell, Columbus, Cartier and others. Mr. John Bent responded. In part, he said there were great men in the past, but the women of to-day are fast catching up. The singing of Auld Lang Syne brought a very memorable evening to a close.

Mr. Samuel Stinson was shocked on Tuesday to find one of his working team lying dead when he proceeded to work after dinner. Mr. Stinson had been using the animal to draw water for the building of the foundation of Mr. Fred Parker's new house, and, apparently, the horse was in good condition previous to its death, which, the owner feels, was due to choking.

RUSSIA.

Russia claims that her foreign trade in six months totalled nearly 263 million gold roubles.

This compares very favorably with 120 million gold roubles in the corresponding six months a year ago.

OMEMEE NEEDS HOUSES.

Recent Fires Wiped Out Surplus of Vacancies.

OMEMEE, Oct. 29.—Owing to the fires, the vacant houses are a scarcity at present until repairs can be made to Mrs. B. McQuade's property on Sturgeon Street. Many tenants are also changing their places of residence. Mr. J. White is moving into the Mitchell property on King Street West, and work his own farm, while Mr. W. White will move to his own farm. Mr. F. Brockley will occupy the latter's house opposite the grain elevator, and Mr. Albert Clemett has leased the house vacated by Mrs. Brockley on George Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Parker have moved to Mr. Robert Casey's house, East Emily, in order to be near Mr. Parker's work on the C.N.R., and Mr. and Mrs. G. Hart will occupy their house.

Mr. Tate, of Peterborough, who is making preparation to build a shop to enter into the butcher business, has leased the Earle property on King Street West, recently vacated by Mr. Galbraith.

Mr. Gowans and family move this week to their new house in connection with the Bank of Toronto building.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people wh. enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

CENTREVILLE FOWL SUPPER ON MONDAY

BAILIEBORO, Oct. 30.—The anniversary services and fowl supper held by the friends of the Centreville Presbyterian church on Sunday and Monday, were both "red letter" events in the history of that church.

The weather was most ideal for anniversary occasions. The Centreville people are always favored by having fine weather, and this event is always looked forward to by not only the people of this community, but also many from Peterboro, Port Hope, Millbrook and surrounding district.

Rev. Mr. Anderson, pastor of the Port Hope Presbyterian church, conducted both morning and evening services, delievring inspiring messages at both services to a packed church.

Miss Daisy Murray of Springville was present and assisted the choir with the musical part of the services. The music provided by both the choir and Miss Murray were thoroughly enjoyed by the large congregation.

The thankoffering for both services amounted to about two hundred and eighty six dollars.

On Monday evening the annual fowl supper was held in the Sunday School hall. Tables were set to seat about one hundred and twenty five people, and from five thirty up until nine thirty an eager crowd gathered from both far and near to enjoy one of the most sumptuous suppers that could possibly be set before a crowd of hungry people. About eight hundred people were served with supper, and plenty of fowl and baking was left over, after having set very liberal dishes of fowl, salads, fruit, pastry, etc., before the people present showing that the ladies had provided abundance of eats.

A splendid program was afterwards given in the church. Those taking part were St. Paul's Sunday School Orcehstra of Peterboro. Addresses by Rev. A. H. McConnachie, Rev. Mr. Findlay, Rev. R. M. Patterson. Reading by Mrs. Gerald McClelland of Peterboro; solos by Miss Daisy Murray, Springville, and Mrs. Byers, Peterboro, Mr. Snelgrove, Peterboro; piano solo by member of the orchestra; hawaiian guitar and piano duet by Edwin and Jean Eagleson.

The proceeds of the evening amounted to over three hundred and twenty-eight dollars. Some of those present from a distance were: Dr. and Mrs. Moir and daughter, Dorothy of Peterboro; Dr. and Mrs. Preston of Peterboro; Mrs. John Deyell of Lindsay; Mr. and Mrs. W. Handbridge, Peterboro; D. Westington, Plainville; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Henderson, Plainville; Mr. and Mrs. Grassett, Millbrook; Mr. and Mrs. Hy. Johnston and Dr. Stewart, Millbrook; Misses E. and V. Buckham, L. Johnston, G. Greer, K. Ibister, Mr. and Mrs. Grey, Mr. and Mrs. Robt Johnston all of Peterboro.

JAPANESE FLAPPERS.

Wings of Japanese Flappers in High School Age Are Being Clipped.

TOKYO, (United Press), Oct. 30.—The wings of Japanese flappers of the high school age are being clipped. They are being told they must not be so extravagant and musn't wear expensive, brilliant kimono. To prevent the girls from spending money for things, they don't need—or their instructors think they don't need— they are being rebuked for coming to school in anything but the plainest raiment and for carrying gaudy parasols.

The fastest-cooking cereal

COLDER weather calls for hot breakfasts. Now, you can prepare a steaming cereal every morning in 3 to 5 minutes. Quick Quaker cooks perfectly while you make the coffee.

Quick Quaker is just as delicious and flavoury as the regular Quaker Oats you have always known. It is just as wholesome and nourishing. It is packed in the same sealed cartons.

The only difference is that in Quick Quaker, the grains are cut in two, rolled thinner and partly cooked before packing. Because of this, it cooks perfectly in less time than it takes to boil coffee or fry eggs.

Your grocer has both kinds of Quaker Oats now. Get whichever kind you prefer. Look for the picture of the Quaker on each package.

LABOR ROUTED

MacDonald Satisfied.

"Defeat is sometimes the finest thing that can happen to a party," declared Premier MacDonald to-day, when he also remarked that he did not envy the Conservatives their job.

Former Premier Asquith, defeated in Paisley, denied that he would retire from public life. "I will stand again," he declared.

Lloyd George Returns.

Former Premier Lloyd George, Liberal, was reelected in Carnarvon, Wales, polling 16,058 votes to 3,401 for his Labor opponent. Prof. Zimmern. Winston Churchill, contesting Epping division of Essex as Constitutionalist, was re-elected to the House, while Frank Hodges, Civil Lord of the Admiralty in the MacDonald Government, was defeated at Lichfield by a Conservative by a majority of two thousand.

The decline of the Liberals is believed in some quarters to foreshadow their elimination from British politics as a distinct party. Observers see in the returns a strong indication of a preference for the two-party system which stood the test of centuries in this country.

Sure of Majority.

The Conservative party has won 308 seats in the election, ensuring them a majority over all the other parties in the new Parliament, it was announced shortly after three o'clock this afternoon.

Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer in the MacDonald Cabinet, retained his seat in the Colne Valley division of Yorkshire.

Lady Terrington, Liberal candidate in Wycombe, Buckinghamshire, was defeated by a Conservative opponent by eight thousand votes.

Hastings Kept Seat.

Percy A. Hurd, Conservative, well known in Canada as a corresponndent under the pseudonym of "Windermere," notched another gain for the Conservatives in the Devizes division of Wiltshire, with a majority of four thousand.

Major-General J. E. B. Seeley, commander of the Canadian cavalry in the war, met defeat in the Isle of Wight, which he represented as a Liberal in the last Parliament. It was a three-cornered contest, the Conservative having a majority of five thousand.

Attorney-General Patrick Hastings whose conduct of the Campbell prosecution was perhaps the most important indirect cause of Labor's downfall, retained his seat in Wallsend.

Premier MacDonald, at Cardiff today, declared that defeat sometimes was the finest thing that could happen to a party. He asserted that with the present state of trade and the general outlook, he did not envy the Conservatives their job.

CONSERVATIVES CLEAR MAJORITY FROM FIRST

Had 306 Candidates Returned in Results at 3 p.m. To-dey.

Asquith Defeated

Former Premier Herbert H. Asquith went down to defeat along with many of his followers. It had been intimated, during the course of the campaign that if Mr. Asquith were defeated in this election he would retire from politics. This, however, has been denied by him.

The Conservatives made new conquests in all sections of the country. Early returns from the industrial midlands showed that the Conservatives were snatching back seat after seat which the Liberals had won from them last year on the free trade fight against protection. Later, cities in the south and west of England also began to turn in Tory triumphs. The country constituencies, which are largely made up of agriculturists and villagers, which generally vote Conservative, will not be heard from for a considerable time.

The London boroughs which had reported, gave indications that the capital, like the lesser cities, was coming back into the Conservative fold.

Conservative Gains.

LONDON, Oct. 30. — The Conservatives registered gains in the first seven results returned, all three seats at Salford being Conservative gains.

The first announcement of a Laborite elected was Arthur Henderson, Secretary for Home Affairs. The first Labor leader whose defeat was announced was Ben Tillett, in a triangular contest for Salford North. Mr. Henderson's majority was heavily reduced as compared with the last election, but that was due to the intervention of a Liberal candidate, making it triangular. J. Potts, Labor candidate, won in Barnsley, despite the fact that the Conservative candidate retired to leave a straight field between the Liberals and Laborites, but the Labor majority was reduced from 5,000 in the last election to 253.

The University town of Oxford, which in the last election displayed strong Liberal tendencies, seems likely to revert to its former Conservative leanings. The famous oarsman, Captain R. C. Bourne, Conservative, who wrested the seat from the Liberals at a by-election in June, has retained the seat with a largely increased majority.

The pollings, as expected, proved much heavier than in the last election. The first woman elected is a new accession to the House of Commons, Miss E. Wilkinson, national organizer for the National Union of Distributive and Allied Workers, and a representative on the Manchester City Council.

J. A. Parkinson, a member of the Government, and Comptroller of the King's Household, was re-elected for Wigan.

Majorities Increased.

A striking feature of the election was the great increases in the Conservative majorities almost everywhere, even when the representation was not changed. Thus Brigadier-General H. Page Croft, at Bournemouth, increased his majority from 6,250 to 12,885. His unsuccessful opponent was a woman Laborite, Minnie Palister.

Sir F. W. M. Grigg, who was elected for Oldham, was formerly Mr. Lloyd George's secretary.

Gains in Manchester.

The story from Manchester is still of the Conservatives gaining seats lost to the Liberals at the last election. The Rusholme division, which is traditionally a Conservative seat, but was won in the last election by the Liberal, C. F. G. Masterman, on the fiscal issue, now returns to the Conservative fold. The unsuccessful Liberal candidate was helped in his election campaign by James R. Campbell, the editor of the Workers' Weekly, whose Communist activities caused the defeat of the Government in Parliament.

Communist Elected.

The first Communist elected to the new Parliament was S. Saklatvala, who defeated the Liberal member, H. Hogbin, his conqueror in the last election in Battersea North. This, therefore, was a loss for the Liberals.

The vanquished Air Sub-Secretary William Leach, was noted for his pacifist leanings. His pacifist speeches since he was made head of one of the military departments attracted much attention.

Arthur Ponsonby, who was re-elected, was the Minister in charge of the Russian treaty negotiations.

Lady Astor Elected.

Lady Astor's majority was increased from 2,676 to 5,079. The polling: Lady Astor, Conservative, 18,174; Capt. G. W. Brenan, Labor, 13,095.

Leach Defeated.

The Laborite sub-secretary of the Air Ministry, William Leach, was defeated for Bradford Central, polling 16,652 against the Conservative, Lieut.-Col. A. Gadie, 17,854. A Conservative gain.

Arthur Ponsonby, sub-secretary of Foreign Affairs, was re-elected for the Brightside Division of Sheffield.

The Conservatives scored a gain in West Birkenhead, returning J. E. Nuttal, 13,059, against W. H. Egan, Labor, 12,723. This was repeated in Birkenhead East, Lieut.-Col. W. H. Scott, Conservative, receiving 11,328; H. G. White, Liberal, 9,274; and Coulthard, Labor, 7,496.

Clynes Is Returned.

John Robert Clynes, Lord Privy Seal, and deputy leader of the House, was re-elected for the Platting Division of Manchester, but his majority was reduced.

The figures: Clynes, 17,233; F. A. Holmes, Conservative, 16,228; E. Baker, Liberal, 1,538.

The Labor War Minister, Stephen Walsh, was re-elected for the Ince division of Lancashire, with a poll of 18,272. His Conservative opponent, Gabriel, polled 7,820.

In the Darwen division of Lancashire, Sir F. B. Sanderson, Conservative, polled 13,017; F. Hindle, Liberal (present incumbent), 12,082; T. Ramsden, Labor, 5,188. Conservative gain.

Miss Bondfield Falls.

Miss Margaret Bondfield, Parliamentary Secretary for Labor, was defeated for Northampton.

Miss Bondfield, whose record in Parliament is considered noteworthy, was defeated by less than a thousand votes by her Conservative opponent, Sir Arthur Holland.

The polling: Sir Arthur Holland, Conservative, 15,970; Margaret Bondfield, Labor, 15,023; J. Manfield, Liberal, 9,419.

Runciman Returned.

Swansea, West—The Right Hon. Walter Runciman, Liberal, 10,033; H. W. Samuel, Labor, 9,188; W. A. Hewins, Conservative, 8,322; Liberal gain.

Liverpool, West Derby—J. S. Allen, Conservative, 15,667; Adams, Labor, 8,807; C. S. Jones, Liberal, 5,321. Conservative gain.

Greenwood Elected.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, Conservative, former Chief Secretary for Ireland, was elected for Walthamstow, East. He polled 11,312, against J. G. Dale, Labor, 8,346, and P. H. Heffer, Liberal, 3,745. This was a Conservative gain.

A Liberal Gain.

In Battley and Morley, the Liberals made a gain. W. Forrest, Liberal, polling 16,369; B. Turner, Labor, 15,966.

Bath gave a Conservative gain, Captain C. P. Foxcroft, Conservative, polling 16,007; F. W. Rafferty, Liberal, 8,800; and Capt. W. S. Scobell, Labor, 3,914.

Conservative Victories.

Eccles—A. Bethell, Conservative, 16,823; J. Buckle, Labor, 14,789. Conservative gain.

Baldwin's Son Beaten.

Oliver Baldwin, the Laborite son of former Premier Stanley Baldwin, was beaten in Dudley by the Conservative, C. E. Lloyd. The vote was: Lloyd, 11,199; Baldwin, 10,314.

Lincoln—R. A. Taylor, Labor, 11,596; Sir G. C. Hamilton, Conservative, 11,557; A. G. MacDonnell, Liberal, 4,852. Labor gain.

A Heavy Majority.

An extraordinarily significant result was at Wellasey, where the Conservative, Sir R. B. Chadwick, retained his seat, but, whereas in the last election his majority was only 840, in his contest against a Liberal, his majority this time in a contest against a Laborite was 13,965. The figures were: Chadwick, 22,579; Warren, Labor, 8,634.

Mann Badly Defeated.

Tom Mann, the Labor and Communist candidate, was badly defeated in Nottingham, East, E. Brocklebank, Conservative, captured the seat, 11,524; W. N. Birkett, Liberal, 10,078; Mann, 1,448.

Says Crime is Increasing.

"Out of my own experience of 25 years as a counsel for the defence, as a prosecutor and a judge, I say that the only thing the criminal fears is the penalty of death that will follow his crime."

Judge Talley said that crime was on the increase. He said that this city virtually had a murder a day and that Chicago, with less population, had more than New York. Statistics for the twenty-eight principal cities of the United States showed that in 1900 609 homicides were reported, ten years later. The total was 1,363 and from 1917 to 1921 the murders numbered 8,946.

"I deny my adversary's statement that every man's heart tells him not to kill," said Mr. Darrow. 'Everybody loves killing, if you believe in heredity. I used to get a thrill out of reading about the death of Germans during the war. Everybody who loves capital punishment loves it because they get a 'kick' out of it.

"I might say in passing that in all those States where the percentage of homicide is high they have capital punishment. And there is no question that in the States where there is no capital punishment the percentage of murders is lower."

Mr. Darrow argued that the World War was responsible for an increase of murder, "because a great war, always cheapens human life." He said that the State taught killing to citizens and then expected them to forget all about it.

Says It is Inhuman

"I am against capital punishment because it is inhuman," said Mr. Darrow, "and I believe it is only a question of a few years before it will be abolished in every civilized country, including New York. It has no effect whatsoever to stop murders."

In rebuttal, Judge Talley cited a report of the American Bar Association on prevalence of crime, and that that investigation in France and Great Britain, where the war certainly was felt, had not revealed any stimulus of crime traceable to the war. As to charity towards the slayers, something suggested to him apparently by one of Mr. Darrow's remarks, Judge Talley said:

"You can't blow hot and cold on this. You can't ask mercy on one day for a man because he is poor and weak and abject, and on the next one ask for mercy because the man is rich and overeducated."

Mr. Darrow reiterated his poor opinion of the quality of lawyers assigned to defend impoverished murder defendants and said that a search of the Tombs and Sing Sing would find that one out of every 1,000 there was rich. He referred to Judge Talley's citation of the American Bar Association report and asked:

"What do you suppose the American Bar Association knows about this thing?"

"As much as you do."

"Well," said Mr. Darrow, "you don't know what you are talking about. They are too busy defending corporations. They leave it to the criminal lawyers."

Vote on the winner of the debate will be by mail, ballots for the purpose having been printed in the programs.

HERE'S THE WAY TO HEAL RUPTURE

A Marvelous Self-Home-Treatment That Anyone Can Use on Any Rupture, Large or Small.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY

Ruptured people all over the country are amazed at the almost miraculous results of a simple Method for rupture that is being sent free to all who write for it. This remarkable Rupture System is one of the greatest blessings ever offered to ruptured men, women and children. It is being pronounced the most successful Method ever discovered, and makes the further use of trusses, appliances or supports unnecessary.

No matter how bad the rupture, how long you have had it, or how hard to hold; no matter how many kinds of trusses you have worn, let nothing prevent your from getting this FREE TEST TREATMENT. Whether you think you are past help or have a rupture as large as your fists, this marvelous System will so control it and keep it up inside as to surprise you with its magic influence. It will so help to restore the parts where the rupture comes through that soon you will be as free to work at any occupation as though you had never been ruptured.

Thousands of persons who formerly suffered the tortures of old fashioned steel and spring trusses are now rejoicing in their freedom from the danger and discomfort of rupture.

You can have a free trial of this wonderful strengthening preparation by merely sending your name and address to W. A. COLLINGS, Inc., 68B Collings Building, Watertown, N.Y. Send no money. The test is free.

Write now—today. It may save the wearing of a truss the rest of your life.

DIAMONDS.

Nearly every woman owns at least one diamond. And yet if you gathered together all the diamonds in the world you'd have only 42 tons. Three-fourths of these have come from the South African mines within the last forty years.

If German chemists, now apparently on the right track, finally discover how to turn mercury or lead into gold cheaply, it is not improbable that diamonds will become the basis of money systems. Man has centuries of evolution ahead before he will base his money on a sensible, scientific medium such as units of human energy.

There are more armed men in Europe now than there were before the war.

The English House of Lords now has nearly 100 more members than the House of Commons.

COINS CENTURIES OLD WERE DUG UP

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Interest in excavation of Roman remains seems to be receiving new impetus in many parts of England and work being carried on at Portishead on the Somerset seaboard is yielding highly important results.

These excavations had their beginning after a ploughman casually turned up a small quantity of coins, which upon examination were found to be of Roman origin. The work has now been taken in hand, by an archaeologist, R. E. Goodwin, who reports the recovery of no fewer than 4,000 coins.

"I have already found 4,000 bronze coins," said Mr. Goodwin "and stray ones are being added from day to day. They are excellent preservation and date from A.D. 22 to A.D. 400 (21 years before the Roman conquest of Britain to just before the final evacuation.)

"They belong to practically every period of the Roman Empire, and it is remarkable that apparently no two are exactly alike. The field in which I am working was used by the ancient Britons as a camp, and this was afterwards taken over by the Romans."

WOMAN OF FORTY VICTIM OF CONSTIPATION

Mrs. Fannie White of 678 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Almost every morning, for the last five years I suffered with sick headaches, I felt this was due to nervousness, never dreaming that faulty intestinal elimination caused my suffering. I felt wretched, my appetite was gone, I lost interest in preparing my meals, life was not worth living. A few days' treatment of Carter's Little Liver pills worked wonders. They are small, easy to take—no griping — and leave pleasant after effects."

STIRLING HUNTERS OFF NORTH IN SPECIAL CAR

Peterborough and Keene Men in Party to Parry Sound.

STIRLING, Oct. 30.—The annual departure of the Rock Lake Hunt Club took place on the 6.02 train on Monday morning by special car to their hunting camp, 80½ miles north of Parry Sound.

The following hunters were in the party: J. S. Morton, Dr. H. H. Alger, R. W. Meiklejohn, Thos. Solmes, Wm. Anderson of Stirling, Chas. Dracup of Brighton, R. J. McCamus, Dave Wallace of Keene, T. E. Butler Yeats, Port Hope; C. S. McClelland, Wm. McClelland of Peterboro, Arthur Teney of Toronto, R. A. Elliott, secretary, Stirling, and Chas. Cheverill, chef, Peterboro.

HUSBAND HELD

which adjoins St. Rose's Roman Catholic Church on the edge of the village, perhaps a quarter of a mile away.

The body bore gunshot wounds through the cheek and above the heart, but rigor mortis had not yet set in. The burlap sacks were found to contain a blood-stained bedsheet, together with the woman's personal belongings, all of which had been thrown carelessly into the hole on top of the body.

A small testament in which her name was written led to the questioning of Frank Thomas, and his subsequent identification of the murder victim.

Body Brought by Vehicle.

The police said it was clear that the body could only have been brought there by waggon or automobile. Inasmuch as none of those who had been associated with the dead woman could drive an automobile it was assumed from the first that the murderer had help.

Mrs. Thomas, police said, was better known in Glen Gardner as Grace Bean, her maiden name. She was a member of the Bean family which gained some notoriety a number of years ago when one of Mrs. Thomas' sisters was tarred and feathered.

Mrs. Thomas was 35 years, 3 years older than Thomas. She had bobbed hair and was accounted among her friends as attractive. Her first husband, Albert Frank, was killed in a railroad accident about twenty years ago.

WEDDING BELLS

JORY—HARRISON.

A quiet wedding took place at 4 o'clock, Wednesday, October 29th, 1924, at the manse, Keene, Ont., by the Rev. John Archibald, of Ethel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Harrison, Indian River, Ont., and Ivan H., son of Mr. Franklin Jory, Lakefield, Ont.

The bride wore a brown canton creep dress, with hat, shoes and stockings to match. She also wore a corsage bouquet of sunset roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Jory will reside at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

The parent cast young Tsao adrift and the lad, bethinking himself of a career which would supply his demand for activity and color, sought to enlist at a military camp not many miles from his home. He was rejected because of inability to provide a proper guarantor. Although despondent, he was determined not to return to his family and sheltered himself in a haystack, where he presently fell asleep.

An officer from the camp, strolling through the vicinity, heard the lusty evidences of Tsao's slumber and roused him unceremoniously. In response to the officer's inquiry as to why such a robust young man should be sleeping the day away, Tsao told his story of eviction from home and rejection by the recruiting officials.

The officer became interested, used influence to obtain the waiving of the necessary guarantor in Tsao's place, and the youth enlisted. His rapid grasp of military matters impressed his superiors and a sensational military career, culminating in Tsao's advancement to the highest ranks and elevation to the presidency, followed.

PATRIOTIC.

A leading army officer said Defense Day was a test of patriotism in the United States. Why is it, that patriotism is always associated with war? How about peacetime patriotism?

It's quite as important for a man to live for his country as to be ready to die for it. In peace, of course, citizens are less easily stampeded by hysteria, into letting the tax spenders run riot.

Look ahead to the cold mornings. What a luxury and comfort it is to slip into a warm, soft suit of JAEGER pure wool underwear. How cosy this feels when the wind steals into your overcoat and around your ankles, and in the heated office it is never uncomfortable. That is the beauty of pure wool.

JAEGER pure wool underwear need not be heavy to be warm. In fact it yields the very maximum of bodily heat with the minimum of actual weight. You have only to try pure wool next the skin to realize that it produces warmth only when needed.

Pure wool is Nature's own covering with which she clothes many of her children. And to man she yields the knowledge that allows him to clothe himself in pure wool.

FREIGHTER LOST.

Canadian Lake Boat Glenorchy Went Down in Lake Huron.

DETROIT, Oct. 30.— (Canadian Press.)— Canadian lake freighter Glenorchy, laden with grain from Fort William to Port Coiborne, was rammed and sunk in Lake Michigan yesterday by the steamer Leonard by Miller of Columbia Steamship Company, Cleveland, at a point some 10 miles off Harbor Beach, Mich.

The Glenorchy went down in 20 fathoms of water within a few minutes after the collision. The crew of 21 men and a woman cook were taken off by the Miller without a mishap.

Miller, reported to be badly damaged, is on its way down the lake escorted by the Steamer Samuel Matther. She is expected to reach Port Huron early to-day.

Beauty

A Gleamy Mass of Hair

35c "Danderine" does Wonders for Any Girl's Hair

Girls! Try this! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through the hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance.

While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears Get a bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair becomes.

RED PEPPER FOR RHEUMATIC PAIN

Red Pepper Rub takes the "ouch" from sore, stiff aching joints. It cannot hurt you, and it certainly stops that old rheumatism torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers. Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any good druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

The Affair at Flower Acres

By CAROLYN WELLS

"And—and, Malcolm, whom will you get for yourself?"

"For myself? Why—oh, yes—of course, for myself. Why, well, you see, I hadn't thought of that. But it will be all right, Nan—trust me to make it all right."

"Oh, you are so splendid! Malcolm—why did I marry that awful man? Oh, why did I?"

"Wait a minute—why did you, Nan?"

She looked at him a long moment with a grave regard, and then said: "I can't tell you, Mal—I can't tell you; but, oh, I'm glad he's dead. There, I've said it, and I don't care! I'm glad, glad, glad! I couldn't have lived another day with him!"

"Hush, dear—don't say such things. Now, listen, Nancy, and do just as I tell you. I'm going to send for Lawyer Wadsworth, and he will take you in hand. Tell him everything—tell him about the tablets you put in Raynor's coffee cup—I saw you do it, dear. Tell Wadsworth all about it. Trust him, and he will do more for you than any other man I know of could do."

"But I can't—Mal, I can't tell anybody about the—about the——"

"I'll tell it, then," and Miss Mattie stepped before them.

"Yes, I've been eavesdropping," she said, as they looked at her in dismay. "Or, I can scarcely call it that, as you took no pains to lower your voices very much. Nan, I heard you say how glad you are that your husband is dead. I didn't need that to tell me who killed him—hush, don't say a word—don't add perjury to your other crimes. And I don't say, Nan, but that you did lead a miserable life with him. I know how Douglas treated you—and, Nancy—I know why."

Miss Mattie's voice dropped to a whisper, but her face, although distorted with passion, was that of one who spoke truth.

"Let that rest for a moment, Nan, and tell me what you know about Douglas' will."

"Nothing more than I have told everybody. It was always kept in the secretary drawer. Some one has stolen it.

"Or Douglas destroyed it."

"That may be," Nan agreed. "He was very, very angry at me the day before—before he died, and he threatened to disinherit me—but I didn't think he would do so.

"He couldn't," said Miss Mattie. "A man can't disinherit his wife. And the will must be found. I hardly think he destroyed it."

"Why does old Gannon deny witnessing it?" Finley asked.

"Gannon is an old snake in the grass," Miss Raynor said. "He has some axe to grind, you may be sure. For I know he witnessed that will."

"The other witness, Peters, must be found," said Finley.

"You see, Nan," Miss Mattie went on, "I don't know as that will Lionel has remembers me—properly. In the later will Douglas left me a large bequest. He had much more money of late years, but if that will his son has claims it all, where will we be?"

"Where will we be, anyway?" Nan said, wearily. "But I don't propose to give up my rights without a struggle, and I'm going to have a talk with Lionel, and I'm going now."

She went away in search of the young man, and found him in the sun parlor.

"Can't we join forces, Lionel?" she said.

"Sit down and talk it over," he said, arranging a big cushion for her. "I'd like to be friends, Nan, if you can convince me you didn't kill my father. You can't expect me to be friendly with you, otherwise."

"Of course I didn't kill him," Nan said; "how can you even imagine such a thing?"

"You say that, but your face, your eyes, your whole expression belies your words. Do you also deny poisoning him—or are you only disclaiming the shooting?"

The hard, sharp, black eyes of the young man looked closely into her own, and there was something in his manner, in his effect, that repelled Nan so utterly she was scarce able to speak to him.

"I think," she said, slowly, "that I prefer not to discuss anything with you. I will refer you to my lawyer."

Lionel Raynor gave a start. "A lawyer—have you one?"

"I shall have, very soon. Meantime, you may wait for my answers to your questions."

"Hoity, toity, is that the tone you're going to take toward me? Going to have a lawyer are you? And pray, how are you going to pay him? Don't you know you're practically penniless? But I suppose your friend, Mr. Finley, will be only too glad to pay——"

But Nancy had risen and walked away.

"No overshoes found," he announced. "Been all over the house, family, servants, guests—can't find a new rubber in the place. Plenty of old ones—good enough ones, too, but no brand new ones—and only a brand new one would have made that print. Most remarkable."

"But it can't be of real significance, can it, Mr. Dobbins?" Nan raised her sad eyes to his face. "Why do you put such stress on it?"

"Why, it's a clue, Mrs. Raynor, don't you see—a clue And it might be of utmost importance to you, Mrs. Raynor. For if we can prove that rubber was on the foot of a man from the outside—an intruder—why, then, it lets out everybody in the house—everybody."

"Then, if you can't find a new overshoe in the house, it must have been an outsider?" Nan was interested now.

"Looks that way—yes, ma'am, it looks that way. Oh, you cheer up, Mrs. Raynor, things look pretty black against you, I'll admit that. But if I can pull you out, I will Yes, ma'am, I will. Though we may have to implicate your friend, Mr. Finley."

The detective made this speech purposely, as a test of Nan's behavior. He gained little, for she presented only a mask-like calm of face and an air of utter indifference.

"A deep one," he said to himself, as she walked slowly away; "yes, a mighty deep one—and, therefore, most likely a wrong one."

Nan wandered on, down to the gardens, down the hillside to the bridge over the brook, and seeing Dolly Fay waved her hand in invitation.

"Nancy, darling, how are you this morning? I can't stand it to have you so awful sad all the time!"

"Doily, dear, have you the packet safe—you know, the one I gave you to keep for me?"

"Oh, yes, Nan, of course."

Dolly obeyed, and soon the two were walking along the brookside, down the path that led to the falls.

Nan carried the little parcel, noting by a glance that it had in no way been tampered with.

"What's doing about Mr. Raynor, Nan?" Dolly asked, earnestly. "Whenever I ask mother or dad, they tell me to keep still; Orry won't tell me a thing, and that fool detective glares at me when I try to pump him. Old Grim Gannon—he's my friend, you know—but he says such awful things, I won't listen to him."

"What does he say, Dolly; or, no, don't tell me—I'd rather not know."

"Indeed, I wouldn't tell you—why, Nan, he says terrific things about you, and about Mr. Finley, and about everybody, even including Miss Turner."

"Eva Turner?"

"Yes; that is, he didn't say anything definite—but I sort of gathered he thinks she's sly."

"Never mind, Dolly, I'd rather you wouldn't listen to such gossip; but if you do, don't repeat it to me. Now, look out, dear, I'm going to destroy this little parcel, It's nothing of any value."

Standing on the bank, just above a small but turbulent waterfall made by the brook over a stony decline, Nan tossed the packet lightly into the foaming, bubbling cascade.

Then, without a backward glance, and looking a little frightened, she said, hastily, "Come along, Dolly, let's go home."

They climbed the bank and hastened back to Flower Acres.

"You won't mention this episode, dear?" Nan said.

"Of course not. You know I'll never do a thing you don't want me to, Nan. And, besides, I know more things than that about the whole affair that I'm not going to tell."

"Why, Dolly, what do you mean?"

"Oh, nothing. But you're not the only one I'm keeping still about."

"If you don't know anything of more importance than that I threw away a worthless parcel, you don't know much, dear."

Nan smiled a little at the child, thinking she was exaggerating her knowledge of events.

They parted on the bridge, and Nan climbed the gently rolling hillside toward the house.

Orry came to meet her.

"Nan, dear," he said, gently, "there's trouble afoot. That despicable spy of a Dobbins has been ferreting about and has found some arsenic tablets—do you know anything about them?"

In July, 1924, 1615 businesses failed, totalling the whole country. Considering slack times, the showing is quite encouraging, for there were 1231 failures in July, 1923, when times were on the boom. And failures in July, 1923, were fewer than in any month since November, 1920.

Judging from the ships going down, we haven't been passing through as much of a gale as some of the passengers feared.

REV. L. O'REILLY GAVE A LECTURE

Large Audience Heard Toronto Speaker In Holy Name Rooms Last Evening.

An illustrated lecture on "Blessed Therese, the Little Flower," was given in the assembly hall at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum last evening, by Rev. Leo O'Reilly, D.D., of St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, before an audience of over three hundred people, who listened with intense interest to an address on the life and work of Blessed Therese Martin, the "little flower" of the Carmelite Convent of Lisieux, in France, whose beatification took place in Rome last year, and whose life from childhood, was one of unparalleled piety and devotion to God. The autobiography of this little devotee of the "Holy Face" has been translated into every known language, including Russian. A simple nun of the severe penitential Carmelite Order, who spent most of her days in the obscurity of the cloister, and died at the age of twenty-four years and nine months, the fame of her sanctity has penetrated to the four corners of the earth, governments have united to do her honor and millions of people have recourse to her intercession with God, for Sister Therese promised that after death she would spend her heaven near the earth, interceding for those who sought her assistance. One of the "unknown" saints in life, her "little way" of humility, love and perfect self-surrender to God has become the guide of thousands.

Therese Martin was born in Alencon, France, on January 2nd, 1873, the child of parents who were of outstanding piety, both of whom in early life had sought to enter religious orders. At an early age, the Martins moved to Lisieux, where the short life of the little Theresa was passed, and where, in the house at 42 Rue St. Blaise, the toys of her little girlhood are treasured to-day.

The death of her mother when Therese was only five years of age, cast a cloud over her early years. Of a sensitive, proud and very loving nature, successive rifts in the family circle, when her sisters Pauline, Celine and Marie, left home in turn to enter the Carmelite Convent, caused her much mental suffering, and she was the victim for years of severe nervous trouble.

At the age of fifteen, while still only a child, she was allowed, by special dispensation, to enter the Carmelite Convent, taking the name of Sister Therese of the Child Jesus and the Holy Face. In this strict penitential order, her one desire was to spend her life in helping to save souls and to pray for priests, and her short life there was passed in the exercise of the most rigid physical discipline and unremitting prayer and self-sacrifice. Another trial was added to her lot by the illness of her beloved father, who was stricken by paralysis and confined to a mental asylum during the last years of his life. Therese also, like many other followers of a strictly spiritual existence, was troubled by spiritual aridity, which caused her much mental concern. She maintained always, however, a bright and smiling demeanor, even to the end of the wasting illness of tuberculosis which attacked her and caused her death, in the midst of the most intense suffering, before her twenty-fifth birthday was reached. That sacrifice is the proof of love was the mainspring of the life of the "Little Flower," who once said that she had never refused God anything that He had asked of her, signifying that she had always thought of God's will first, before her own comfort or satisfaction.

The multitude of cures which followed the death of Sister Therese caused the ecclesiastical authorities to waive the usual fifty-year term before proceeding with her beatification, and it was only twenty-six years after her death, on September 30th, 1897, that the solemn ceremonies took place in Rome, on April 28, 1923. Little Sister Therese is a strictly modern saint, therefore. Her three sisters still ive, in the convent at Lisieux, where Pauline is prioress, and another sister, Leonie, is a religieuse of the Visitation Order at Caen, France.

The magnificent church, which has been erected in her honor was shown with chapels given by Irish soldiers, by citizens of the United States, and by French Canadians. Here is the most splendid small chapel in the world, where a shrine of black marble, crystal and gold holds a life-size statue of the little saint, and where a wonderful reliquary of solid silver, diamond-studded and columned with onyx, presented by government of Brazil, holds her mortal remains.

At the conclusion of Father O'Reilly's impressive and earnest address, which was illustrated profusely by views and paintings made by Therese's sister, Celine, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien and Rev. P. Butler thanked the speaker in turn for his splendid lecture. A hymn in honor of the Little Flower, sung by twenty boy members of Father Finn's chancel choir, was sung in good voice by the well-trained little lads.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

Miss Greta Welbourne's and Miss Fairbrother's Sunday School Classes Entertained.

A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mrs. J. N. Welbourn, 218 Reid street, when Miss Greta Welbourn and Miss Amy Fairbrother entertained their Sunday school classes at a Hallowe'en party last evening. The members of the two classes, in beautiful costumes, were met at the door by a ghost, who led them to the parlors, appropriately decorated for the occasion. The evening was enlivened with jolly games, including a ghost walk and the telling of fortunes by an old witch. At nine o'clock, dainty refreshments were served by the teachers.

NEED RE-ORGANIZATION.

Vancouver Grand Jury Not Pleased With Police Results.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 30.—(Canadian Press).—In presenment to Justice Murphy in the criminal assize court here the Grand Jury yesterday declared the whole detective system of both Vancouver and the provincial police and the secret service branch of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to be wrong and badly in need of re-organization.

In this connection murders and bank robbery cases which the police failed to solve were mentioned.

SALE FOR THE NORTH.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held yesterday afternoon in the green room of the Y.W.C.A., the president, Mrs. A. B. Cunningham, in the chair. Mrs. G. S. Walton gave an interesting report of the recent annual Provincial convention, held in St. Catharines. It was arranged to send a bale to Northern Ontario and to hold a rummage sale in the near future. A resolution was passed, commending the stand taken by the Premier of Ontario in recording his determination to enforce the Ontario Temperance Act.

"I was Greatly Distressed With Pains in the Back"

Mr. Alfred McNeill, Chapel Rock, Alta., writes:

"During the winter of 1920-21, I was greatly distressed with pains in my back and felt tired and depressed most of the time. Particularly during the night I was troubled with frequent urination, some nights having to rise almost every hour. I tried several different treatments without success, until finally I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and they relieved my condition before I had finished the first box. I am feeling better this summer than I have for years, and although in my 67th year, can work all day without any undue fatigue."

Grand Jury Suggests More Heat In County Jail And "Safety First" Plan For Public Elevators

Presentment at Fall Assizes Commends Principals of Public Institutions in the City and County—Jury Visited Everywh ere Possible.

The presentment of the Grand Jury shortly before the Fall Assizes closed yesterday evening showed that the jurors had taken their position seriously and had made as thorough an inspection of the matters under their jurisdiction as has been made in many years. Under the Foreman, J. F. Collins, the jury visited all the public buildings, on which a favorable report was presented.

Mr. Justice Orde in acknowledging the report, congratulated the city and county on the satisfactory showing, and suggested that copies of the presentment be sent to the County Council and to the City Council, as well as to the Attorney General, so that the recommendations might be given effect if found available.

The report was:

"To Mr. Justice Orde:—

"We your Grand Jurors empanelled in the High Court of Assize, Peterborough, and delegated to inquire into and inspect the public institutions of the City and County, in receipt of public funds, beg to report as follows:—

"We inspected the jail and court house and found everything satisfactory, with the exception of a complaint as to the lack of heat early in the morning. We then inspected the House of Refuge, and found things in a satisfactory condition under the management of Mr. F. Bullied. The latter assured us that the institution is coming closer to self maintenance under his supervision as caretaker, than for some time past.

"We then visited the Protestant Home, where everything was found to be in satisfactory condition; also the St. Vincents Orphanage where a number of children are carefully looked after by the Sisters. We then visited the Children's Shelter, and found the inmates well taken care of and everything satisfactory.

We also visited St. Joseph's and Nichol's Hospitals, and found both institutions well looked after as to sanitary, lighting, heat and other conditions, and both equipped with modern equipment to care for those who require treatment in any form. We also visited the House of Providence where the aged and infirm are being carefully attended to.

"We found the elevators in these institutions in good condition and would here suggest that representations be made to those in authority to secure legislation that will make it compulsory upon all public institutions and places of public employment to adopt a slogan of "Safety First", and give more protection to human life than has been the case in the past. Recently we have had brought to our attention the result of a serious accident and we would urge that such equipment be so constructed and regulated as to afford a maximum amount of protection to human life.

"All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. F. COLLINS,
Foreman."

SNAPPY HALLOWE'EN COSTUMES

No matter how inexpertly you may handle a needle and thread you can fashion a costume for yourself that will be quite appropriate for a Hallowe'en party.

Or if you wish to have a costume made, there is no end to the ideas that can be carried out effectively for such an occasion.

But civilian clothes are entirely out of keeping with the spirit of Hallowe'en and to attend parties in smart dress attire only detracts from the merriment that such an occasion calls for.

The ever-present Hallowe'en black cat and witch, floral gowns or a vegetable one, if you prefer to go as a turnip instead of a rose, simple

Frog Costume.

A frog costume is unusual and distinctive. It may be made of cambric, chambray, sateen, satinette or poplin. This costume is suitable for adults, misses and juveniles.

Witches' costumes are always seen at fancy-dress occasions. A 36 bust requires 3 3-4 yards of 36-inch sa[illegible]. The lower edge measures 2½ yards and can be worn by all.

A Pierette costume is pretty for women, misses and juveniles of 26 to 40 bust. Thirty-six bust requires 4½ yards of 36-inch figured silk, 1¼ yards 40-inch organdy for ruffles, etc., ⅛ yard of 40-inch satin for sash and top of hat and ⅝ yard of 40-inch satin for sash and top of hat and ⅝ yard 36-inch satin for camisole.

Simple Methods

One of the simplest methods is to take an old slip or foundation made of cloth and then build on it an entirely new creation of tulle, crepe or cheesecloth.

Decorated crepe paper, fringed and arranged about the neck and from the waist, gives a good copy of the Hawaiian dancer's costume.

Then there is the rompers costume a gipsy fancy dress dancer, clown and many others into which you can build your ideas to something quite appropriate and charming.

NEW YORK CITY—492 METERS

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN

Station WEAF, due to the fact that the entire facilities of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company may be placed at its disposal, is undoubtedly the most important broadcasting outfit in America or in the world. However, WEAF is run on a commercial basis, for profit, and this cannot help but militate against its performing limitless disinterested service to the radio listeners of the world. Certan periods on its program every day are "bought" by advertisers who either employ lecturers or artists to assist in bringing their message to the great army of radio enthusiasts with whom WEAF is a particular favorite.

Some of these professional performers are splendid artists, as for instance, Billy Jones and Ernest Hare and the Haeckle-Berge Trio, but others unfortunately are execrable and cause more than one listener to tune out while they are performing. WEAF's transmission facilities are extraordinarily good, their transmsion of piano music taking first rank the country over. Ther handling of "remote control" features from outdoor stadiums or from indoor auditoriums, both in New York and in other parts of the country, are incomparable. On one occasion, in the handling of a big "remote control" event, almost four hours' testing was devoted exclusively to the locating of the microphone demonstrating the extreme care WEAF uses in insuring the best possible reproduction.

A capable studio staff, gifted and versatile "remote control" announces and tranmission in its most highly developed form, have earned for WEAF the admiration of the entire radio world. It hook-ups with a dozen more stations throughout the country, in the handling of events of national significance, have marked new milestones along the road of scientifc progress.

Some of its well known regular features are Joseph Knecht's Orchestra, playing dinner music daily, Vincent Lopez and His Orchestra, broadcasting twice weekly, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman and the Brooklyn Y Men's Conference each Sunday afternoon and the Capital Theatre programme, with "Roxy" in charge of his artist, every Sunday evening.

RUSSIA SATISFIED.

MOSCOW, Oct 30. — (Canadian Press).—France's recognition of Soviet Russia is hailed with keen satisfaction throughout the country. Newspapers pointing out advantages expected to accrue to both countries general satisfatcion is also expressed that alleged Zinovieff's letter to British Communists, which created such a stir in Great Britain had no effect on the French Government.

French Regard Victory Of Conservative Party As Blow At Solidarity

(By A. L. Bradford, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, October 30. — The victory of the Conservative party in the British general election "looks bad for international solidarity," the Matin said to-day.

All the morning papers regard the Conservative success as assured.

"Stanley Baldwin will find his task as leader most difficult," the Matin said. "He cannot fin a remedy for England's economic distress except by a close and generous solidarity with other countries. The British Dominions have their own problems. They will defend their own interests and will demand that England refuse to ratify the Geneva protocole, presenting a basis for international limitation of armaments, which looks bad for international solidarity."

ST. JOHN'S A.Y.P.A, HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Young People's Association Were Hosts Of Enjoyable Party.

The Anglican Young People's Association of St. John's church were hosts last evening at a very jolly Hallowe'en party, when students of the Normal school were guests of the society. A total of nearly two hundred and fifty young people, the majority in gay Hallowe'en costumes, filled the big parish hall, profusely decorated with the yellow and black fancies of the season and numbers of bright flags. The guests were received by Mrs. E. S. Martin, Mrs. S. T. Medd and Rev. Dr. Blagrave, the latter extending a hearty welcome to the students and asking the Anglican members to join the A.Y.P.A.

The evening was spent in dancing, and a number of novelty dances on the programme, including a lucky number dance, a bad luck and a moon dance and a birthday dance, the prize for the latter being won by Miss Ethel Cooper.

Prizes for costumes were won by Miss Tett and Miss Telford, capturing the fancy award as the Dutch Twins, while the ladies' comic prize went to Miss Mary Wells as a newsboy. The prize for the best fancy costume worn by a gentleman was won by Mr. Gordon Ham as a Cowboy, and the Boob costume which won the comic prize for Mr. Bert Bugg was a real scream.

Music during the evening was provided by Ken Brown's orchestra, composed of Messrs. Sedgewick, Bell, Evans, Bugg, Duranceau and Brown.

Lunch was served at half past ten o'clock, Miss Helen Morphet acting as supervisor of the refreshment committee. Miss Julia Nicholls was in charge of the programme of entertainment for the evening.

At the conclusion of the party, a hearty vote of thanks from the Normal students was accorded the A.Y.P.A.

C. N. R. RAILWAY TO LOOK AFTER OWN PROBLEMS

Statements Made During Current Railway Controversy In U. S. Denied.

LET U. S. TALK.

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 30—(Canadian Press). — A direct challenge was made last evening by Sir Henry Thornton to the statements made during the current railway controversy in the United States to the effect that public ownership of the railway in Canada had resulted in inefficiency and laxity in operation. Sir Henry emphatically denied this statement, and declared that "we in Canada only ask to be left alone to work out our own problems." Sir Henry took occasion to draw the attention to the statements circulated in the United States regarding the Canadian National Railways at a "transportation night" meeting of the Masonic Blue Lodges of the City of Hamilton, at which he was the chief speaker. The meeting was held in the largest theatre in Hamilton, and the auditorium was packed to canacity, not only by members of the Masonic Order, but also by the most prominent business and professional men of the city. Hon. James Lyons, Provincial Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, was the other speaker. I want to challenge one statement broadcast by opponents of public ownership in the United States, Sir Henry said, and here I should like to say that I do not care what is said across the border about us so long as it is the truth. But the statement has been made that since the Government took over the Canadian National Railways the service given to the public is a constant exhibition of inefficiency, and, furthermore, that the operating results indicate a laxity and an inefficiency on the part of its officers. I say that no private-owned railway anywhere furnishes a better service to its patrons, and no railway has a set of men more loyal and more efficient than has the Canadian National Railway.

Sir Henry further pointed out that no judgment could be passed upon the public ownership of the railways by the showing made by the Canadian National Railways. The problems of the Canadian National were the problems which faced every road west of the Mississippi during the pioneer days. The problems of a road which was constructed for development and colonization work. The great need of the railway and of the Dominion was more settlers. Sir Henry then reiterated his belief in the necessity for the appointment of the best man in Canada to act as Minister of Immigration and to coordinate the individual efforts of the railways and other organizations in bringing selected settlers to Canada. In opening his address, Sir Henry paid a tribute to Masonry and gave a brief outline of its history and antiquity. He paid a high tribute to the ideals and standards of Masonry, and said they stood for honesty, charity and brotherhood, all of which make for better citizenship. The effect of its 175,000 membership must have a beneficial effect upon the Dominion, he continued. We can see the effect of the orderly independence which marks the progress of Canada. We did not have a social upheaval such as that which laid Russia prostrate. I cannot say whether that is due to Masonry or not, but we must pay a tribute to it. Sir Henry then gave a short sketch of the development of transportation, starting from the remote ages, and said that every civilization which flourished did so upon its transport arteries. No nation grew great unless it had some system of transportation, and the more efficient the system the greater the nation and its prosperity. In conclusion, Sir Henry emphasized the fact that the Canadian National Railways did not look for business upon sentiment but upon the character of the service it gave.

Hon. Mr. Lyons paid a tribute to the work and record of Sir Henry Thornton and spoke of the necessity for bringing settlers into Canada and of the opening up of the farm lands in Northern Ontario. The quickest way to make a success of the railways, he said, is to increase the tonnage, and the quickest way to increase the tonnage is to settle more people upon the land. The meeting was presided over by Most Worshipful Grand Master W. J. Drope, and Sir Henry was introduced by W. J. Westaway, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. M. Gardiner, M.L.A., introduced Hon. Mr. Lyons.

On the platform were the most prominent Masons in the city, and the vote of thanks to the speakers was moved by Sir John Gibson and seconded by Col. R. McCullough.

Sir Henry was also the guest of the city and the Chamber of Commerce at an informal dinner prior to the meeting.

MANY VISITORS IN BRITAIN FROM U. S.

John Bull Is Now Bidding For United States' Tourist Trade.

WASHINGTON, October 30 (United Press). — Even staid old John Bull has unbended and is bidding for American tourist trade.

Tourist expenditures have been heavy in Great Britain this season, American Trade Commissioner Chas. E. Lyon of London reports to the Department of Commerce. The inducements to spend just a little more are ingenious and abundant, Lyon finds.

Newspapers carry advertisements of handsome apartments, above the market rate, which are characterised as "suitable for visiting Americans." Other advertisements request "any charitable American to help" one cause or another.

A hospital in need of endowment puts its appeal "Americans kindly take note." Lincoln Cathedral and St. Paul's are in need of repairs, and there are ample facilities for receiving gifts from visitors.

John Harvard's house and the Shakespeare memorials at Stratford-on-Avon, Sulgrave Manor and Gray's Church at Stoke Poges have a strong appeal—sentimental and financial—to Americans.

A wealthier class went to England this summer, Lyon reports. The American Bar Association Convention, for example, brought over more than twice as many as expected. Top hats is the newest mode, were in great demand by the lawyers who wore them at the King's garden party, Lyon relates as a sidelight. The wives of the attorneys, too, found it necessary to spend a great deal of cash in outfitting for this same function.

Americans in London loaded themselves with works of art. The belief still holds sway in the average tourist mind that many British families because of post-war depression were forced to sell heirlooms.

Many leading jewellery stores to satisfy this demand have special departments exclusvely for old-fashioned brooches, pins, amulets, and the like. These, the customer is told, are handled on a commission basis for needy owners.

Oriental rugs, Lyon finds, met a ready sale and heavily overstocked dealers who felt little optimism in the spring are now sold out. Old and ornamental silver also had a heavy sale, not only to Americans, but to visitors from the Argentine as well, who have extended their buying operations beyond their customary field in Paris. Table silver was eagerly sought by Americans.

However, the visiting American does not find the English tradesman so mercenary as his Continental brothers. The Britisher is more subtle and is quick to sense the demand for a certain class of goods. Of course, when something is in great demand, the price just naturally goes up.

ARGENTINA SHOWS PRIDE IN COUNTRY

No Necessity To Make Out Goods Are Imported To Make Them Saleable.

BUENOS AIRESS, Oct. 30.—An industrial exhibition intended to show the progress attained in manufacturers in Argentina, and with the hope of discouraging the practice of putting foreign labels on Argentine made goods, will be held in Buenos Aires in December. It is being organized by the Argentine Industrial Union under the auspices of the government.

The organizers expect to demonstrate the superiority of many Argentine manufactured goods over similar foreign products, and that there is no necessity of pretending they are imported in order to make them saleable. Many manufacturers have complained that they are unable to sell their goods to retailers unless they bear American, English, German, Italian or French labels, and they welcome any propaganda such as this exhibition to show that Argentine wares are as good as or better than the same class of imported ones.

The organizers believe the public will be surprised to see the enormous strides made in Argentine industries since the last industrial exhibition held in Buenos Aires in 1910, and the variety of goods made.

DRINK WATER TO HELP WASH OUT KIDNEY POISON

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine

GERMANS.

French officers claim Germany has 350,000 troops in training, all of them being potential officers. The peace treaty reduced the German army to not exceed 100,000 men, including officers. "Security police" permitted to her are extra.

Kelly Selected As Best Utility Player

CINCINNATI, Oct. 30—Manager Jack Hendricks of the Reds considers George Kelly of the New York Giants the most valuable utility player in the National League, if not both major organizations.

The fine showing of Kelly in the world series, despite the fact that he struck out twice in a pinch in the final game, bears out Hendricks' opinion of him.

Kelly is a great first baseman —a fine target for the infielders He has a wonderful arm and is a dangerous hitter.

Filling in at second base in the series when Frisch was moved over to third, Kelly saved the first game by a remarkable play on Goslin. In the outfield he played equally well.

There are few players in the majors who can perform in the infield or outfield as capably as Kelly does.

EPINARD OWNER HOME

Says Breaks Against Him in Three American Races.

PARIS, Oct. 30. — (Canadian Press).—Pierre Wertheimer, owner of the noted French race horse Epinard, returned to Paris last evening from his American visit and declared that "the breaks went against us, as they say in the United States."

"I would have given a lot to have won at least once race," M. Wertheimer continued, "but I've no kick coming. Everybody was pulling so hard for Epinard to win that I would have liked to have given the American public the satisfaction of cashing in once on my horse."

M. Wertheimer said that he had no fault to find with any one connectd with his stabl. He said that Jockey Haynes would continue riding for him and that Gene Leigh would remain as his trainer.

Epinard's owner disposed of the numerous reports printed in the French and English press that the horse would go to stud in England by declaring: "He will remain in France."

"Epinard will land in Cherbourg from the Berengaria," M. Wertheimer stated, "and go directly to my farm in Southern France, to be retired to the stud there."

LINDSAY CURLERS ARE PREPARED FOR WINTER

Officers Elected — Three Tankard Players Have Retired.

LINDSAY, October 29. — Lindsay curlers are away to another good start. Officers were elected as follows for the ensuing season:

Patron, John Carew.
President, H. Brimmell.
Vice-Pres., Rev. C. H. Marsh.
Treasurer, J. D. Flavelle.
Assistant Treasurer, A. E. Gregory.
Chaplain, Rev. F. H. McIntosh.
Secretary, J. M. Knowlson.
Assistant Secretary, G. A. Lucas.
Representatives to O.C.A., J. D. Flavelle and W. E. Reesor.

Messrs. Larry O'Connor and Walter Reesor will again lead the tankard rinks and Messrs. K. McCaskill and W. Langdon will skip the district rinks..

For the first time in years the treasurer reported a surplus.

An open bonspiel is being contemplated. Many new members were added and the club divided into two sections, with 21 rinks to each section.

Three tankard players have withdrawn because of health and business reasons, namely, W. McClennan, Frank Williams and W. Williams.

The NUT CRACKER

BY JOE WILLIAMS

Cal says his administration has brought more than average prosperity but Mr. Fohl of the Red Sox refuses to believe him.

German politicians are trying to get the ex-crown prince to run for office, remembering what a good runner he was at the Marne.

All members of the Athletics are to have their tonsils taken out. .... Isn't this rather curious treatment for dim batting eyes?

Another sure sign of winter is the raucous squawk of the baseball magnate demanding that the draft rules be scissored.

It may yet develop that the bellboy slugged by four Brooklyn players committed the unpardonable crime of not having a cork screw.

There may be nothing in a name but wouldn't it be too lovely for words if Coach Bible of Texas were handling the Praying Colonels this year?

Epinard refused to stay for the New York horse show, being convinced American horses had made a big enough show of him already.

Once you get accustomed to a walloping it is evidently hard to get along with out one ....At any rate we note Tommy Lipton wants to race again.

Pictures of ice skaters are breaking into the sport pages ....And it seems but yesterday that Connie Mack was telling the business men's club of Montgomery he'd finish second.

There is no commercialism in college football ....Teams that travel half way across the continent to play in the Polo Grounds merely have the business interests of the Pullman company in mind.

England plans a sport museum ....Such interesting relics as Bomb Wells and Joe Beckett will occupy the main exhibits.

Perhaps you noticed that among those who did not attend Walter Johnson's home-coming celebration was John J. McGraw.

Whether he realizes it or not, Mr. Rockne of Notre Dame is doing a whole lot to discourage the practice of intersectional football games.

Young Stribling has returned to his books and we suspect the most important one is his checkbook

A Mexican heavyweight has arrived in New York. . . . You can tell he is a Mexican heavyweight because his reservation calls for a room without bath.

They say no chain is stronger than its weakest link. . . . Mr. O'Goofty wants to know if the same logic applies to country sausage.

After all, the prizefighter manager who always boasts "My boy will win sure" has nothing on the gent's handling the political destinies of Messrs. Coolidge, La Follette and Davis.

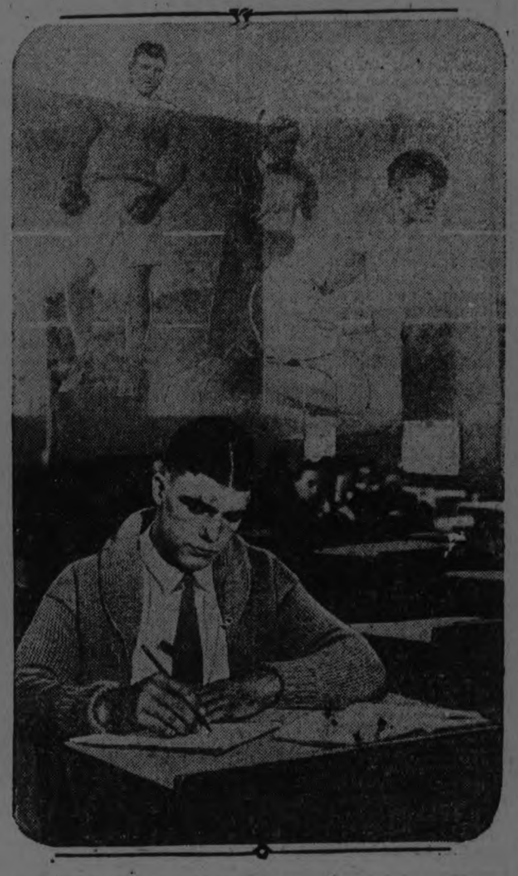
Any hardened sport observer will tell you there are times when a yellow streak has considerable to do with a losing streak.

Mr. McGraw is sending back postcards, "Having fine time. Wish you were here." . . . But none of them are going to Bucky Harris or Goose Goslin.

The statistical season can not be considered closed until the official average of the year's fly-swatting champion is announced.

STRIBLING BACK IN SCHOOL

And While He Grapples With Geometry and Mathematics Visions of a Title Winning Day Fill Fill His Mind.



Young Stribling, the prize fighter, has gone back to school. You see him pictured at his desk in the class room at University School, Atlanta, where he is taking an academic course.

One imagines his mind is not always on books and that now and then visions of a triumphant moment with Dempsey, the champion, lying in a battered heap, flare up to charm his fancy.

"Sullivan, Corbett, Gans and Nelson."

"Define ambition."

"What is meant by the unknown quantity?"

"You must be referring to Berlenbach."

"Beyond the Alps lies what?"

"Johnny Dundee's garlic ranch."

"Where is the land of the sacred cow?"

"I don't know, but the Wild Bull came from Buenos Aires."

"What is meant by the Great Divide?"

"Who invented the corkscrew?"

"What do you know about Samson?"

"He was a pretty good boy until he lost a hair-line decision to Delilah."

"Is cauliflower a fruit or a vegetable?"

"I always heard it was an ear."

"Who is the biggest manufacturer of purses in this country?"

"Tex Rickard, and the next purse I get from him has gotta be—"

At this point the bell rang proclaiming the noon recess, and the fighter-student leaped from his desk and began filling the scholarly atmosphere with left hooks.

"Say, what round is this anway?" he asked.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

Thurston, by winning 20 games for the Chicago White Sox, is said to have earned a substantial bonus.

Young Stribling has gone back to school and may play basketball this winter.

George Chaney of Baltimore has a string of knockouts that reach the century mark.

Bill Melhorn, Missouri professional, has the biggest shoulders in golf. Melhorn used to be a hod-carrier.

to the Yankees as manager.

It is said Cyril Walker made less money out of the open championship last summer than any player who ever held the title.

Certain golf ball manufacturers paid Walter Hagen $8,000 in fees for playing with their special products last summer.

Derrill Pratt, veteran infielder, is slated to be turned loose by Detroit. Pratt intends to take up college coaching when through in the majors.

In Lou Gehrig, the Yankees uncovered a slugger who rivals Babe Ruth. The Bambino has nicknamed Gehrig "Buster."

LAND

Suppose Henry Ford, or some other industrial genius, markets inexpensive and safe airplanes, enabling people to live far out in the country, flying back and forth to work in town.

Transportation is the chief obstacle to such a system.

If the airplane overcomes this obstacle, there'll be a revolution in land values, city properties dropping, country sites increasing. If you're buying land to make your descendants rich, the city may not be the best bet.

EXAMINER LEAGUE

Eight teams were in action last night in the Examiner League at Solomon's Alleys. All the winning teams came through with two out of three, the Jobbers taking two out of three from the Comps, the Directors two out of three from the Linos, the Proofers two out of three from the Newsies and the Casters two out of three from the Proofers. It is interesting to note that the two lowest teams in the league the Comps and the Jobbers, rolled the best games on the night's plays. The Comps had a total of 1983 for their three games and the Jobbers 1970 for theirs. No other team rolling last night even came near this score. That shows real fight when the cellar teams meet.

Freddie Scates had the high three games of the night, rolling 615. His teammate Stewart Thexton was next highest rolling 576 for his three games. Other good scores for three games were: Roy Taylor 565, Frank Grey 557 and Allan Whyte 555. Maurice Dunkley had the high single of 281 while Frank Gray rolled 273 for a single game.

Following are the scores:

BANKER LADIES' LEAGUE

Last night at Solomon's Alleys in the Bankers Ladies' League the Domroys won three straight from the Bantams. Good rolling was in evidence during the games and some good scores were set up.

Miss Curtis was high for three games with a nice score of 358, with Miss Collins a close second with 357. Miss Greer had the high single of 143.

Following are the scores:

Bantams—
Miss Greer	94	87	143	324
Miss Smith	45	25	48	118

CROWDS.

City population grows the world over. One out of every 13 people in the whole world live in cities of more than 100,000 population. There are 409 cities such. This comes to light through a check-up by a German statistician.

We don't know what undercurrent of emotion lures people to band together in cities. Possibly the desire to escape long hours and hard labor and lonesomeness of farm life. Later the airplane will break up the cities. Families will live far out in the country, as nature intended, father flying several hundred miles to work in cities reduced to collections of factories and stores. The city is destined to be a passing phenomenon in human progress.

FREAK STUNTS FEATURE RECENT WORLD SERIES

Strange Twists That Will Make Washington Victory Memorable.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. — No world series ever produced half the unusual situations that cropped out in the 1924 event. For instance:

Walter Johnson struck out 12 men yet was beaten 4 to 3 in 12 innings.

Catcher Tate, second string catcher to Muddy Ruel of Washington, was sent to the bat three times as a pinch hitter and drew a walk on each occasion.

Pitcher Marberry of Washington worked in four of the seven games three of them on successive days. He saved the second game by striking out Jackson for the final out of the contest on three pitched balls.

Pitcher Jonnard of the New York Giants, sent in as relief pitcher, was allowed to pitch only five balls before being derricked. He walked the first man to face him on four straight, three one ball to the next batter and then got the gate.

In a pinch in the final game, Frankie Frisch struck out, Johnson turning the trick. It was his first strikeout in four world series.

Lindstrom, third baseman for the Giants, the youngest player in the series, made four hits in one game off Walter Johnson, the oldest athlete.

Goose Goslin by making three home runs, tied the record that was held by Babe Ruth and made in 1923.

Washington came from behind to win every one of the four games necessary to decide the baseball championship.

With runners on, Walter Johnson in the final game of the series, twice passed Jackson to take a chance on Kelly, striking out the star first sacker of the Giants each time.

In one game Frankie Frisch robbed Goslin of three hits by making seemingly impossible plays on two short fly balls and one grounder.

In only one game did the Giants go through with the pitcher who started. More pitchers were used on both sides than in any other world series clash.

In the final contest two badly bounding balls sent over the tying and winning runs for Washington.

In the final game a pinch hitter doubled, starting, the rally that tied up the game. In the 12th inning of the same game, Ruel, after getting a life when Gowdy stumbled over his mask going after a foul fly, doubled and later scored the winning run.

Ruel of the Nationals, after going six games and seven innings of the seventh without a hit, made two hits in the last four innings of the series that practically decided the contest.

Yet perhaps the most extraordinary feature of all was that Nick Altrock was serious for the entire series.

Why YOU Should Purchase a Canadian Government Annuity

Because in old age it will free you from the dread of poverty or of becoming a burden upon others;

Because it will bring you comfort and independence in your later years;

BECAUSE IT WILL GIVE YOU A LARGER RETURN FOR THE AMOUNT INVESTED THAN ANY OTHER LIFE INVESTMENT OF EQUAL SECURITY.

For example, if a man of 20 will pay to the Dominion Government the sum of $5.31 a month until he is 60, the Government will agree to pay to him from 60 as long as he lives $50 a month—a return equal to over 23½% on the total amount paid.

If he dies before 60, every dollar that he paid in, with 4% compound interest would be returnable to his heirs. If he should die between 59 and 60, the amount so returnable in a cash sum would be $6,230.00.

Such an Annuity may be of any amount from $50 to $5,000 a year, the cost being relatively the same. It is non-forfeitable, cannot be seized for debt, and is free from Dominion Income Tax. For full particulars fill out this Coupon and address it as directed.

Renault Gets Effect With Britton's Left

Renault uses it in much the same way Britton used to, shoot ing it straight to the head and body.

It is not a felling punch but a series of them bring total destruction.

FULL GROWN BEAR SEEN AT BRIGHTON

BRIGHTON, Oct. 30.—A large full grown bear has been roaming around this district. It became bold enough to eat apples out of the orchard of Mr. Thomas Weatherburn, who lives scarcely two miles north of the village of Brighton. A number of nearby farmers have also had glimpses of the bear, which is probably the same one that was reported as being near Castleton last fall.

Mr. H. M. Roblin has been appointed by the Ferguson Government to fill the vacancy on the Presqu'ile Point Commission vacated by the resignation of F. R. Whitton.

"Dad" Hanison, proprietor of the Clarendon Hotel has installed a five tube radio set in the rotunda for the entertainment of his guests and the travelling public.

The course lies along the shore of Lake Ontario and boasts of having one of the finest club houses in the district.

Judge M. C. Cameron presided over the divisional court here for the first time since his appointment as successor to Judge H. Ward.

It is rumoured that Carman Baker a leading breeder of thoroughbred Holsteins and a prominent agriculturalist, will at the coming municipal elections in this town be a candidate for the reeveship. He has given many useful years of service as councillor and now doubtless thinks that in recognition of these services the reeveship's chair will be a deserving climax.

It is also reported that Mr. Frank Whitton an ex-reeve will be a contender for this office.

Brighton is one of the leading apple centres in the Dominion. The harvesting of the crop this year has progressed very favorably, aided by the excellent weather during the past month. Thousands of barrels will be stored here in the large fruit houses for export during the winter.

The Ontario Government cold storage plant here is the only government plant in Ontario. In this plant all kinds of fruit are stored, also cheese and celery. Apples are shipped each year in large quantities to the principal trade centres of Canada also to England and South Africa.

12 MEN MISSING.

MARTINEZ, Cal., Oct. 30.—(Canadian Press.) — Twelve men are missing and more than a score suffering from burns, following the explosion of 600,000 cases of gasoline at the wharves of the Associated Oil Companies five miles from here. The men were members of the crew of the tanker Alder Anderson, which was destroyed by the flames, which spread over the deck. There were 42 men in the crew, all of whom were forced to jump overboard when the flames blocked their escape to the dock. All but 12 were picked up in the water.

The explosion was caused by the collapse of the wharves which dragged down electric wires which set off the gasoline.

PREVENT COLD INFECTION.

For head colds, prompt relief from the stuffiness is obtained by applying Parke's Nasaline up the nostrils. This antiseptic vapor treatment will also prevent infection and more serious conditions. Get it at Bond's Drug Store, corner George and Hunter streets.

AT THE GRAND.

FAMOUS SINGERS COMING HERE—DE FEO OPERA STARS AT THE GRAND.

The artists of the De Feo Opera Company, who will appear at the Grand Opera House on Saturday evening, are all singers of great fame, who obtained success and reputation all over Europe, South America and the United States. Most of them, young women of great beauty, are as good to look at as it is pleasant to listen to them.

The present tour of the De Feo Opera Stars is being under the auspices of the Music League of America and various musical organizations of Canada. The general public must at last be given a chance to hear the best music interpreted by the best artists, a luxury, which until now has been accessible only to the wealthy people of the larger cities.

The operas that will be given on Saturday evening at the Grand are the most popular ones, known almost by everybody, and easy to understand.

The prices of admission are such as to allow everyone, without taxing his resources, to be present at this great artistic festival.

It is two years since we have had in Peterborough the visit of the De Feo Company, and it may be a long time before we have again the opportunity to hear opera in this city.

No eanibals!

Who said so? Who told you there were no cannibals in 1924?

If you can recollect his name — drag him by the heels into the Grand Opera House any matinee or night starting Monday, November 3, and the two days following, and let him see Captain Hurley's wonder-motion picture classic, "The Lost Tribe," and make him gaze full into the scen wherein naked and ferocious headhunters are seen enjoying a cannibalistic feast—a scene which Captain Hurley was powerless to prevent, but which he was able to photograph so vividly, because the headhunters themselves did not know what the camera was doing.

Exaggerated you might say—but this marvellous film of thrills will convince.

Captain Hurley made the expedition into the unknown land of New Guinea and there found a tribe of headhunters who so closely resemble the Semetic race, have their facial peculiarities, and many of their physical and religious customs that scientists are of the belief that they are indeed the lost tribe of Israel. The camera cannot lie and you will experience the greatest thrill of your lifetime. No such picture has ever been taken; no such excitement ever dreamed of by modern film favorites. There is no pampered luxury in New Guinea, and no stunt man to take the part of the leading man when something dangerous is needed to thrill the movie fans. In this land where Might is Right and Heaven help the weakling—where skulls on your "hat rack" are the signs of genius, everything is "on the level," and exciting times and events a daily thing in the life of a headhunter.

Blaze Broadway was amazed at "The Lost Tribe." So will you be when you see it from your comfortable seat in the Grand Opera House, when "The Lost Tribe" comes here for three days starting Monday, Nov 3rd, with popular-priced matinees starting at 2.15 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL.

A moving picture director who was looking for a perfect composite lady to be the new star of one of his big productions made a list of the qualities which he desired to combine in the damsel. The "jazz-mania" of Colleen Moore was one of the requisite ingredients. Colleen Moore and her jazzmania are at the Capitol Theatre for two days this week, and there was a filled house last night to see her in "The Perfect Flapper." The flapper may be just a little passe at the present time. There are those who say that her days is over, but she makes excellent entertainment nevertheless. And the youth and prettiness of the small, vivid Colleen are at their best in her delineation of Tommie Lou Pember. "The Perfect Flapper" is one of those corkscrewy pictures that portray all sorts of daring stunts and then do a double flin and come out perfectly all right. No one can possibly find fault with anything the young lady does, because, as a matter of fact, she is only trying to win the man she has set her little heart on, and "all is fair in love and war" anyway. The finale proves that she is a sweet, modest young thing at heart and doesn't want to flap a bit, so there you are. After having a perfectly peppy time, she is going to settle down and be a very strict wife, like the philandering Honora in "A Modern Chronicle."

The movies offer a fairly good index of the trend of public opinion. Just as the flapper is fading into a mild obscurity, when her pranks have become commonplace, the movie people allow her to be as entertaining as ever, but give her a note of stern respectability to finish up on. So an aura of misunderstood virtue surrounds the devil-may-care doings of Tommie Lou, carrying on with all sorts of pranks and yet doing it all just to please the man she loves.

Tommie Lou and Dick Trayle, husband of Gertrude Trayle, become involved with a number of mixed drinks and drive to a roadhouse, where they are discovered later in a Romeo and Juliet scene on the balcony. The notoriety which follows and Gertrude's suit for divorce stamp Tommie as a perfect exponent of flapperism. To attract Reed Andrews, whom she imagines wants pep and nerve in his sweetheart, she continues through a series of daring misadventures that provide plenty of excitement. It is an entertaining picture with something doing every minute. Anything that describes fast and furious action, all the favorite catchwords about pep and nerve and verve are applicable to the "jazz baby" type that the dainty little star depicts.

VESUVIUS ERUPTION IN "THE WHITE SISTER."

It isn't often tat you can get a volcano to work when you want it to, but Henry King the director of "The White Sister," starring Lillian Gish, which will be shown at the Capitol Theatre nex: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, was able to photograph a violent eruption of Vesuvius just in time for the final scenes of the F. Marion Crawford story, which call for exactly the kind of an explosion that happened.

When the picture comes to the Capitol Theatre film audiences will get an extra thrill out of knowing that the exploding crater and the lava are real, and that Miss Gish, Mr. King and the rest of the company were right on the spot.

"The White Star" is a Henry King production for Inspiration pictures, Charles H. Duell, Jr., president, and is released through Metro. Ronald Colman, a well known leading man on the stage, makes his first screen appearance opposite Miss Gish. Others in the cast include Gail Kane, J. Barney Sherry, Charles Lane and Madame Juliette La Violette.

REGINALD DENNY NOW HAS COMEDY-THRILLS

"The Reckless Age," Adapted from "Love Insurance," Novel by Biggers.

Reginald Denny, erstwhile hero of fighting pictures, and more recently a sensational automobile racer in "Sporting Youth," is also a great comedian, even if he does persist in injecting thrills into his comedy. Any who doubt this need only see him in "The Reckless Age," which opens Friday at the Capitol.

Denny does a little of everything he ever did before, from staging a sensational fight to riding a mad race in an automobile. But this time he does it in an atmosphere of laughs; the laughs of Earl Derr Biggers' Saturday Evening Post story, "Love Insurance," from which the play was made; a hilarious series of complications surrounding a nobleman who took out insurance against failure to marry an heiress. Denny is the insurance expert, sent to protect the policy, who has to protect the scion of nobility from a breach of promise suit, blackmailers, diamond thieves and other troubles galore.

Denny plays the insurance man; he kidnaps a bogus earl and finally falls in love with the insured heiress—and then smashes through a startling and screamingly funny climax.

The cast is specially good. Ruth Dwyer is charming as the heiress in the case, and William Austin convincing as the perturbed nobleman. Hayden Stevenson plays an advertising specialist with a penchant for cooking up sensations, and May Wallace and John Steppling play the parents of the heroine. Tom McGuire, as a sportive millionaire, has a part he handles with cleverness, and Fred. Malatesta, as a fiery Latin, seeking trouble to brew, adds a comic touch with some very good acting.

POPULAR SINGER AT ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

ADVENTURE TEEMS IN EVERY FLASH OF DUNCAN FILM.

A vanishing freight car from the very centre of a moving train, as if into thin air, is one of the most striking feats ever attempted. Seemingly impossible, it is simple enough—but a little exciting—if one knows how.

This is one of the many big dramatic punches in "The Fast Express," William Duncan's new Universal feature chapterplay now appearing at the Royal Theatre, with Duncan directing as well as playing the leading role opposite Edith Johnson.

It is a railroad story: a swift-moving narrative of thrills and excitement, adapted from Courtney Ryley Cooper's famous story, 'Crossed Wires.' From sensational explosions, hurling whole cliffs in the path of a racing train, to desperate battles in the mazes of the Denver underworld, runs the gamut of action: not a dull moment, but thrill piled on thrill, sensation upon sensation. It is William Duncan at his best—and the William Duncan on a chapterplay is long established.

The opening episode shows the fight made by Duncan as the president of his railroad to combat forces within which endanger the line. Plots of a treacherous general manager are behind the trouble, and lead to a sensational rescue from a moving train, followed by an explosion that hurls an entire cliff upon the tracks. From then on the action is fast and furious. It is one of the fastest stories ever filmed.

The cast is notable. Besides William Duncan and Edith Johnson in the leading roles, there is Edward Cecil playing the villainous Langley, manager of the road; Albert J. Smith, who will be remembered as "Redmond" in "Daniel Boone" in the role of Ed. Winston, the fireman who saves the train from disaster in one of the thrilling attacks; Harry Woods, playing Tom Boyd, Langley's chief aide; Eva Gordon, and others.

.. .. "APRIL SHOWERS"

Danny O'Rourke was the pride of New York—
What we mean by New York is The Alley:
For Dan was the pride of the Lower East Side, Including Nora and Sally.

And oh, but the lad knew the blarney.
Faith, they were as fair and as lovin' a pair
As any that dwell near Killarney.

Had served with Big Tim; they were buddies.
So Danny, of course, was for joinin' the force,
And Maggie would help with his studies.

To The Alley there came a Society Dame,
And she fell for Our Danny — who wouldn't?
The lady had lamps that were bright as a vamp's—
Resist 'em? YOU might. Danny couldn't.

So—alack and alas—Our Dan didn't pass;
In despair, he said, "I'll be a fighter!"
He was knocked for a goal—but he says, on his soul
That he doesn't think things could be brighter.

JACKIE COOGAN QUITS RAGS IN "LONG LIVE THE KING."

"Genius," wrote a prominent critic recently, "is an innate gift of the gods." Talent is the ability to use that gift or the lesser advantages vouchsafed to the particular individual. Seldom does one person have both, but Jackie Coogan comes in this select class.

The true artist not only possesses both genius and talent; he is also marked by an ability to transcend the average limitations. In other words, the great actor is not just a comedian or a tragedian, or a type of one sort or another.

And so it seems with Jackie. Despite his eight and a half years, there seems to be no situation, no emotion, which he cannot grasp—and having grasped, portray in such fashion that it will ring the answering note in the hearts of those who watch him on the screen. Because of his debut in "The Kid," Jackie was long classed as a comedian, a classification whose merit was rather intensified by "Peck's Bad Boy." But in "My Boy," he showed the sincerity of a graver characterization. So, through "Trouble," "Oliver Twist" and "Daddy," his roles were pitched predominantly in the minor key, with here and there a heaven-sent flash of lilting glee to lighten the sombre tones of his impersonations and to reveal him as a truly great actor.

In "Circus Days," his latest release before "Long Live the King," the humorous element was the predominating strain, but several scenes of great tenderness again strike the human balance.

"Long Live the King," his first Metro picture, which comes to the Regent Theatre to-day, reveals Jackie at the zenith of his powers in a delightfully romantic story by the supreme spinner of romantic tales, Mary Roberts Rinehart. Jack Coogan, Senior, who personally supervised the production, Director Victor Schertzinger, Art Director J. J. Hughes and Chief Cinematographer Frank Good, have brought the story to the screen with a wealth of beauty, gorgeous detail and general exquisite investiture that surpass by far any of Jackie's earlier productions.

Even without its star, "Long Live the King" would rank high as a cinematic achievement. With Jackie Coogan, it achieves distinction as a film masterpiece.

NEW SERIAL STARTING TO-DAY AT REGENT.

A terrific forest fire which destroyed valuable woodland near Arrowhead Lake, California, also threatened the lives of several notable screen players engaged for the filming of "Leatherstocking," a new Pathe serial produced by C. W. Patton and adapted from James Fenimore Cooper's world famous Leatherstocking Tales.

The story deals with pre-Colonial days when Indians and whites settled their troubles with bloodshed rather than resorting to diplomatic relations or "watchful waiting." In order to lend proper atmosphere to Cooper's story, Director George B. Seitz engaged more than one hundred Indians, secured from a nearby reservation, in addition to a large and able cast of principals, all of whom spent several weeks at Lake Arrowhead.

During the rehearsal of a thrilling scene, Harold Miller, who plays the role of the hero, the Deerslayer, suddenly noted a bright stream of flame on the horizon, just beyond a thickly wooded forest. Miller, a real native son, immediately recognized the company's danger and informed director Seitz that it would be safest for all concerned to beat a hasty retreat.

"Leatherstocking" is a ten-chapter Pathe serial which is being shown every week on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Regent Theatre. It features Edna Murphy and Harold Miller and this week episode No. 1 will be seen.

PIPE PRESENTED TO J. J. SOLOMON

Baseball Leader Guest of Honor at Social Event.

A very enjoyable social evening was held at the home of Mr. Eddie Wright, Monaghan Road, last night in honour of Mr. J. J. Solomon, who is leaving shortly for Philadelphia.

A number of Mr. Solomon's baseball friends were the guests of Mr and Mrs. Wright. The early part of the evening was very enjoyably spent in cards, after which a dainty repast was served.

Following this event Mr. Solomon was presented with a fine pipe by Ald. Nagle Phelan, who read the following address:

Dear Jake,

Hearing with regret that you are "off for Philadelphia"—if not in the morning ,in the near future, we felt that we could not allow you to go without expressing to you our appreciation of your services on behalf of baseball, and our sense of loss at your departure.

We realise that you have given us year after year, no matter how blue the outlook in regard to material was, a team that put up a hard fight for Central Ontario League honours.

You will be greatly missed not only on the ball field, but generally, and in asking you to accept this souvenir of your association with us, we unite in wishing you every success in your new headquarters.

Ald. Phelan emphasised Mr. Solomon's efforts in promoting baseball in this section.

In reply, the guest of honour reviewed some of the features of his connection with baseball in Peterborough ,and advised his hearers to interest themselves in the City League and in the development of young players.

Mr. Frank Convery also eulogised Mr. Solomon for what he had accomplished in the city.

KLEAGLE GETS FIVE YEARS

Rev. E. O. Jones Sentenced in Fairmount, W. Va., Negro Shooting

FAIRMOUNT, W. Va., Oct. 30. — Convicted of conspiracy in the shooting of Dan Washington a negro, because of his alleged association with a white woman, the Rev E. O. Jones, general kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan here, was sentenced by Judge E. M. Showalter to serve five years in the State penitentiary at Moundsville.

J. A. Landis convicted on a similar charge was fined $500 and sentenced to serve sixty days in jail. Ivan Polling, another defendent, was fined $500. The Court granted a sixty day stay of execution to permit a circuit court writ of error appeal.

BOBBED HAIR COSTLY TO THE FAIR SEX

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(United Press).—"The woman pays" is a phrase which holds significance in the barbershop at least. Where a man can step into a shop and get a haircut for thirty-five cents, (some places) a woman has no such luck. Even at the fourth rate shops where butchering rather than barbering marks the results, one has to pay from seventy-five cents to a dollar for a hair trim.

Better shops in New York charge from a dollar and a half to four dollars for a haircut. That brings the high cost of being bobbed up considerably as one generally gets a hairtrim every two weeks. One goes to a barber very much as one goes to a doctor, with fear and trembling.

Some want to be boyish, but not too boyish. Others want to show the contour of the head without having the hair on the back of the head in unequal lengths. Others don't know what they want, and the poor barber has to undergo trials similar to those of the henpecked husband. If he cuts the hair too short he is a dunce and a butcher and there is an argument at the cashier's desk about the payment of the check. He is threatened with suits from irate husbands who do not favor masculine-looking wives. If he leaves the hair too long, he is accused of charging money for nothing.

Bobbed hair is far more costly and more troublesome than long hair, but it is worth the price, according to those who are bobbed.

The fashionable boyish cut is the equivalent to the feather cut in the masculine world. When a man asks for a feather cut he knows that he is going to have a feather cut, but when a woman asks for one she never knows what's going to happen to her. Her hair is ruffled up and backcombed and cut and snipped until each hair is a bristle of uneven length. If the effect isn't becoming, one blames the barber and consoles oneself with the thought that in three or four months one can try another barber shop and hope for better results.

Hair cuts grow shorter and shorter, it seems. Recently a few women have been trying out a typical mannish haircut only allowing, as a concession to vanity, a short side-burn effect in front of the ears. The hair is cut fully as short as a man's all about the head, leaving the ears showing. The two wisps which are trained forward over the cheeks have the appearance of sideburns.

Should this style become universally popular it will be the death blow to bobbed hair. However, there is no tendency toward long hair coming in style again. More women are bobbing their hair every day. All ages, sizes and types are bobbed in various manner. Most of the fashionables have the hair permanently waved or marcelled in front and at the sides, if the hair is not already curly, and the back is left straight and cut close to the head.

While the bobbed haired person looks like an impish, carefree thing, her life is not a bubble of joy as far as hair is concerned. It's just one unkind cut after another.

SEMI-CENTENNIAL GEORGE ST. CHURCH

Thomas H. Robinson. Member and Worker of the Church Since 1861 Spoke.

The services and evenings in connection with the semi-centennial of George Street Church have a place in the public attention during this week, flowing over from last week, and will continue for and on the first two days of next week.

Last night (Wednesday) was a particularly happy occasion. The church lecture hall and Sunday School Room held a large gathering, which came together, the occasion being Reminiscences Night. Everyone who had something to recall, to relate, to interest others, and included in the invitation, had opportunity to speak ,and there was no lack of short addresses and interesting relation.

Mr. John J. Hartley took the chair and cordially invited that there be little of hesitation amongst those who had things to tell. As a start off he told of his early association with the church, of his boyhood and early manhood spent in the work of the Sunday School and later on in the classes for youths and adults. Recalled just how things were appointed, the routine and teachings, and told of those with whom he associated and from whom he drew much that was valuable and instructive.

The Dean of the gathering was Mr. Thomas H. Robinson, a member of and worker in the church since 1861. In spite of having his eyesight very frail and elusive, he made a most feeling and heartening narrative. Reference to his father and mother, both pioneers in the Township of Smith. A most valuable woman was Mrs. Robinson, and at a time when the doctor was not to be had or called in, and medical service was almost entirely unprocurable, Mrs. Robinson was the stand-by of a large number of families who relied on her skill and deftness. For the first twenty years of settlement of the township there was seldom a child came into the world lacking the kindly and most helpful ministrations of that good woman. Of his own conversion and its consequences ,its influence on his life ever afterwards, and of the comfort and strength in his affliction he gave narrative and incident. In recalling those with whom he was connected both in church and business activities, he mentioned Jame, Stevenson, Robinson Rutherford, Joseph Ford, Isaac Milburn, William Morrow, and many others whose names are as household words in our older families. Growing from youth to manhood, he was identified with the Sunday School ,and further on was superintendent for many years, serving faithfully in the position and esteemed for his industry and faithfulness

Mr. Harry Stabler told an interesting story of his life in and with the church, coming along about 1870. Active in the church, taking part in all its counsels, filling such duty as assigned to him ,and loyally firm and faithful to the interests of the congregation. Especially emphasised the value to him of Christian teaching and association, and urged others to enter into such beneficial connection .

Mr. Ben. Shortly, who came from Montreal in 1867 to get into business, at first at Lakefield and afterwards at Peterborough told of his personal experience in connection with the church. For nearly sixty years he had maintained his connection with the church, helping him in his daily life and strengthenig his resolve to be a worthy and competent Methodist.

Others spoke and added experiences and incidents, often such seemed of consequence to the narrators, even if of slight import to others. But all enjoyed the evening, for it was a real Clearing House for old-time stories and happenings.

NEWS OF TWEED.

TWEED, Oct. 30.—Mrs. C. S. Boots of Smiths Falls, and Mrs. Rattray of Perth, were in town for the Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society meeting, on Tuesday.

The Rotary inter-city meet at Belleville on Monday night was a big event. Rotarians were present from Peterboro, Cobourg, Kingston, Port Hope, Bowmanville and Lindsay. Dinner was held at the Quinte Hotel. An address was given by Sir Robert Falconer of the University of Toronto.

WEDDING BELLS

NICHOLLS—CRAPP.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Selwyn Methodist Church on Wednesday, October 29, at 11 a.m. when Mildred Mae, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Crapp, Sr., of Smith, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Theodore, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Nicholls, of Smith. The Rev. P. H. Neville officiated.

The bride entered the church, which was prettily decorated in pink and white, on the arm of her father, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Mary Nicholls, sister of the groom.

The bride was charmingly gowned in ivory kitten's ear crepe, with veil of chiffon caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of ophelia roses.

Miss Doreen Davis acted as flower girl. She was dressed in pink silk, with veil, and carried a basket of double asters and roses. Miss Maurietta Roseborough, of Peterboro, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, wearing muffin georgette, with bands of gold lace over peach crepe de chene, with black hat, and carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses.

The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Gratton Nicholls.

During the signing of the register, Miss Margaret Dickson, of Hall's Bridge, sang very sweetly, "Oh Promise Me."

The groom's gift to the bride was a silver mesh bag, to the bridesmaid an orange crepe scarf, to the flower girl a tortoiseshell jewel case, to the soloist a silver bar pin, to the organist an onyx ring, to the groomsman an aquamarine scarf pin.

The happy couple left later for their honeymoon amid showers of good wishes and confetti, by motor to Peterboro, leaving on the 3.25 train for Toronto and other points. The bride travelling in brown wrap and hat to match.

On their return they will reside in Smith.

The Ladies' Aid of Selwyn beautifully decorated the church for the occasion. The ushers were Messrs. William Pavy and Everett Nicholls.

OBITUARY

MRS. HARRIET McCOLL

The death occurred to-day of Mrs. Harriet McColl relic of the late Charles M. McColl in her 85th year.

The deceased was born in England but for the past 70 years she has resided in this community. She was well known in Lakefield having resided there for the past number of years and was a faithful member of the Lakefield Methodist church.

FOURTH VICTIM OF STRANGE GAS; 31 IN HOSPITAL

Tetra Ethyl Lead Gas for Improvement of Gasoline, Baffles Officials.

UNDER EXPERIMENT

Progressive Effects Upon Workers in Standard Oil Labratory.

NEW YORK, October 31. — One more man died in the Reconstruction Hospital here on Wednesday from the effects of tetra ethyl lead gas inhaled in the laboratory of the Standard Oil Company at its Bayway, Elizabeth, N.J., plant. This brings the death list to four.

The man who died on Wednesday was William Kresge, 29 years old.

Herbert Fuson ,whose death was expected, became violent and had to be put in a straitjacket. Late last night he was showing slight improvement.

Physicians keeping close watch on the men affected, whether at their homes, in the hospital in Elizabeth, or at the Reconstruction Hospital in New York, were unable to prognosticate the outcome of the other cases. Because of the progressive character of the seizures in those instances which already have ended fatally, they feared to say whether more deaths were to be anticipated or whether subsidence of the attacks, possibly with perhaps some permanent impairment, might be expected.

The chief cause for alarm in Elizabeth, where the families of many men are watching the outcome of each case, was that Kresge was not expected to die when he with four others was taken to the Reconstruction Hospital. But his symptoms became worse in spite of every effort to relieve them, and now all but one of the first five to be brought to New York are dead.

Eleven More Brought Here.

Eleven more laboratory workers were brought from Elizabeth to the Reconstruction Hospital. Four were removed from hospital and seven were taken from their homes. Definite information as to the extent to which they were affected was not made public, but it was said their cases ranged from "light" to "serious." A check-up indicated that a total of thirty-five had manifested symptoms of the lead attacks which have raged in their effects from nervous derangement through insanity to violent seizures ending in death.

Of these thirty-five, four are dead, twenty-seven are undergoing treatment in one hospital in New York, where efforts to save the lives and the reason of the stricken workers have been largely concentrated, and four are still in Elizabeth. Only ten of the forty-five employees of the laboratory remain thus far unaffected.

With the discovery that the effects of the gas had been much more widespread on the workers who had been exposed than had at first believed to be the case, renewed effort was made on Wednesday at the main offices of the Standard Oil Company at 26 Broadway here to obtain comment on the situation. It was said, however, that there was "nothing to say."

In face of the increasing ravages of the attacks the State of New Jersey intensified its efforts to deal with the menace, backed up to some degree by the Federal Government and by the State of New York, because the deaths have occurred here.

The hand that the Federal Government thus far has arranged to take in the investigation of the strange malady arising out of the lead gas is to be extended by the Bureau of Mines, which is sending a group of gas experts from its Washington laboratories.

Its men arrived yesterday and began researches into the nature of the gas and its effects and strive to find an antidote, or at least to develop remedial methods which will avert disaster from those exposed. In this they will co-operate with other experts already at work.

"New York's aid in trying to find a serviceable weapon in the battle against the deadly gas is largely in the hands of Dr. Alexander O. Gettler, toxicologist of Bellevue Hospital.

Dr. Gettler now has the brains of some of the victims for both microscopical and chemical examination. He will both place the results of his own investigations at the service of the experts of the sister State and aid them by supplying pathological material for their own independent investigations.

CAR'S GAS TANK FOUND INTACT

Investigators Believe Explosive Bomb Intended for Veregin in C.P.R. Coach.

NINE ARE DEAD.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 31. — The exact cause of the train explosion, which killed Peter Veregin, head of the Doukhobor colony, Nelson, B.C., and seven other persons, may never be known, investigators said Thursday.

Two of twelve injured died during the night, bringing the total dead to eight. Another is dying.

"I ran out when the train suddenly stopped," Thomas Uphill, Socialist member of the British Columbian Legislature, who was in a car ahead of the one in which the explosion occurred, told the United Press. "There was a smell of gunpowder or dynamite in the air, but everything was so completely obliterated, I could see no evidence of a container of explosives."

With bomb experts of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Provincial police detectives under Inspector W. Dumwoodie and members of the Canadian Pacific Railway investigation department on the ground, every effort is being made to clear up the mystery of the explosion.

That the blast was caused by a bomb or package of high explosives within the car close to where Peter Veregin was seated, is the belief expressed by those who are investigating the affair.

Gas Tanks Intact.

Witnesses gathering at Grand Forks to give evidence before Coroner Kingston, who opened an inquest on Wednesday and is continuing it, say that the lighting gas tanks beneath the floor of the coach were intact following the wreckage of the car. These were noted before the car was destroyed by fire which followed the explosion.

CLOUDS CHASED, STORM CHECKED BY U.S. AVIATORS

Electrified Sand Discharged By Centrifugal Force Broke Up Cloud Formations.

ALSO BRINGS RAIN

Could End London Fog and Clear Harbors of Heavy Mists.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Using an electrified sand process devised by Dr. L. Francis Warren of Harvard University, two army aviators successfully "shot down" a series of clouds which overshadowed Bolling Field.

Small groups disappeared entirely under the attack, while heavier masses were criss-crossed with artificial chasms through which the sun's rays pierced brightly to the earth.

The operations of the two planes, piloted by Captain A. L. Eagle and Lieutenant W. E. Melville, were plainly apparent to spectators at the field. They were forced to climb 13,000 feet before they reached the main strata of cumulus clouds, which was their objective. Through special binoculars they were seen to disappear behind a fragment and then suddenly to "break through" again as the cloud disintegrated under the shower of electrified sand thrown by centrifugal force through nozzles set in the under portion of the fuselages. The aviators described a circle above the cloud bank and the circle was duplicated in a clean cut pathway through the mist. From the ground it appeared that the cloud perceptibly lessened throughout its structure as the planes proceeded.

Aviators Shoot Cloud Away.

A projecting isthmus of cloud was dissipated as the planes skirted its edge, spraying the fine silica.

Both aviators declared the experiment a success without attempting to predict its value when utilized on a large scale.

"Undoubtedly it would serve to clear the field of a dense fog bank," Captain Eagle said. "If we were advised that a squadron was approaching the field, for instance, and could not locate the landing because of the low clouds or fog, we could send up two or three ships and clear a path for them. I suppose the same effect could be had over fog-wrapped harbors."

Captain Eagle said he had "dug an immense well" into one cloud bank which, however, was so thick that he had been unable to drive the aperture to the under-side.

"I circled in the cloud," he said, "and the sand cut a perfect well. On every side rose the white walls and far above was the blue sky."

He agreed with Lieutenant Melville that one cloud appeared to drop away when attacked and to reform, in lesser volume, at a lower level.

Dr. Warren described the work at Bolling Field as a "mere continuation of the invariably successful experiments of the last three years."

Description of the Process.

"We have had nothing happen in the last three years," he asserted, "to make us change our claims or our minds. We base our work on the assumption that visible forms of moisture in the air, like mists, fogs, clouds, etc., were a form of colloidal suspension in gases and that they should be governed by the same general laws that prevail in colloidal action in liquids and solids.

"We fill the sand tanks on the planes with 120 mesh silica, the planes being equipped for charging the sand either positively or negatively by the turn of a lever. The sand, impinging upon the charging plates or falling through charging nozzles, is scattered by the air and driven back by the plane propeller.

"When a cloud is found to have a positive charge, we scatter negatively charged particles at the extreme top; and when it is found without any charge, we first charge it as we like and then bring it down by again scattering the opposite charged particles, etc.

"These tests have resulted in some cases in uncanny manifestations. For example, on July 8, at about 2 o'clock of the afternoon, a frightfully heavy thunderstorm with almost continuous lightning lay to the south of Phillips Field, over Chesapeake Bay. At 2.30 we attacked a small corner of this storm with a quantity of negatively charged sand—less than ten pounds—and coincident with its application, there was no more lightning and no more thunder. There followed a slow, gentle rain of about four hours' duration.

The weather is now entering the storm period for the great lakes and for the next six weeks voyages are expected to be anything but pleasant.

TWO MADE DESTITUTE BY VANCOUVER WRECK

C.P.R. Passengers Lost Baggage—Jail Was Their Shelter.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 31.— Patrick Scanlon and James Woulfe, former employees of the West Kootenay Power Company, who were passengers on the C.P.R. train upon which Peter Veregin and seven others were killed, were released from the city jail Thursday morning. They had been there since late on Wednesday night by orders of the C.P.R. police merely with a desire to provide them accommodation for the night, not as suspects in the train explosion or any other matter.

They had lost their money and baggage in the wreck, landing in Vancouver with only the clothes they had been wearing. In this destitute state they were taken to the city jail for the night.

PREMIER PLEASED

Well Received in West — Sees Business Improving.

CALGARY, Oct. 31.— Expressing himself as more than pleased with the reception he had received through western Canada, Premier MacKenzie King arrived in Calgary yesterday from Lethbridge. Mr. King said that his observation led him to believe there was a distinct improvement in business and financial conditions throughout the west, particularly in British Columbia.

"I believe the tide has distinctly turned," he said. "Our export figures show this and especially is this true in the great natural resources of fish, lumber, fruits and minerals."

COURT ANNULS OLD MARRIAGE

Mother of Seven, Married 21 Years, Discovers Husband Bigamist.

NOT CONTESTED

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—A marriage performed in Detroit, Mich., twenty-one years ago, which resulted in the birth of seven children, three of whom are now living, was annulled here Wednesday, on the ground of bigamy, by Mr. Justice Bruneau, in practice division, superior court.

The annulment proceedings were instituted by Dame Laura Couture, who married Paul Emile Bordron, in Detroit on April 17, 1903. In her action, the woman declared that before they were married, Bordron had told her of a previous marriage, with one Eugenie Renaud, but had assured her this marriage had been annulled. Six months ago, however, she discovered that the first marriage was still valid, and that Bordron had not told the truth. The ecclesiastical authorities, she affirmed, had granted her annulment on the ground of bigamy and she asked that court do likewise. Bordron did not contest the action.

MURDER BREAKS TRUCE OF TONGS

Hip Sing, Tongsman, Shot Down While Armistice Was Being Discussed.

SLAYER ESCAPED

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The din of a murderer's pistol echoed through Chinatown again Thursday, shattering all prospects of immediate peace among tong warriors.

The Chinese consul general with government officials from Washington Oriental merchants from distant cities and local tong leaders had drawn up a 14-day armistice and were about to sign it.

Then the crack of rapid gunfire rattled the dusty windows of the little room where they deliberated. Gee Ying, alias Frankie Lee, a Hip Sing tongsman, swayed through a neighboring doorway, clutched at the air a couple of times, shrieked and died in the arms of a police detective.

Ling had taken advantage of the rumored peace to venture into Doyer street, stronghold of the On-Leongs to purchase supplies for his chop-suey house on Third Avenue of the lower East Side.

Who killed him and why, has not been determined. His slayer escaped across the housetops into another section of Chinatown before the authorities who have swarmed the section during the tong war, could surround and search the tenement where he met death.

CONSERVATIVES TWO-THIRDS OF COMMONS WITH MORE THAN 400 OF TOTAL MEMBERSHIP OF 615

Labor Cabinet Meets Today Probably for the Last Time, Although It May Decide to Postpone Resignation in Order to Investigate the Zinovieff Affair.

LIBERALISM SUBMERGED IN SEEMING PACT WITH TORIES AGAINST LABOR

Baldwin Prepared to Form a Ministry in Time for the Reopening of Parliament—Final Figures Not to Be Available for a Week.

ASQUITH AND MACDONALD IN LONDON

LONDON, Oct. 31.—(Canadian Press).—When the counting of all the election returns, with the exception of a few outstanding returns from the universities and Scotland, was concluded last night, the composition of the new House of Commons was found to be as follows:

Conservatives, 398; Labor, 149; Liberals, 40; Independents, 4; Co-operatives, 5; Constitutionalists, 3; Communists, 1. Total, 600.

Membership of the House, 615.

Conservatives, 259; Labor, 192; Liberals, 158; others, 5; vacant, (London University) 1. Total, 615.

	New House.	Old.	Gains.	Losses.
Conservatives	401	259	153	6
Labor	154	192	24	42
Liberals	40	158	9	111
Others	13	5	...	...

Roughly, in the new House the Conservatives will number double all the other parties combined. A Cabinet Council has been summoned to meet at Downing Street today, at which the Government will consider the situation and decide upon its course of procedure.

An Astounding Victory

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Conservatives will have more than four hundred members out of a total membership of 615 in the new House of Commons. That is the startling outcome of the third appeal to the country within two years. The exact figures cannot yet be given; because in the Universities and some outlying Scottish islands the counting will not be completed for another week.

Because of this astounding Conservative victory, it is expected that Premier MacDonald who returned to London last night will call an immediate cabinet council to consider the government's position. This may quite possibly prove to be the last meeting of a labor cabinet in England for the next five or more years.

The expectation last night was that the MacDonald cabinet will decide to resign forthwith, thus making way for the Baldwin ministry.

There is, however, another alternative— to follow the precedent set by the Baldwin ministry after the last general elections—meet parliament and wait for defeat on the address from the throne. One strong motive following this course would be that Premier MacDonald has declared his intention probe to the roots of the Zinovieff affair and this he would be in a position to do effectively only while he retained the foreign secretaryship, with access to all departmental documents.

Delay Not Justified

In the face of such a stunning defeat as the government has suffered at the polls, however, it is generally thought that even the investigation of the Zinovieff affair would not justify the cabinet in carrying on until parliament meets. When J. H. Thomas, secretary for the colonies, recently declared that the government would await defeat in the Commons, he had in mind undoubtedly a future position in which it would require the combined vote of the Conservatives and Liberals to overthrow the ministry, and not a position where the Conservatives would command an absolute majority over all parties. Under these circumstances the chances strongly favor the immediate resignation of the ministry.

Next to the tremendous success of the Conservatives who gained approximately 159 seats and lost something under ten to the other parties the most striking thing is the submergence of the Liberal party. When Herbert H. Asquith, the Liberal leader, announced a bare two months ago his intention to move censure motion on the government's Russian policy, he could not possibly have envisaged the fate which has overtaken his old and respected party, that now sees itself faced with extinction, its leaders, including himself, routed and its numbers in the new house reduced to one-tenth those of the Consevatives. The Liberals suffered disaster in the so-called khaki election of 1918, but nothing comparable to this, and the question forces itself upon political inquirers as to what can have induced the experienced Liberal leader thus to rush upon his fate. The Liberal organs are persistent in accusing Ramsay MacDonald of forcing an unnecessary election but the Labor reply to this contention is that the Liberals had entered into an understanding with the Conservatives to bring Labor's reign to an end.

A Dwindling Force

Liberalism has been a dwindling force in all recent elections and bye-elections in as rapid a ratio as Labor ism has been a growing force, and while no predictions could have been made regarding the possible future either of the Unionist or Labor parties it seemed hopeless to expect any considerable revival of Liberalism, which occupies a middle position, fearing to commit itself to the extreme planks of Laborism or to the reactionary policy of the Conservatives.

The existence of any official pact between the Liberal and Conservative parties for purposes of election is still denied by the leaders of the respective parties but there were evidences of the existence of something of the kind when the Liberals in a large number of constituencies stood down to help the Conservatives in otherwise triangular contests, and it would seem impossible to avoid the conclusion that there was some sort of understanding for coalition tactics in the new parliament. Any such coalition is not needed now and consequently nothing more will be heard of it.

At Labor headquarters naturally much disappointment is felt. One leading official said: "It was the Liberal intention to put the Conservatives into power, and they have succeeded at the cost of what is virtually their own extinction.

"The pact has operated to the advantage of the Conservatives who have also won many seats on minority votes in three-cornered constituencies. Most of the Liberals who have been elected owe their success to Conservative support. Our aggregate vote has markedly increased, but the luck of the election has been against it, respect of resentation.

The debacle which overwhelmed the Liberal party has not been confined to any particular section of the LATE RASPBERRIES.

P. G. Towns Has Gathered Fruit For Second Time This Season.

Mr. P. G. Towns of Douro brought into the Examiner office this morning some raspberry canes that are bearing fruit for a second time this season. The energetic canes, which had a good crop of berries during July and August, took a little rest, and are once again bursting forth with light red fruit. They are not of the Ever-bearing variety, being merely the common, garden type of raspberry, and this is the first time in Mr. Towns' experience that his canes have worked so hard during the one season.

HUNTER KILLED A LARGE WHITE DEER

Valley Containing Abundant Game Found In Northern British Columbia.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press.—Sub-Tropical Valley in northern British Columbia just south of the Yukon territory border, fringed in with glaciers and perpetual snows is to be colonized next year by the wealthy Vancouver, B.C., sportsmen and mining men, according to S. C. Scottie, discoverer who was in the city to-day after spending three years there.

The valley is 480 miles inland inaccessable and contains abundant game," said Mr. Scotte. The temperature never gets below zero and freezing temperature is rare. Grass, hay, berries and wild fruits grow in profusion. It is about twenty miles long and two or three miles wide.

I encountered several species of wild animals never seen before. Most curious was a large white deer weighing about 600 pounds. It had a horn on one side of the head. A series of hot springs one one side of valley are responsible for the mild winters and the long pleasant summer. The soil is very fertile.

And many other facts regarding the eye health of the public.

Make a point to follow the series carefully.

(To Be Continued.)

THE CALL OF THE NORTH WOODS

Never do the great American North Woods call so insistently, never are they so full of beauty as during this magic month of October, when the mornings are sparkling cool and clear, when the wild goose honks over the still lakes, when the trees are a symphony in crimson, green and gold, when the sun goes down like a ball of fire and all night long the quivering northern lights play across the sky.

Then it is that you long to leave the city's dust and din, the ticker, the telephone, the typewriter, the newspaper, stiff collars and razors all behind and answer the call of the northern wilds. You see the trail of the moose on the spongy moss. You hear the call of the wild things of the forest, the song of a bullet through the clean cool air and the crash of your lordly prey as it falls before your aim. But perhaps business is urgent and each day is filled to the brim and you feel you cannot go.

Still the north woods call; and one day you will be able to stand it no longer. You will get out your old rifle, sweaters and togs and go to the nearest Canadian National Railways office and ask for their publication "Hunting in Canada." In this booklet you will find listed the choicest spots and full information regarding accomodation and guides. Also ask for special train service pamphlet..

WEDDING BELLS.

THOMAS—CONROY

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Mary's Church at seven this morning by Father Murphy, of Carrie May, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Conroy, Peterboro, Ontario, to Mr. Gregory Thomas game warden of the Kootenay district. The palms, ferns and brilliant autumn flowers and foliage making a very pretty setting for the bride who entered on the arm of her brother. She wore her going-away costume, of navy blue, white satin picture hat and carried a bouquet of butterfly roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. James Conroy was matron of honour wearing a midnight blue with silver trimmings and carried Columbia roses.

The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a diamond pendant and to the matron of honour, diamond ear-rings

During the services Miss Mott sang Salutaris and at the signing of the register "Because". Following the ceremony a reception was held for immediate relatives and friends at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. James Conroy, Burwell Ave. The brides' table was done with pink snapdragon, pink tulle and silver The beautiful presents showed the high esteem of the young couple; a cheque from her parents in Ontario a silver tea service from St. Mary's choir; a beautiful cut glass fruit set from Fernie Curling Club and a handsome leather arm chair from the Provincial office.

ROBERTS—FRIZZELL.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. John's Church on Wednesday, when Elsie E. Frizzell and William H. Roberts were united in marriage. Rev. R. C. Blagrave performd the ceremony. The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. N. J. Grose of Toronto, looked charming in grey crepe de chine, with shoes and hose to match, and a black picture hat. She carried Ophelia roses. Mrs. Grace Giles, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and looked becoming in sand satin with shoes, stockings and hat to match and carried pink carnations. Mr. Kenneth Blood supported the groom. After the ceremony the guests returned to the bride's home, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served. Mrs. F. Akers, of Churchill, mother of the bride, received the guests.

A MUSICAL EVENING

At the Conservatory of Music on Thursday night, a most enjoyable evening of music was given by Miss Edwina Palmer's violin students, and members of her class in Ensemble playing. The latter who have been studying the early sonatas for violin and piano, gave very musical performances of movements of sonatas by Corelli, Tartini, and Handel with Miss Palmer, the piano parts being played by Kathleen Sutton, pupil of Mr. Rupert Gliddon, Olga Fowler, and Mary Harstone, pupils of Mrs. Burford Curtis. The young violin students displayed the results of the past months studies in the most creditable manner, and Miss Palmer also gave a short talk on plans for the coming season, including the formation of a Studio Club to assist her with a series of talks on 'Musical Appreciation' to be given during the winter months. Her students were asked to attend a meeting to discuss plans, and elect officers on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. Those taking part in last night's program were: Donald Greene, Alice Brown, Irene King, Ralph Clark, Dorothy Kimberley, Winnie Evans, Max Warne, Roy Rome, Jeannette Allen, Harold Johnstone, and Stewart Dawson.

FIRE DESTROYED A COBOURG HOUSE

North Hastings Man Has Been Arrested on a Serious Charge.

COBOURG, Oct. 31.—Provincial Officer Cousons arrived back from Alberta at the week-end bringing with him Fred Mayhew, who it is stated, faces a serious charge in North Hastings. Mayhew was remanded for a week.

House Was Burned.

While Mr. Norman Pinch and family were out walking on a fine afternoon fire destroyed their house at Tricky's Corners in Clarke township, with its contents. It is thought the fire may have ignited from the stove.

Suspended Sentence.

F. Pearse, who had been working for Mr. Geo. Bayes, who resides near Castleton, came up here before Judge Cameron, the newly appointed Judge for Northumberland and Durham, on charges of forgery and receiving. It is alleged that Pearse bought a suit of clothes at Pattenecks in this town, and articles also from C. E. Roberts, garage at Grafton, giving in each instance a cheque to which was attached the name of Mr. Geo. Bayes. He was arrested at Port Hope by Provincial Officer Cousons in July, and brought here where he came up and was committed for trial before the Judge. Pearse was allowed his freedom upon bail of $500, said surety being given by Mr. Bayes, who has stood by him in his trouble.

He has made restitution for the goods he received and when he came before Judge Cameron on Saturday was allowed to go on suspended sentence, upon giving his own bond of $500 to go straight after this. Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr conducted the prosecution and Mr. F. F. Hall, K.C., was counsel for Mr. Pearse.

CLOUDS CHASED

"No claim is, of course, made that the rain was caused by us, because it would have rained anyhow, but the rain would have been attended by constant thunder and lightning and the sudden bursts of downpour so familiar to us. This experiment was intended to test an opinion expressed by Mr. Edison in an interview in which he was reported to have stated that we should be able to upset the electric charge of a tornado or a cyclone.

"A much better showing could have been made if we had planes that could widely scatter electrified sand at the rate of 1,100 pounds per minute. With the planes as they are now, we can release only thirty pounds per minute. The small planes with their light weight are all right for fog and all right for flirting with clouds, and have at least proved beyond doubt that the principle is correct and practicable, which means that a celestial epoch has been reached in the affairs of man. Commercial rain-making now lies within the grasp of man and he can employ to this end one of nature's cheapest commodities, namely, common or garden silica, at a cost of about $8 per ton, which, outside of maintaining the equipment and operating the planes, will be the only charge."

Could End London Fog.

"Two of the larger planes would be quite sufficient to entirely squelch a dense fog covering 117 square miles or more (an area equal to that of the city of London) or a fog covering the City and Harbor of New York. The London Chamber of Commerce has estimated the cost to the city of each twenty-four hour dense fog at £1,000,000, or about $5,000,000.

The Eastern farmers should not lose sight of the fact that this development is not restricted to the dry or semi-dry sections, since during the past summer the East suffered from lack of rain to a point where, if it had not been timely bestowed, there would have been little or no corn crop. It must be borne in mind that in a section which has a mean annual precipitation of say forty inches, considerably over one-third of the rainfall is due to local showers. In dealing with rainfall the wiseacres seem to have lost sight of this fact. It is from this one-third that we should get our best results in the East.

"From the outset this undertaking has been industrial rather than military, but as the country is organized at present, since we are forced to employ aircraft, it was inevitable that the Army Air Service should co-operate.

"Should the Government provide the money and facilities to perfect, install and operate the process for large-scale work, with hundreds of planes designed and built to carry 3,000 pounds of sand to heights varying from 1,500 to 15,000 feet, it will have at its command the means of removing fog over its harbors, leading cities and elsewhere, and the power, further, to cause rainfall, as when and where needed, both in the East and in the dry and semi-dry sections of the country—provided, of course, that there are rain-clouds present, local or otherwise, and that the air between the earth and the clouds is saturated to a degree beyond the point of evaporation, that is to say, at times when it sprinkles and does not rain."

Mr. Abe David, New Jersey prosecutor, said that he had learned that the tetraethyl lead was made only in a crude state in the Bayway laboratory and that he understood it was shipped in drums to Dayton, Ohio, there to be refined and thence distributed for introduction into gasoline, the combustion of which in automobile motors it was intended to improve. The prosecutor added that efforts were under way to learn if any of the finished product had been shipped back into New Jersey, and was on sale.

Protective Law Planned.

While Mr. David was gathering all available evidence and the scientists were conducting their researches, the New Jersey State Department of Labor took a hand yesterday. Dr. Andrew F. McBride, the State Commissioner, directed a state-wide inquiry into the manufacture, use and transportation of the substance, the production of which has had such unexpectedly alarming results. On the outcome of that investigation will be based immediate and drastic steps to avert danger if it is found that the temporary closing of the Bayway laboratory has not ended the menace, and that the stuff is being produced, handled or sold elsewhere. There will also be drafted a covering law. This proposed law, according to the Labor Department will be introduced at the next session of the Legislature.

It will either seek to prohibit the manufacture of the substance, if it is found that its dangers cannot be eliminated or else it will carry stringent regulations for experimental and commercial production, handling, sale and use. New Jersey now has no law regulating the handling of gasoline and like products. Heretofore it has been left to municipalities to enact ordinances for the control of dangerous petroleum products and outside of municipality limits there were no regulations. Dr. McBride determined some time ago that a state law was desirable and had decided to ask the Legislature to enact one at its 1925 session which starts early in the year.

Chemist's Suicide.

The Elizabeth police are trying to learn whether Henry C. Becker, employed as a chemist in the laboratory last summer, was the first victim of the gas. The New York police notified them early on the morning of Sept. 26 that Becker had jumped or fallen from a sixth story window in a New York hotel. Becker boarded in the home of Samuel Webb, at 101 Orchard street. Webb said that Becker kept very much to himself. On Sept. 25 he announced he was leaving Elizabeth and asked Webb to ship his trunks to 47 Jefferson avenue, Brooklyn.

Claude Becker, a cousin, said yesterday, that Henry was a graduate of Trinity College, Ireland, and apparently had a promising career before him as a chemist. About September 20, Claude Becker told his cousin's fellow employees, noticed that he was acting peculiarly. He was suspicious of the others in the plant, declaring that they were all following him and prying into his affairs. His superiors thought that his nervous condition was due to strain and over work, and about Sept. 25 he was transferred to New York and took a furnished room at 47 Jefferson ave., Brooklyn. The next day, according to Claude Becker, Henry went to Manhattan, and engaged a room at the Herald Square Hotel, where he committed suicide that night by jumping from a window. Claude Becker said that he could think of no motive for suicide and was inclined to attribute his cousin's condition and action to the gas fumes at the plant.

Labor urged to Act.

Immediate action by organized labor to protect workers against poisoning by gasoline containing lead was urged yesterday in a circular letter sent to trade unions throughout the country by the Workers Health Bureau of 799 Broadway.

State Federations of Labor and central labor bodies in every state have been urged to take steps at once along the following lines:

To protest to their state departments of health and industrial commissions against the exposure of workers in gasoline containing lead.

To oppose the introduction of lead in gasoline in their respective States.

To call for an immedaite and complete investigation of working conditions in the Standard Oil Company's Bayway plant and all other plants where similar experiments for manufacturing is being done.

To demand that the sale of gasoline containing lead be stopped immediately and prohibited until the subject is fully investigated by scientific experts.

That in the investigation committee chosen for the purpose, scientific experts representing labor shall be included.

It was explained by the Workers Health Bureau that the call to organized labor was based on a telegram from Dr. Yandell Henderson of Yale, in which he said that unless the sale of gasoline containing lead be immediately stopped until the subject could be fully investigated by scientific experts, "there is great danger of widespread poisoning among men at gasoline stations, garages and repair shops, and even the general public."

TILE.

A man reveals his real self by the way he wears his hat, claims Dr. C. W. Kimmins, of University of London.

He says a hat well down over the forehead indicates a thoughtful, solemn wearer. Pushed to the back of the head, it advertises happy-go-lucky. Tilted on the right side, the owner is usually a rowdy. Slouched to the left is the customary position of a mental deficient.

Women are intuitively wise when they fuss about getting their hats on at just the right angle. It's the most important trick of make-up. Maybe the best way for a man to play safe is to wear none at all.

Let Kellogg's Bran free your children from that dangerous disease—constipation

Children are subject to constipation. In the excitement of play, they neglect themselves and foster this dread disease. More than forty other diseases can be traced to constipation. Don't delay. Begin at once to cleanse their systems of the dangerous poisons.

Kellogg's Bran sweeps the intestine clean—and purifies it. It drives out the poisons which undermine your children's health. It makes the bowels function regularly and naturally.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is guaranteed to bring results if eaten regularly, or your grocer will return your money. It is guaranteed because it is ALL bran! nothing but ALL bran can be 100 per cent effective. Kellogg's Bran is recommended by doctors everywhere—they know from experience that it brings results.

Have your children eat it regularly—two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. They will like its wonderful, nut-like flavor—so different from common brans which are most unpalatable.

As a cereal, with milk or cream, they will enjoy Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled. Sprinkle it over other cereals. Cook it with hot cereals. Try it in delicious muffins, bread, griddle cakes and other recipes given on every package.

But start them eating Kellogg's Bran to-day. Start every member of your family eating it. Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is made in Toronto, Canada and is served in individual packages by the leading hotels and clubs everywhere. Ask for it at your restaurant. It is sold by all grocers.

FOREIGN OPINION ON ELECTIONS

Paris Inclined to Regard Result in Britain as Warning to Herriot—Berlin is Impassive—Brussels Expects Baldwin To Be for League of Nations.

PARIS, Oct. 31. — (Canadian Press).—Great circumspection is being observed in official circles over the British elections, although there is comment among those close to Premier Herriot to the effect that the Conservative party in Great Britain raises a permanent dike against the Bolsheviki flood.

There is an inclination in political circles to consider the fate of the Liberals as a warning to the radicals of M. Herriot's party, which is now so tied to the Socialists that it is unable to carry out its programme independently of Socialist reforms.

The downfall of Ramsay MacDonald is regretted by Herriot's closest collaborators because of fear that the Conservatives may not look with the same favor as the British Labor leader on the disarmament and security programme as laid down at Geneva. In the lobbies of the Chamber the feeling seems general that the outcome of the British elections will change the direction of France's policy, the clerical party especially hoping that Premier MacDonald's check will influence the Government's treatment of the Church.

Most of the Paris evening papers do not expect to see any great or immediate change in the foreign policy of Great Britain. L'Information, an important financial organ, for instance, thinks it unlikely that the new Ministry will go back on the preliminary measures adopted by its predecessor with the Soviets.

LORD CECIL'S RETURN.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 31.—(Canadian Press). — Interest in the Conservative victory in the elections in Britain is centered among the League of Nations officials now in Brussels in the British Government's probable attitude on the ratification of the protocol for the pacific settlement of international disputes.

In view of the traditional condition of the Conservatives on foreign policies it is believed here that the sanction clauses of the protocol which may require action by the British fleet, will be especially scrutinized, while presumably also the Conservatives will consider the effect of the protocol on American public opinion. Generally speaking, however, it is expected that the Conservatives will be staunchly pro-league.

The officials of the League here welcome the expected return as British member of the Council of Lord Robert Cecil, who in the past has played such a pre-eminent role in the development of the League of Nations as a medium for promoting world peace.

NO GAIN ON GERMANY.

BERLIN, Oct. 31. — (Canadian Press). — While the Berlin newspapers express surprise over the magnitude of the Conservative victory in Great Britain, they are unanimous in the opinion that the return of a Stanley Baldwin government to power will not mean any change in Great Britain's foreign policy as far as Germany is concerned. They feel also that the fall of the MacDonald government will not have a detrimental effect on the relations between Great Britain and Germany except possibly as regards the commercial negotiations.

EXECUTIONER HAS CHANGED HIS JOB

Repentant Hangman, Whose Victims Ran Into the Thousands, Now Peddles Rugs.

TIFLIS, Russia, Oct. 31.—One of the most remarkable and notorious characters in Russia is a Rusian-German named Nicholas Shuman, who is called "the Commissar of Death" by the natives of Georgia. He derives this sinister title from the fact that for a long time he was the official executioner of the dreaded Cheka in southern Russia. His victims ran into the thousands.

Shuman is now remorseful for all the heads he has cleaved, and has turned from human butchering to rug-selling in the bazaars of Tiflis. He may be seen any day hawking his wares to American or other foreign visitors to the Georgian capital. He is easily identified by the natives by the fact that his harsh, determined face is marked by a deep scar, the result of a violent attack made upon him with a huge iron spike by an aggrieved Georgian whose friends Shuman had put to death.

"I killed these people," said Shuman to the correspondent, "because it was my duty as official executioner for the government to do so. I could never have done it in my personal capacity. I am repentant and want to forget the past. I want to develop my better side. Do you think there is any chance for me in America as a rug merchant? I hear you have much money there. I will take a part of it for my rugs."

CHIEF STILL ON JOB.

MONTREAL, October 31. — No action has yet been taken regarding the suspension of Chief Pierre Belanger.

CAR'S GAS TANK

All tell a similar story, which is to the effect that the force of the explosion carried along the floor.

Members of the Doukhobor community near Grand Forks declare that threats had been made recently against the life of Veregin. They point to the fact that his house was burned some months ago and say that the intention of the incendiary at that time was to burn him to death.

Feared Attack.

It is said that he recently told those in his confidence that he was nervous about travelling, fearing an attack. Alex. Danshion, one of the leaders of the sect, is stated to have told the authorities that Peter Veregin had been taking precautions to ward off attempts against him.

It is on the theory that it was a bomb placed in the car for the purpose of killing the Doukhbor chieftain that the police are concentrating their investigations.

"All evidence goes to show that the first started simultaneously with the explosion, and was started by it as inside of the car was seen to be on fire immediately after the explosion."

The death of H. K. Fawcett, of Vancouver, trains news agent, from injuries received in the explosion brought the death list to nine.

FIND ALARM CLOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—The finding of an alarm clock with a part of a dry battery in a shattered grip was reported to D. C. Coleman, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Western lines at Winnipeg, by General Manager Murphy, who examined the car after the explosion took place at Farron, B.C., in which eight persons were killed, including Peter Veregin, Doukhobor leader, and John McKie, M.L.A. for Grand Forks.

SHOWER OF GIFTS TO ZELMA GAINER

Bailieboro Friends Express Appreciation of Her Many Services.

BALLIEBORO, Oct. 31.—More than a hundred friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Gainer, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jewison, on Friday evening for the purpose of presenting Mr. and Mrs. Gainer's daughter Zelma, with a miscellaneous shower, previous to her marriage on Wednesday.

Miss May Earle read an appropriate address, while Mr. Percy Barnard, and Rev. R. M. Patterson also spoke briefly expressing their regret in losing such a faithful member and worker from the Methodist church and Sunday school, as well as all other activities in the village and district. Miss Gainer made a very suitable reply, thanking her friends for their thoughtfulness in remembering her at this time, and inviting them to all go and visit her after she would be situated in her new home.

Miss Gainer has for many years been organist of the Methodist Sunday School, as well as an active member of the choir, Epworth League, Ladies' Institute and all the local activities. She will be much missed from this community.

The gifts were numerous and beautiful as well as useful being everything from a package of soap, and O'Cedar mop to a cut glass berry bowl.

Lunch was served during the evening by the ladies, and the evening was pleasantly spent in dancing.

19 YEARS A STUDENT. HE SCORNS DEGREES

Henry M. Hyde of Johns Hopkins Graduate School Decides to Take a Year Off.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 31.—Henry M. Hylde is not going back to college this fall, the first year with a single exception since 1904 that he has not pursued his studies as Johns Hopkins, according to The Baltimore Evening Sun. Away back in 1897 Hyde was graduated from Yale with the A. B. degree.

The first eleven years of his attendance at Johns Hopkins he paid most attention to the romance languages, with special emphasis on French. The last eight years his major study has been electrical engineering, with excursions into the fields of higher mathematics, anatomy, geology and botany.

In all these nineteen years he has taken no post-graduate degrees. He has studied one course after another for the love of it.

"I have never had any utilitarian purpose in any of my studies," he says. "I am not going to teach. I simply wanted to lay up certain mental resources on which I could draw in later years. And I have attained something like my idea of happiness."

There is another man on the list of students at Johns Hopkins who has attended classes regularly for something like twenty years. Most of his studies were along the lines of geology and kindred subjects. When he left the university, without taking a post-graduate degree, he went into business at the head of a company engaged in exploiting mineral resources.

MRS. DAVE FLEMING DIED IN COBOURG

Funeral Was Held in Cobourg on Wednesday Afternoon.

COBOURG, Oct. 31.—The funeral took place here yesterday of Mrs. Fleming, wife of Mr. David Fleming, who, had she lived one month longer, would have been 85 years of age. Besides her husband she leaves seven sons, James, Star City, Sask.; George Elmer, Lethbridge; Louis in Galt; David in Peterborough; Edward in Winnipeg; Ephriam in Cobourg and W. H. in the United States and four daughters, Mrs. Thomas Porter, Cobourg; Mrs. Joseph Coates, Star City, Sask.; Mrs. W. H. Farber, Cobourg; Mrs. Thomas Baird, Napanee.

Mrs. Fleming was a daughter of the late James and Alison Plens and was born on the homestead about three miles north of Baltimore, where she was married to Mr. David Fleming. She lived afterwards at Harwood, Plainville and Bewdley, before coming to Cobourg, twenty-five years ago. She was a member of the Methodist church. Two years ago last August Mr. and Mrs. Fleming celebrated the diamond jubilee of their marriage.

Among those from the district who attended the funeral besides the family of deceased, were: Mr. and Mrs. R. Campbell and Miss Webber, Gordon Hill, Mrs. Broomfield and sons Mark and Lang, Dundonald; Mr. Geo. Broomfield, Colborne; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Roison and Miss Broomfield, Vernonville; Mrs. McGuire, Baltimore; Mrs. Box, Mrs. Albert Moore; Mrs. Fred. Rowson, Port Hope; Mr. and Mrs. O. Hartford, Eddystone; Mr. V. D. Beardsall and Mrs. Wm. Beardsall, Barrie.

The pall-bearers were three sons, David, Louis and Ephriam, two grandsons, Leslie Porter, town and Harold Logo Welland, and James Pleus, Hamilton Township, the latter being a nephew.

FLED FROM THE SCENE.

A feature of the evidence heard in the civil action arising out of an automobile accident on the Chemong road last July was that the driver of the car which the defendant was endeavouring to pass callously drove away from the scene of the accident without stopping his machine even momentarily.

He must have known that there was a bad smash-up and had reason to believe that some at least of the occupants of the cars participating in the collision were seriously injured, yet he made no effort to come to the assistance of the victims.

This fugitive motorist, whose identity has not been discovered, could have given material evidence as to what happened on the night in question, and possibly it was because he realized that fact decided in favour of a quick getaway, saving himself some inconvenience, but utterly ignoring the duty that was plainly his, of going to the assistance of the injured.

In accidents of this nature drivers should recognize that common decency if nothing else requires them to be good Samaritans, not cowards who flee from the scene because of the possibility that they may be called upon to give evidence.

The Examiner has no means of knowing the identity of this particular motorist, but feels that his conduct was anything but that of a decent citizen.

WHERE CANADA GAINS.

Outside of their natural satisfaction in the fact that Great Britain is to have a period of settled government as a result of the sweeping Conservative victory, Canadians will find cause for rejoicing over the result of the British general election in the promise it holds out that the Baldwin Government will implement the increased Imperial preference offered at the last Imperial Conference.

These changes are of considerable interest to Canadians, particularly those concerning raw and canned apples, canned fish, honey, tobacco and sugar.

As outlined to the conference, it was proposed to make foreign raw apples deniable in the British market at a rate of five shillings per hundred weight, while Canadian apples would be admitted free.

Similarly, Empire-produced canned salmon and lobster would have free access to the British market as contrasted with a duty of ten shillings per hundred weight on the same kind of foreign products.

Honey would be on the same footing, while in regard to sugar there was a guarantee offered that if the duty were reduced the preference would remain as it is for ten years.

The Baldwin Government will undoubtedly stand by this offer now, and to that extent Canada will directly benefit by the change in government.

THE BRITISH LANDSLIDE.

Aftere three general elections in as many years, it must be a welcome relief to the people of Great Britain to be able to look forward to a period of stable government such as is promised by the complete triumph at the polls of the Conservative party.

The promise of the early returns has been completely fulfilled, as the figures have come in from all parts of Great Britain leaving the Conservatives in possession of a huge majority over all other parties.

The defeat of the MacDonald Governmnt, of course, was anticipated, even by Labour supporters, but there were few commentators sufficiently bold enough to claim nearly 400 seats for the Conservatives.

The swing to the Baldwin colours was much greater than was anticipated, and the Liberals suffered even more severely than Labour as a result. In fact, the historic old party was completely wrecked, the Liberals losing over one hundred seats, and coming back to the House with but a scant two-score members, Labour lost between 40 and 50 seats, while the net Conservative gain when all the returns are in will be 150 seats.

Britain has spoken against Bolshevism and Communism. The Zinovieff letter—whether it was a forgery or not matters little, for the people believed in its authenticity—played a part in the landslide, but even without it the MacDonald administration would have gone down, because the Premier's handling of the Russian situation had alarmed Britishers.

That fact taken in conjunction with dissastisfaction over the record of the Government spelled disaster for Labour, while the Liberal cause was wrecked by the feeling that the best way to strike at the Labour party and ensure stable government was to swing to the Conservative side.

Baldwin is in a position to administer the affairs of the nation with determination and confidence, supported as he is by a strong majority, and the result should be beneficial.

THE DAWN OF BETTER TIMES.

Good, sound, wholesome common-sense is the essence of the advertisement, "The Dawn of Better Times," from the James Fisher Company, appearing in today's issue.

Propaganda, yes, but helpful propaganda, and just the kind of stuff that Canadians need to drink in these days.

The keynote is found in the statement that "altogether there are good and sound reasons for Canadian business men to feel more cheerful, more hopeful, more confident than for several years past."

Mr. Hanna of the Babson statistical organization told the Chamber of Commerce a few nights ago—and the Fisher advertisement repeats it—"while no boon is to be expected, healthier business—a new normal—is indicated."

Briefly, the reasons for this feeling may be listed.

1. The acute business depression following the war has been weathered.
2. The West has harvested a good crop, and the Western farmers will receive over $200,000,000 more than in 1923.
3. The bountiful harvest in Ontario and Eastern Ontario will bring the farmers better money returns than for several years.
4. The morale of the Canadian people is better.
5. Failures for the first eight months of 1924 were less than for the same period last year.
6. Our favourable trade balance is increasing.
7. The situation in Europe is clearing, promising the opening up of larger markets for Canadian exports.
8. Trade with the Orient is growing.

These are all sign-posts showing that this country is in a sound position, and that indeed "the Dawn of Better Times is breaking across the Dominion."

The Fisher Company's lead should be followed. Canada is the better for such optimism.

TROUBLE IN INDIA.

Always trouble exists in India. British India has over three hundred million people, smallpoxed by religious fanaticisms of various kinds, by racial divergencies, by one hundred and fifty different languages, by caste, by famine, by Bolsheviks and by color-jealousy. It is a wonderful stamping ground for cranks and fools.

Britain is endeavoring to introduce India to representative self-government. We suppose this has to be done, these days. But in India it has assuredly to be done cautiously. If self-government were made a gift of at once to India, seventy million Mohammedans in a short time would be trying to cut the throats of two hundred million Hindoos. A few millions of Sikhs, Jains Christians and others would be side-swiped.

But the cranks and the fools in India are not satisfied to speed slowly. They think the British are tyrants. They busy themselves with agitation against the British Raj, not stopping short of terrorism and assassination in the hope of disheartening it and causing it to quit at once.

Lord Reading, the present Viceroy of India, is a very able man, a very moderate man, a conciliatory man, the last man in the world to be likely to wish to be an arbitrary ruler, or to exercise repression by force if it could be avoided. But Lord Reading has been obliged to suspend the Bengal criminal law in order to arrest and bring to trial numbers of extremists who have been provoking crime in that great Province of India. From the official statement made, it is evident that the mischief was extensive and becoming grave.

No doubt it must have been with great hesitancy that Lord Reading acted. The difficulty of the case is that Britain is in a dilemma from which there is no escape except patience—short of the point of tolerating crime. It is useless to say that Britain should either rule India or get out of India. She can't do either. The only rule which would be effective would be arbitrary rule; and the spirit of the age is against that. On the other hand, Britain can't leave India, because to do so would be to make India a slaughter house. Britain has to stay on the job of trying to educate India to self-government, putting up meanwhile with ingratitude, foolishness, discontent, misunderstanding and mutiny on the part of more or less of the people of India, trying to make the best of it, and merely showing teeth now and again, as Lord Reading is doing now, when restless fanaticism becomes too hasty.—Ottawa Journal.

THE DEADLY REVOLVER.

In the trial of a sordid shooting case at St. Catharines, it came out in evidence that the accused, a youth of 18, had been in the habit of carrying around a revolver for a long time, and his mother, who testified on his behalf, admitted that she was fully aware of this practice. "You are a strange sort of woman," commented the judge, "allowing a boy that age to have a revolver." Later on the magistrate declared: "Thousands of boys are carrying revolvers." What a state of affairs! The wonder is not that so many crimes are committed and accidents occur through this means, but that more do not do so. A headstrong young fellow with a revolver is a deadly menace to society; for his own sake as well as for the sake of others, he should be promptly disarmed. It is not such an easy thing for the authorities to know just who may be carrying firearms; but when that knowledge is possessed by parents or acquaintances, the responsibility rests on them to make the facts known. If a mother, by persuasion, cannot prevail on her son to hand over the weapon, it is her duty to report the circumstances to the police.

What crimes could be prevented through better co-operation of the public with the legal authorities! This question of law enforcement is essentially one which devolves upon every individual citizen. There is altogether too much indifference and neglect where breaches of the law are concerned. The laws are being brought into contempt, it is commonly asserted; but the deplorable condition has been produced by the negligence of the very people who make the complaint, though they may not recognize the fact. If every one who knew of irregularities had the courage and public spirit to report them to the proper quarters, those irregularities would quickly disappear.

There should be a determined crusade against the revolver and other deadly implements of destruction. No excuse exists for their use, especially in the case of the young man who, in a reckless spirit of bravado, swaggers around like a pseudo-buccaneer. It may be that he has no intentions whatever of making use of the weapon; in the great majority of cases, he hasn't; but that only makes his act the more preposterous and unnecessary. The point is that these implements cannot be carried without leading up to dangerous situations. When the moment of provocation comes, when fear or temper rules, it is fatal to possess the means of indulging hasty impulses. We have the expert testimony of law enforcement officers that the possession of firearms is practically always more of a menace than a protection. Instances where they can be used to advantage are very rare indeed. Almost invariably a bad situation is rendered still worse by amateur attempts to bring the private arsenal into action.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It looks as if the favourite British apple is a Baldwin.

The Moscow Reds couldn't wreck Britain, but they certainly did a lot towards wrecking the Labour Government.

For the third time Dundee has elected a Prohibitionist, which is just about as miraculous an event as would be the capture of a Toronto riding by Rev. Ben. Spence.

October departs with a record of winning all weather prizes for the year. A vote of thanks to the tenth month is in order. November, please copy.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Oct. 30.—With a very light offering of fresh cattle, and a carry over of only about 200 from the week's markets, it was not a ver ydifficult job to effect a clean-up. The offering consisted chiefly of cows and store cattle, with nothing of outstanding quality left in the market. While anything of choice quality would be steady clean up prices today were generally easier for the rough grades than early this week. There was nothing in today for export though about the usual quota it is expected, will be required for next week.

Calves steady with a light run.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs settled on basis of 10.25 off cars, or 25c lower than the week's opening price.

Export cattle, choice and heavy steers, $6.50 to $7.25; good store cattles, $5.75 to $6; heifers, $5.60 to $6; heavy cows, $3.50 to $4.25; bulls, $3.50 to $4.25.

Choice butchers, $5.75 to $6.25; medium, $5.25 to $5.75; fair, $5.25 to $5.50; common, $3.50 to $4.50; baby beeves, $8.50 to $10.50.

Choice fat cows, $3.50 to $4.50.

Stockers and feeders — Choice shortkeep feeders 1,00 to 1,200 lbs., $5.50 to $6.25; stores, 900 to 1000 lbs. $4.75 to $5.25; choice stockers 830 to 950 lbs., $4.50 to $5; light western stock, $3.50 to $4; choice western, $4.50 to $5.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 31 (Canadian Press). — There was no improvement in the demand from the foreign buyers for grain here yesterday ,and in consequence business was reported quiet, but there was a little trading on spot and sales of No. 2 and No. 3 Northern wheat and No. 2 Canadian Western oats were made on c.i.f. basis Montreal.

The local market for coarse grains was steady with a moderate amount of business passing in car lots of Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley at $1.08, No. 3 grade at $1.07. No. 2 white oats at 63 cents, No. 3 grade at 59 cents, and No. 4 grade at 57 1-2 cents per bushel, ex-track.

STERLING RATES

Demand $4.51 5-8

Cables $4.52

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, October 31 (Canadian Press). — Live stock arrivals: 1,451 cattle, 156 calves, 1,842 hogs, and 251 sheep and lambs.

Trading on the cattle market was generally inactive yesterday morning with butcher classes and stockers and feeders showing decided weakness. Indications point to a downward tendency of prices.

On the hog market prices also suffered a decline of 25 cents, thick smooths being quoted at $8.50.

The sheep and lamb market held about steady, with top quality lambs ranging between $12.00 to $12.50, and sheep from $6.00 to $7.00.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, October 31 (Canadian Press). — Cattle, receipts 12,000; better grade yearlings and desirable medium weight steers moderately active at yesterday's late decline; other classes fed steers and grassers extremely dull; medium grades of weighty steers at low point of week and practically as low as any time during year. Best yearlings $12.65; numerous loads $11.75 to $12.50; best matured steers averaging around 1,400 pounds $10.50; medium weight offerings averaging 1,241 pounds $11.50; bulk matured steers $7.75 to $9.25; few choice weighty bullocks averaging upward of 1,500 pounds $9.50 to $10.00; she stock excepting lower grades generally dull; bulls weak to 15 cents lower; veal calves around 25 cents lower; bulk to packers $9.50 to $10.25; few $10.50; outsiders upward to $10.75; stockers and feeders extremely dull; slow, but about steady.

Hogs, receipts 44,000; moderately active, uneven ,15 to 25 cents lower; closed at high price; underweights mostly steady top $10.10; bulk good and choice 250 to 350 pound butchers $9.50 to $9.90; 180 to 225 pound average largely $8.25 to $9.40; bulk 140 to 170 pound weight $6.50 to $8.10; packing sows mostly $8.35 to $8.60; majority desirable killing pigs $5.75 to $6.25; estimated holdover, 21,000.

Sheep, receipts 15,000; fat lambs generally steady to strong; spots 15 cents higher; bulk natives $13.50 to $13.60; top $13.75; culls mostly $10.50 to $11.00; comebacks $13.25 to $13.50; 90 pound yearlings $11.25; clipped lambs $11.50; fat she sheep steady; ewes $4.75 to $7.00; feeding lambs strong; 61-pound Arizonas $14.00; short-mouthed breeding ewes $7.00.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 31 (Canadian Press). — With export demand light even for deferred shipments the wheat market yesterday displayed a downward tendency from the beginning. An unexpected lull in the purchasing of corn was also a source of weakness for all grain values.

Wheat closed unsettled, 1 3-4 to 2 5-8 cents net lower. December $1.41 5-8 to $1.41 3-4 and May $1.47 1-8 to $1.47 3-8.

Corn finished 3-8 to 1 1-2 cents down, oats 1-4 to 3-8 to 7-8 cent down, and provisions varying from 7 cents decline to 10 cents gain.

GET ACQUAINTED WITH W. N. Y. C.

(NEW YORK CITY—256 METERS)

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN

New York City's municipal broadcasting station has been "on the air' 'for only a few months. Potentially a great factor in the life of a huge community such as Greater New York, and equipped with a transmitter of great power, it cannot be denied that WNYC has thus far failed lamentably and cannot hope to be ranked on a par with the two New York stations which have proved their right to be called "great."

The mouthpieces of the city administration who, on the gala opening night, painted with glowing colors the picture of renowned artists coming to WNYC to broadcast, "for well known artists will volunteer their services for the city, where they would refuse for private individuals," have proved themselves to be mere mouthpieces. The quality of entertainent offered by WNYC in the past few months has been, on the whole, very mediocre.

Happily, its microphone has been kept free of political propaganda, unless reports on the work of the present administration may be regarded as such. Prominent city officials have given talks and WNYC has the benefit of the music of such municipal organizations as the Police Band and Glee Club, the Fire Department Band, and the Street Cleaning Department Band, the latter organization, by the way, boasting the most talented musicians of any.

Instead of the prominent artists, so hopefully promised by the city officials in charge, a very uninspiring string of amateur performers have been led to the microphone and let loose on the indulgent radio public. The lovers of "popular" music have been catered to almost exclusively, with jazz bands and organizations of jazz performers predominating the programs.

Remote control features, such as the last few weeks of municipal park concerts, have been weak and much inferior to any that the other New York station have put on the air. Their band music for instance, has the "tinny" sound which WEAF and WJZ have circumvented by skillful engineering.

In a word, WNYC has failed to distinguish itself save on extremely rare occasions. Its programs are by no means catholic in the choice of features, an eternal sameness pervading them; and, last, the distinguished artists who were to have flocked to the studio in droves are much more scarce than the optimistic managers anticipated.

However, we musn't forget one feature which is of most intriguing interest. Twice nightly, the Police Department broadcasts the alarms sent out for missing persons. One cannot help being thrilled at the thought that radio lends itself to the work of the law in an awe-inspiring way. This feature alone is the only one regularly worth the 'price of admission."

A THOUGHT.

THE MAN WHO IS SQUARE.

"Passing the buck" when you're out of luck, started long ago; when Adam blamed Eve for the apple she gave the time he "stubbed his toe." Ever since then, in the ranks of men, taking them high or low, the coward at heart, who shirks his part, has tried to dodge the blow.

The man who aims high but fails to get by, and blames the fellow below, need never aspire to climb any higher—he's geared to travel "in low." There's always a place for the man with the grace to admit it when he is to blame; who says, "It's on me but, by Jiminy, it never can happen again!"

If you would succeed, there is no better creed, than that of the man who is Square:: "I'll take what is mine, without whimper or whine; above all else I'll be fair; so happen what may, at the close of each day, I can say to my God, "I've been Square."

When it is known that life insurance exists, the Widow finds her credit is "satisfactory"; the home continues; the estate can be administered without loss; just debts are paid promptly, and the Will has a chance to do what was intended.

But a vastly different story is told where there is no life insurance; and far more tragic than "a home without a Mother" is the Mother without a home.

Life insurance may be so readily secured that the world thinks little of those who fail to protect their dependents in this way.

WORLD EVENTS IN TABLOID

Recent Happenings of Importance Briefly Told—Mohammedans Disturbance—Elections in England and America.

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

Perhaps the world's best fighters, disunion has kept the Mohammedans weak for centuries.

In the last few years they have shown signs of returning strength. They might have recovered it under Kemal Pasha if he had been a religious enthusiast. He was not.

Kemal staged Turkey's comeback. The sultan was the Mohammedans' religious leader. When Kemal threw him out as sultan, he threw him out as a religious leader, too. In making Turkey a republic, Kemal provided for its government, but he left Mohammedanism headless as a religion.

* * *

Hussein Ibn Ali.

This just suited England.

England controlled the Red Sea strip of coast called the Hedjaz, of which Hussein Ibn Ali claimed to be king.

The English idea was to back Hussein and make him the Mohammedans' religious leader also. As the Mohammedans' religious leader she figured he would have great influence with Moslems everywhere.

England has many Moslem subjects and there are many more she likes to keep under her away.

Through Hussein she could do it, she believed.

* * *

The Sultan of Nejd.

It worked pretty well for a while.

Then Ibn Saoud appeared. He was a Bedouin chieftain known as Sultan of Nejd. He had a rag-tag army, not very strong, but he was a fanatical Moslem and so were all his men.

Mohammedans are easy to "enthuse." They swarmed to Ibn's banner. He declared war on Hussein and beat him in every fight. Now he has taken Mecca, the Moslems' "holy city," chased Hussein off the throne and proclaimed himself religious leader of all Islam.

If this means a Mohammedan revival—as it may—trouble's in sight for the whole world.

There are more Mohammedans than Protestant Christians on earth.

U. S. Election.

With election less than two weeks off the presidential campaign still is far tamer than many less important campaigns have been. The people seem interested, judging from the way they've registered, but there are no fireworks. If neither Coolidge, Davis nor La Follette gets a clean-cut majority, however, it's safe to count on excitement enough when the fight gets into the electoral college, and probably into Congress a little later on.

* * *

In England.

It's much such a campaign as the American one would be if the conservative Republicans and Democrats combined against the Progressives, including the middle-of-the-roaders and the progressive elements from both old-line groups.

PERU HEAD LIKES YANKEE METHODS

It Is Understood That President Leguia Will Continue Old Policies.

By HARRY W. FRANTZ.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—(United Press).—Augusto B. Leguia, President of Peru, was inaugurated on October 12th to succeed himself. It is understood that President Leguia will continue the policies which have characterized his previous administration.

These policies are chiefly: To promote the economic development of Peru; to solve in a harmonious manner the unsettled international problems of the country, chiefly relating to boundaries; and to encourage friendly relations of Peru with the American people.

The long career of President Leguia as a statesman has been marked by signal success. He was engaged in business until he became Minister of Finance in 1903, at which post he served until 1908. His efforts largely accounted for the doubling of Peruvian revenues. He was selected President in 1908, serving to 1912, and again became President in 1919.

The progress of Peru in this last quarter century is indicated by fact that exports which were $22,489,000 in 1900 had increased in 1923 to $119,754,935; while imports in the same period increased from $11,585,000 to $70,661,000.

The President's chief concern, it is said, is to equip the country with the railways necessary to tape the rich trans-Andean region. Every year the entire proceeds of the tobacco monopoly are devoted to railway construction. In 1921 $1,500,000 was spent on extensions and new construction; in 1922, $2,050,000 and in 1923 almost three million dollars.

The establishment of the Peruvian Reserve Bank in 1922, with a capital of $10,000,000, constitutes one of the most important measures affecting the financial and economic future of Peru.

Revision of the Mining Code, making it one of the most liberal in any country; and revision of the Civil and Penal Codes are other important reforms which have been accomplished by the Leguia regime.

In the field of international relations President Leguia has undertaken to solve boundary controversies which have existed since the Colonial times. In that period Spanish power was centralized in Spain and all but one of the countries which now are independent neighbors of Peru were dependents, practically governed from Lima, through a Governor-General appointed by the Spanish Crown. It is natural that when the Colonies later achieved their emancipation there should have been differing interpretations of the royal decrees which defined their boundaries.

President Leguia has sent mission after mission to neighboring republics with instructions to secure some settlement of these differences by an impartial arbitration. Protocols have been signed with Colombia and Ecuador for settlement of boundary questions and the long-standing controversy with Chile regarding the fate of the provinces of Tacna and Arica has been submitted to President Coolidge for arbitration. Peruvian and Brazilian commissioners are delimitating their respective boundaries in accordance with the provisions of the Velarde-Rio Branco treaty, negotiated by the present Ambassador at Washington, Dr. Hernan Velarde, when Minister to Brazil. The boundaries of Peru with Bolivia were settled by a mixed commission appointed under the Polo-Bustamente treaty.

President Leguia, according to his friends, is a great believer in American initiative and in American practical and modern methods. He has called upon the United States for help in many directions. The Peruvian Navy is being reorganized by an American naval mission. In 1922 the Customs and Revenue departments were entrusted for revision to an American expert, Dr. W. W. Cumberland. Over 20 instructors and teachers were engaged in the United States and sent to public schools and colleges. A contract for modern paving, sanitation and increased water supply in the principal cities of Peru was allotted to an American company which is now engaged in the work. A corps of engineers, including Americans, is developing great irrigation projects.

The Public Health Service was modernized under direction of an American, Dr. Henry Hanson. Recently a contract for a shipbuilding plant and drydock for Chimbote Harbor went to an American. President Leguia also has encouraged Peruvian young men of promise to study in the United States.

These improvements and reforms have been accomplished despite a very limited budget, the 1924 budget figures, for example, amounting only to about forty million dollars.

FINGERS LIKE SHUTTLECOCKS

Albert Tangore of Paterson, N. J., was given a huge cup as the "world's speediest typist." He wrote 130 words a minute at the business show in New York. Here he is being congratulated by Bessie Friedman, also of Paterson, who was second with 126 words a minute.

ALL ABOUT THE WINTER FURS

(By Hedda Hoyt, Fashion Editor of the United Press).

NEW YORK, October 31 (United Press).—In buying winter furs it is well to know something about the wearing qualities of the different pelts, where they come from and whether or not they are used in their natural colouring. One should be able to distinguish the real furs from their imitations.

As a rule, darker furs are more costly than lighter ones. Fur which comes from the back of the animal is more expensive and better wearing than fur which comes from the stomach. Where the outer fur is thin and there is a soft short undercoat, one may be sure that this fur comes from the stomach of the animal.

The fur which is grown on the back is of almost equal length with no fluffy undercoating. By blowing upon fur one can see whether or not the fur is thick upon the hide. The thicker the fur the better the wearing qualities.

Seal.

Seal is one of the most popular and best wearing furs. Alaskan seal is the best quality, although the great majority of sealskin wraps to-day are made out of muskrats which have been dyed to assimulate the real seal. In buying seal one looks for a thick growth of fur and a bright lustre.

Muskrat.

Dyed muskrat is one of the most common substitutes for seal. The muskrat is a water animal whose habitat ranges from Hudson Bay through the temperate zone. Northern muskrat wears very well and closely resembles seal. Southern muskrat is an inferior grade which does not wear well. In its natural state the muskrat is brown with a whitish undercoat. When the outer coat of long fur is plucked out the undercoat is dyed black to resemble seal.

Mink.

Mink is another fur which has wonderful wearing qualities. The best quality of mink comes from the Hudson Bay country. The second grade comes from the Adirondacks and the third or poorest grade comes from Russia. Mink is used in its natural colouring which is a dark reddish brown.

Sable.

Sable is a small animal about the size of a weasel. It is one of the finest of furs. The best sable comes from Russia. Canadian sable has longer and lighter fur and is less costly than Russian, which is one of the most costly furs on the market.

Russian sable is extremely beautiful, wears well, and because of its softness and lovely colouring is extremely becoming to the wearer. While we are most familiar with the brown sable, black and blue toned sables are even more costly than the brown sable.

Kolinsky.

Kolinsky is Russian marten. The finest grades are called sable, as they closely resemble the real sable. In its natural state Russian marten is a muddy brown shade, but it is dyed a lovely dark brown before being made into garments. While Kolinsky wears well it generally fades in colour after a season's wear.

Skunk.

The best skunk comes from Canada. A second grade comes from the Himalayas, but this grade is almost extinct now. In the natural state the skunk has a white stripe running down its back, and for this reason the pelt is always dyed brown. Skunk never forms the entire garment, but is used as trimming.

Ermine.

Ermine is the fur of royalty. The best ermine comes from Russia, Sweden and Northern China. We have ermine in North America, which we call weasel. This American type, however, is of an inferior type. In spring and summer the ermine is a light grey or tan with white upon the stomach. As winter advances this coat turns white with the exception of the top of the tail which remains black. Ermine is a short fur and is as smooth as velvet.

"Summer ermine" or beige ermine has been used considerably of late. Recently introduced are short jacquettes of weasel or ermine which are made up in the natural spring colouring. While the tannish summer coat has heretofore been regarded as valueless by furriers, it is remarkably smart when used as trimming or in short jacquette effect.

Beaver.

The best beaver comes from the Northern part of America. It is a heavy, soft fur and has good wearing qualities. It must be rehabilitated, however, after each season's wear as the fur grows oily and loses its fluffiness. Nutria—a shorter fur is the substitute for beaver, and comes from South America.

Burunduki.

Burunduki or chipmunk is popular this season as trimming. These little striped animals roam the woods of North America and one dislikes seeing these friends used for garments.

Mole.

Everyone is familiar with the little garden mole. Although beautiful this fur has poor wearing qualities, and one sees very little of it in use to-day.

MANY SPOILED BALLOTS

EDMONTON, Oct. 30.— No announcement of the results of the Edmonton by-election held last Monday will be available before Friday night, it was announced this afternoon. The delay is caused by numerous spoiled ballots, 250 being found in the recount so far.

CONSERVATIVES

country or community. Even in Scotland, the home of Liberalism for the past half century not accepting Midlothian which Gladstone made famous by his electoral campaigns, Liberalism has succumbed to Toryism.

The Giants Fallen

Mr. Asquith suffered defeat for the second time in his political career of forty years. Other well known Liberal figures to disappear are:—Sir Donald MacLean, the Right Hon Charles F. G. Masterman, the Right Hon. T. J. MacNamara, Henry Vivian Phillipps, Mr. Asquith's secretary, Sir John Brunner, William Mather Pringle, the Right Hon. Francis Dyke Acland Major General J. E. B. Seely, James M. Hogge and Mrs. Margaret Wintringham.

On the other hand, with curious inconsequence, Sir Arthur Mond doubled his majority, in Carmathen over his Liberal opponent. London itself whose Liberal representation in the last parliament was reduced to eleven seats, now has only three.

Only Four Women

Of the 41 women candidates only four have been returned. Thus, the women's representation has been reduced from 8 in last House to 4 in number of quite prominent women number oif quite prominent women among the candidates, this appears to be a severe setback to the women's movement, and is all the more extraordinary because it is asserted that the women voted in large numbers than ever before.

Philip Snowden, the Labor chancellor of the exchequer, interviewed last night, professed not to be greatly downhearted. He asserted that the Conservative government would in a short time bring about a reaction and Labor might reasonably hope for a majority at the next election. The Laborites, he said, were working for permanent results, and their experience in government would equip them for effective work in opposition.

Baldwin On Holiday

Stanley Baldwin, the prospective prime minister will leave London to-day, for a short holiday in the country, he having been advised to take a rest and recover from the strain of campaigning. Both Ramsay MacDonald and H. H. Asquith, returning to London last night, had an enthusiastic welcome from their respective admirers, who assembled at the railway station in great numbers clamoring for speeches.

Mr. Asquith declined to respond, and, Mr. MacDonald tried to say a few words, but the cheering was so vociferous that he could hardly be heard.

A SAD DAY FOR ALL THE DAYS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 31.—(United Press).—It was a hectic day for the Days.

Charles Day, street-car motorman, quarrelled with his wife and left home. His wife fainted.

Then Day, the husband, unexpectedly returned, saw his wife in the arms of another man and knocked him down. Babcock obtained a warrant for the arrest of Day. The warrant was duly served on Charles Day street-car motorman but not the original Charles Day.

His feelings assuaged with a day's pay, which he had lost, the wrong Charles Day went his way happily. A warrant was issued for the right Day, served, and the case called in police court. By that time the original Day was sorry he had struck Babcock and told him so.

"All you folks go," said the Judge. "I'll fine no Day to-day."

Snowy Bed Linen—
fragrantly clean

Clothes washed with Sunlight Soap are naturally cleansed, not chemically cleansed. The pure Sunlight lather goes through and through the clothes, loosening dirt and restoring each thread to a natural state of cleanliness.

HOW sweet and wholesome is that welcome sense of fragrance which comes from well washed linen. How refreshing it is to lie between clean sheets, to rest one's head on a snow-white pillow case; to breathe deeply in an atmosphere of purity; to feel and to know that the things around you are absolutely clean.

To bring about this refreshing sense in the mind of guest or family is a triumph well worth the attention of any housewife. It is best accomplished by using Sunlight Soap.

To get bed clothes snowy white it is not necessary to boil them or rub holes on the wash board. The sure power of Sunlight Soap itself extracts every trace of soil while the things are soaking. In the rinse it all comes away—all the dirt and every particle of soapy matter, leaving not gray-whiteness, not yellow-whiteness, but snowy white purity and cleanliness.

FRENCH PREMIER FACES BIG FIGHT

When Parliament Meets Herriot Will Have Period of Political Difficulties.

By JOHN DE GANDT
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Oct. 31.—(United Press). —With the opening of Parliament for the winter sessions, begins for Premier Edouard Herriot and his government a period of political difficulties, some of which may be of sufficient nature to endanger the life of the cabinet.

Although Herriot tried to clear the way before the Chamber and Senate adjourned last summer, he was forced to postpone the discussion of several problems that he had not time to take up, the London Reparation Conference last August having kept him in England for one month and made it impossible to introduce the 1925 budget which is the most pressing thing now.

However, before the Chamber can consider this budget, other questions will provide material for heated debates.

In the foreign field, Herriott will certainly have explanations to furnish about how Germany has been carrying her obligations since the Dawes plan went into effect; what France is getting in exchange of the evacuation of the Ruhr; what is replacing the payments in kind which have been practically supressed, what is the repercussion of the 26 per cent tax on imports from Germany; what are the results from Frances' viewpoint of the last Assembly of the League at Geneva; what is Frances' position in the negotiations for a commercial treaty with Germany, etc.?

It is probable that the Herriot government will not encounter too much opposition in justifying the foreign policy, but will face a serious task when home affairs are brought up.

The collective protest of the six French cardinals regarding the suppression of the Vatican embassy and the proposed introduction of exclusively lay teaching in the schools of Alsace-Lorraine will certainly be the pretext of a powerful offensive from the survivors of the Bloc National, who will try to enlist the Catholic members of the majority for a fight aiming to overthrow Herriot.

The next delicate problem from a government standpoint is the vote of the 1925 budget, which the opposition calls a "masterpiece of inquisition." No doubt it will take time and passionate arguing to get the Chamber to vote the enforceemnt of new systems for the collection of taxes—for instance, especially the income, which in cases where there is no direct way to find out the exact amount, will be figured according to the house rent and the living expenses of the taxpayer.

The opposition press has been clamoring for several weeks against this proposed measure which they say puts many people at the mercy of reports from a concierge or ill-willing neighbors to the tax collector. Another attack launched by one of the Poincare followers charge the Herriot administration with repudiating their electoral promises, one of which was to abolish the twenty per cent increase on all taxes Chamber to help balance the 1924 that was voted by the previous budget. The 1925 budget maintains all increases and adds a few others.

Whether the 1925 budget will go through without changes is too early to say, but it remains that Herriot has to be more and more careful in handling the Chamber where a vote in which the Socialists joining the opposition would mean his end. The chances are that instead of acting that way, the Socialists will keep on threatening the radical leader to overthrow him if he does not carry out their demands. They will gain more thus, because Herriot's fall would not mean a Socialist cabinet taking his place, the Socialist party being still too weak to constitute a majority.

It is therefore likely that unless dissensions become acute between Herriot and a number of his supporters, there will be no change of government in the near future, but thorny subjects such as the religious question may reverse surprises.

Aside from these new questions, there will be, before the Senate, the bill for amnesty, including ex-Premier Caillaux, which was passed by the Chamber before the vacations, but not voted by the other house, owing to lack of time.

And finally the old favorite theme "cost of living" will be brought up from various sides and for various reasons. This and the ther routine will occupy both Chamber and Senate during many day and several night sessions, the months of October and December being surely too short to tackle one-fourth of the long order of the day that will be fixed this afternoon.

GERMANY'S TARIFF WILL HIT ENGLAND

Protection Will Be Policy and England May Be Shut Out Of Market.

BY, E. A. MATHIS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, Oct. 31.—United Press. The new tariff which Germany is preparing is likely to lead to important consequences which conceivably might transform the whose economic structure of Europe.

Germany made her last tariff in 1902, but in the meantime it has been changed in many respects. On the one hand the tariff for agrarian products has been abolished since the war, while for numerous industrial goods it has been raised considerably.

The preparation for the new tariff tend to reestablishment of protection for the agrarian products and to erection of a tariff wall for industrial goods.

Besides this new tariff, Germany has to conclude new commercial treaties with all the signatory powers of the Versailles Treaty which document granted the Allies the rights of "the most favored nation" for a period of five years.

It was obvious from the start that the new German tariff would play the chief part in these negotiations, and the difficulties which have arisen in these negotiations are due to the fact that Germany is trying to protect her industries to a degree which makes it impossible for other nations to sell anything to Germany.

Germany Has the Trumps

Germany's position, as far as England, France, and Belgium are concerned, is better than that of these states. Being their largest customer, Germany has all the trumps and the only possibility of counter-action by these powers is the duty imposed by the Recovery Act.

England being practically a free trade country has no advantage in being treated as "most favored nation" if a high tariff prevents her from selling. She has therefore asked for guarantees that the new German tariff should not be raised correspondingly higher than to allow for the general increase in prices of raw materials throughout the world This would mean that the duty for certain goods should not be raised above the present level, while for others it would have to be reduced.

England therefore is not interested in granting Germany any trade facilities, unless she gets guarantees that the new German tariff will do away with excessive protection. Germany, on the other hand, feels she can hardly make any binding promises which would deprive her of her liberty of action in dealing with powers.

This consideration is cleverly used by the people who really pull the strings in Germany—the Industrialists—to induce the government to play into their hands. The less binding agreements Germany has made with other powers, the more she is at liberty to come to a settlement with France, these powers believe.

France like England, is in a bad position, as far as a commercial treaty with Germany is concerned. Since the United States went dry and since Russia collapsed, Germany is the only important purchaser of French wines. She is also an important buyer of French luxury goods, and last, but not least, the German market is simply vital for the products of Alsace-Lorraine. The latter could be imported into Germany free of duty the last five years under the Versailles Treaty and the French want a prolongation of this privilege.

On the other hand, German export to France is minimum. In the first seven months of this year, it amounted only to 1,100,000,000 francs, but after deducting the coal and other reparation deliveries, it represented only about $10,000,000. Nevertheless an agreement is most likely to be reached.

Ore and Coal Union.

But the leading industrial circles in Germany as well as in France are eager to secure an arrangement which would realize the long aimed at union between Lorraine ore and Ruhr coal. This union would give to its members the supremacy in Europe, at least as far as economic life is concerned.

While it would endanger the American iron and steel industries, it would be a death blow for the correspoding British manufacturers. In the end this situation might induce England to turn to protection.

The political consequences of a close union between the leading industries of Germany and France are likely to be even more important. It is obvious that in case of such a union, the still prevailing antagonism between these countries would sooner or later come to an end. It would automatically change the policy of England, which would be forced to look for a new alignment of allies to be prtected against the Franco-German block.

An interesting question will be whether the French or the German partner will prove the stronger. So far the German industrialists seem to have the upperhand, as far as their own government is concerned.

PALS UNITED

Little Johnny Mack, of Chicago, loves dogs. But the landlord thinks they're a nuisance. He threw "Patsy" out of the window and broke his leg. The landlord was fined for cruelty to animals. A kind veterinarian put Paty's bad leg in a cast, and now it is getting well. And Johnny is happy again.

UKEEP

It costs a little over 10 cents a mile to own and operate a passenger auto. So reports the engineering experiment station of Iowa State College. Out of this, more than 7 cents go for gasoline, oil, tires, repairs and depreciation. Rest is absorbed by garage, license, taxes, interest on investment, etc.

The day is approaching when taxis by the millions will compete in a life-and-death struggle with private individual ownership. Many consider it cheaper already to hire taxis than own their car. A personally owned auto is eating up interest and depreciating when idle.

WOMAN WAS GIVEN JOB AS SHERIFF

Mrs. Lucy Green is the Only Woman in England to Hold Such Position.

CANTERBURY, England, October 30. — This ancient cathedral city has just revived a custom of mediaeval times by conferring the office of sheriff upona woman. Incidentally the recipient of the honour, Mrs. Lucy Green Wells, the wife of a local tailor, has the distinction of being the only woman in England to hold such an office.

"My chief duty as sheriff," Mrs. Wells said recently, "is to appear with the Mayor and council on special occasions wearing my purple robe, with the silver chain of office round my neck.

"Nowadays the under-sheriff is responsible for most of the actual work in connection with the office, but there are still certain functions I perform. If a Canterbury man had to be hanged, for instance, I believe I should have to sign the document certifying that the execution had been properly carried out."

There were women sheriffs aplenty in the middle ages, and in those days they had to shoulder heavy fiscal, military and administrative burdens. One of the first notable women of the middle ages to hold the office was Ella, Countess of Salisbury, who was sheriff of Wiltshire until she embraced religion and retired to the Abbey of Lacock.

ANCIENT DOGMAS FOUND HARMFUL

Churches Cannot Afford to Be Hampered By Unintellectual Beliefs.

LONDON, Oct: 30—"The churches cannot afford to be hampered by unintellectual beliefs which greatly weaken their influence on those who are worth influencing; religion stands on ground which cannot be assailed; it has no use for rickety defences." Such were the words in which Prof. J. S. Haldane, of New College, Oxford, brother of England's lord chancellor, told the Conference of Modern Churchmen of the harm done to Christianity by an ancient dogmas which, he said, were not in keeping with present-day knowledge. He was discussing biology and religion. Prof. Haldane admitted that he was not a church member and proceeded to tell the conference the reason why.

"I am one of many," Prof. Haldane said, "who are kept away from existing churches by dogmas we cannot honestly countenance. There is, perhaps, a still larger number who are actively hostile because they regard churches as hotbeds of superstition."

Continuing the speaker said: "If I belonged to a church at all it would be to my own Scots church, for the reason that it possesses the advantage of having no prayer book."

RICH.

We have our "kings," even in de-Tmocracy. Money is our monarch. A news item discloses that Robert T. Crane, an easterner, has paid $54 a day for the last year for the hire of a Pullman car constantly ready for his exclusive use. The price included wages of a cook, waiter and porter.

Mediæval kings had nothing like that. We can't all hire Pullman cars, but we are all kings—by ancient standards of comforts and even luxuries. Charlemagne would have given half his kingdom (most of continental Europe) for a radio, auto and movie theatre.

MAGISTRATE STIFFENS PENALTIES UNDER O.T.A.

Trip to Burwash for Second Offences at North Bay.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Oct. 31. — Police Magistrate Weegar has served notice on all violators of the O. T.A., through some remarks in police court, that fines under the Act will be stiffened and second offences will mean a trip to Burwash. Offenders convicted of driving motor cars while under the influence of liquor will draw thirty days as a minimum. Local officers of provincial police declare that they have yet received no supplementary instructions as to the means of enforcing the O.T.A. Twelve cases of cognac and gin, shipped from Montreal and addressed to the "Ryan Murray Drug Co., Timmins," were seized yesterday at the T. & N. O. freight sheds by License Inspector John Gage. The police have also seized a quantity of so-called medical wine and a sample will be analyzed to see if it complies with the O.T.A.

FARM LIFE AND ITS PROBLEMS

FARMERS UNITE FOR OWN GOOD IN DOING WORK

North Monaghan Has Many Potato Digging Bees on Hand.

COMMUNITY DIGGER

NORTH MONAGHAN, Oct. 31.—The order of the day among the farmers in this district is the digging of the potato crop. The whirr of the potato digger is heard on every hand just as, a few months ago, one could hear the click of the mower and later the whirr of the binder.

It is a common practice in these days of farmers to combine to buy a potato digger and use it in turn, also lending each other horses to run it as it usually takes four horses to run one of the larger machines. They also co-operate with the picking up of the crop.

The farmers are getting an average price of seventy cents per bag. In districts farther away from the city the price is down to fifty cents in carload lots.

The gardeners and growers of all kinds of truck crops have almost completed the task of gathering in the harvest. Probably a few turnips are all that now remain to be gathered in.

The season has been rather peculiar with some crops. One man had four thousand celery plants go to seed, another two thousand, and another five hundred, all of which were ploughed in, while another had a record crop of celery and has now some five thousand plants stored away for the winter.

Take the onion crop. Several men round here have ploughed down an acre of onions each, while some have had a fair crop. This was owing to the excess of rain in the growing season. Another man that grows thousands of early cabbage has them still and waiting for a chance to plough them down as the rain has spoiled them for sale.

PLOWING MATCHES ORDER OF MONTH

Recent Results Show Ida Farmers Are Masters of the Art.

The annual plowing match, under the auspices of the South Monaghan and Cavan Plowmen's Association, will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 5, at the farm of Foster Eagleson, west of Ida. The list of classes and prizes will be published within a few days. It is hoped that the same success will attend the event this year as has been the case on all former occasions.

Hot dinner and supper will be served on the grounds, the A.Y.P.A. of St. John's Church, Ida, having charge of the meals.

L. H. Winslow is president of the association, and L. McNeil is secretary.

T. J. Lang shipped a carload of hogs from Peterborough from Frazerville station on Monday, and two cars of lambs and calves from Millbrook the same day. Mr. Lang went to Toronto to see to the disposal of his stock.

Prizes at the recent international plowing match held at Brampton were generous, amounting in all to three thousand dollars. At least 75,000 people are conceded to have attended in the four days of the event, which was held on the farm of B. H. Bull & Son, the biggest Jersey establishment on the American continent.

In addition to the prizes already mentioned as being won by David Sharpe, of Ida, is that of holding second place in the sod competition for boys under 18.

The attendance, the fine weather, and the number of exhibitors established records not hitherto reached in any former international match under the auspices of the Ontario Plowmen's Association.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Association will be held in Toronto in January. There is a possibility that the Peterborough organization may have the honor of having the international match in its territory next year.

At the recent plowing match and tractor demonstration held at the farm of W. H. Allen, Douro Township, under the auspices of the Peterborough County Plowmen's Association, L. H. Winslow, of Ida, won first prize for best crown and finish in class 4, sod, a wide-breasted plow being used, $20 being the cash reward given.

In Class 6, sod, open to boys under 21 years, Thomas McCamus, of Ida, won first for best crown and finish, receiving $17. In Class 7, stubble, open to boys under 18 years, Harry, McCamus, of Ida, held second place the reward being $12, and Clare Winslow won third honors, with an $8 prize.

David Sharpe, of Ida, who actually won first honors in Class 7, but was disqualified because of a technicality regarding his age, was given a prize of $2 by the directors, who felt that some recognition was due the excellent work done before the error was discovered.

POTATOES ARE LOW.

Price Persists in Falling From the $1 Bag Rate.

COBOURG, Oct. 31.—The $1.00 a bag rate for potatoes throughout this district is holding its own with difficulty. Quite often of late the price has broken and fallen to 90c and even down to 75c for a quantity of several bags. Wholesale buyers are stated to be paying from 60c to 75c.

The De'il's in the Kirkyaird

BY J. GORDON WEIR.

"WEEL, I'll see ye the morn's morn, Wull," shouted Tam Craig to the shadowy figure disappearing into the darkness in the direction of the village of Kilpeddoch, a scattered collection of whitewashed "theekit cots" lying in the valley below. His companion turned, shouted back an answer, and then continued on his way, his form, hitherto silhouetted against the sky, soon disappearing in the black shadow of a clump of firs. Tam Craig stood for a few minutes watching him until he finally disappeared, and then turned and began to descent the other side of the hill towards the rough czrt-road that would lead him to his own home in Kirkford.

It was two o'clock in the morning, and the moon was high in the sky; there was little wind, but it was a clear, frosty night, and although the picture which the moonlight shining on the smooth, rounded hillsides presented was a beautiful one, this traveller in the "sma' 'oors" paid little attention to it. As a matter of fact, he was thinking at the moment of the reception which he knew would be his when he arrived home. Past experience of such occasions as this—and, I regret to say, they were many—had taught him that it was useless to attempt to creep into the house quietly in the hope of avoiding the expected "scene." A pail, or some such obstacle which would rattle loudly when knocked against, was always placed near the door, or at some other unexpected point in his path, and the sound of its falling would immediately awake his lightly sleeping father. However, Tam did not allow these morbid thoughts of the inevitable to trouble him for long. He had had his fling—he chuckled to himself as he thought of all the pranks he and his companions had played that night—and he would now "tak' his pairritch" like a man.

The Practical Joker.

Of course, it must not be thought that there was any propensity towards deliberate evil in Tam's temperament. He was no more sinful than any average man, and his frequent nights out were spent, not in reckless dissipations, but in playing healthy, if boisterous, practical jokes which had rendered him notorious throughout the entire countryside. Altogether, he was as healthy-minded and well-intentioned a young animal as could be found anywhere. True, his main claim to local fame was founded upon physical rather than mental development, but that did not prevent him from being well enough liked by his neighbours for all his "midnight follies." "Wild Tam," he was called, and he had earned his name.

Even as he tramped along now on his way home, his mind was still on more pranks that might be played, and, as he passed a lonely farmhouse on the hillside, a sudden thought struck him. He crept cautiously up to the door of the cows' byre, opened it, and entered.

In these old farmhouses the byre adjoined and led into the kitchen, and any noise made within it could easily be heard in the main house. It therefore behoved Tam to proceed quietly. Quickly taking a bag of pepper out of his pocket—he always had pepper ready for use on such escapades as this—he ran along the side of the building, sprinkling a little of the irritating dust into each cow's stall as he passed it. Then he quietly left, closing the door behind him as he went, and hurried off down the hillside, never stopping until he felt sure he was well out of sight. Before he disappeared, however, he had the supreme pleasure of hearing terrific noises of cows' sneezing from the farm. The voice of the farmer inquiring gruffly, and, no doubt, rather fearfully, what all the noise was about, and sounds of the occupants stirring could be distinctly heard in the clear, frosty air. Tam burst into a hearty roar of laughter that made the hill echo, and then, reaching the familiar cart-track, fled down it as fast as his legs could carry him, laughing all the while until he was well-nigh helpless.

A Sudden Thought.

And that was just a typical specimen of the many pranks which were a certain sign to the farmers and cottagers of the district that "Wild Tam was oot on the bash the nicht." But the greatest adventure of all, which took place on this same night, the adventure which is still told on Ayrshire farms to-day—and it happened in December of the year 1820—is yet to be recounted. Compared to it, the foregoing incident was merely an episode in a night of joy.

It was past three o'clock when Tam reached the outlying cottages of Kirkford, a little weaving village on the banks of the Annick. Long and arduous as had been his night's walk, he still seemed fresh. The only thing which now troubled him was that the nearer home he came the more vivid did the picture of the dreaded interview with his father become in his imagination. While this painful image was occupying his mind, the low square steeple of the village kirk silhouetted against the sky, met his eye—and then Tam did a strange thing, which showed that all thoughts of his father had left his mind as quickly as they had entered it. He slapped his thigh, emitted one shout of pent-up laughter that scared an owl off a neighbouring tree, and then hurried down the main street of the village, not in the direction of his father's house, but towards the church.

Bells in the Night-Time.

Clang! Clang! Clang! The sound rang out, sharp and clear, in the night—the sound of Kirkford village church bells ringing at half-past three in the morning. It rang out away down the valley of the Annick, and its echoes penetrated to the very source of Kilpeddoch Water far up the hillside, and even awakened the minister of the village of that name. But, above all, it awakened old Sandy Hislop, the bell-ringer, who had rung the church bell since ever anybody in the village could remember.

At first Sandy thought he must be dreaming, and turned over in his bed to compose himself to sleep again. But as the sound was repeated, he sat up sleepily and listened. It was no dream. The bells were actually ringing—irregularly, it is true, but never ceasing altogether.

"The de'il's in the bells!" growled Sandy to himself.

He sprang out of bed and groped about in the darkness for his clothes, growling and muttering to himself all the while.

"Fifty years hae I rung they bells an' nae ither man!" he raged. "Gin I just get a haud o' the gangrel body that's at them the noo, I'll gie him his paik! Young whipper-snapper! Like as no', it's yin o' they young fellows frae Ki'peddoch, or mibbe that wild Tam Craig himself! Eco'! but I'll gie him it! Hah!"

This last sound was accompanied by a violent pull at his trousers, in the legs of which his feet had stuck. He was soon dressed, however, as well as could be expected at that hour of the morning, and, hastily wrapping a scarf round his neck to keep out the cold, he hurried out into the night.

The Prince of Darkness Appears.

Outside in the street, the sound of the bells, carried easily in the frosty air, rang out sharp and clear, and Sandy shivering in spite of his wrappings cursed the 'gangrel body' who had then raised him from his warm bed and forced him to brave the chilly night air and the rheumatic ills which would probably be the result of it. Lights were beginning to appear in the cottage windows, and from one a voice hailed the bell-ringer as he hurried past.

"Whit's adae wi' ye the nicht, Sandy?"

"Whit's adae wi' me?" shouted Sandy, almost hysterical with rage. "Whit—whit—! Man, when I get a haud o' him, when I get a haud o' him!"

And he hurried on promising punishments which he could not articulate to the unknown offender.

"Noo, ma braw birkie—" he remarked grimly as he faced the kirkyard, prepared to make a dash after the midnight marauder. But the words which he was about to utter froze on his lips as he peered into the darkness. He gave a loud scream, turned, and ran full tilt into two men who had come hurrying up behind him. The three fell sprawling together upon the rough cobbles.

"Here, whit's adae there?" shouted another man running up at the same moment.

But he received no answer. Sandy was as one stricken dumb. His limbs refused to work, and he could do nothing but sit and gasp upon the ground while the other two could do little more, so badly were they winded by the impact with which he had run into them.

"Guid sakes!" exclaimed the new arrival, who was the head elder of the church. "Guid sakes! Never was there sic a mak' ado here afore! Gin the meenister——"

And he ran on to the churchyard where the bells were still ringing.

"Lord ha' mercy!" he almost screamed his voice hoarse with terror, and without another word, he rushed up the street to his own house.

"Up, wife! Up, woman!" he exclaimed to his wife, who was already standing in the doorway wondering what was the cause of all the disturbance. "The de'il's in the kirkyaird—an' the meenister awa' an' a'!"

This last, referring to the minister's departure to Glasgow on business the previous day, was uttered in such tones of horror and despair as seemed to indicate that he, and he alone, could save them from the Prince of Darkness, who appeared to be occupying the churchyard at the moment.

Alarmed Crowds Assemble.

By now the main street of the village was filled with men and women, all anxious to know what was the matter, and all asking the same question, which none could answer. The bell still clanged on, and the sound, echoing up and down the valley, shrouded in inky darkness, gave an eerie effect, which only served to complete their consternation. Never before in the whole history of the peaceful village had such an event as this taken place, and the fact that the cause of all the disturbance was unknown rendered their terror the more extreme.

At the excited words of the head elder, a steady, sober man, as they all knew, in everyday life, this consternation amounted almost to a stampede. Women screamed and rushed to their homes to fetch or protect their children. Some men knelt upon the ground and began to pray, while others commenced a loud wailing. The whole presented an almost indescribable scene of terror and confusion, the street being lit up by the lights still burning in the windows of the cottages so lately vacated by the inhabitants.

Upon this scene came Sandy Craig and his two companions, now recovered from the shock of their collision, and running as fast as their legs could carry them. Their arrival from the spot where the infernal Prince was at his work, galvanised the crowd into some sort of action. Gaining courage with their numbers, the men, under the leadership of their head elder, David Kerr, advanced in a body towards the scene of action, and womenfolks—mothers holding their infants in their arms, and the older shildren clutching to their skirts—following behind.

And the bells still rang on, sending their echoes vibrating through the night.

"The Lady o' Ki'peddoch."

Up on the hillside above the village, a farmer and three men tried to calm their cows, which, snorting and bellowing, terrified by the effect of the pepper and the sound of their own sneezing, had broken loose and were stampeding round the byre. With the aid of a stout stick and a couple of milking stools, which they used to belabour the poor beasts into some sort of docility, the men at last managed to secure them in their stalls again. Then a period of silence ensued, during which each man looked at the other questioningly. At last, one spoke, his voice dropping to a hissing whisper in the awesome silence which followed the stampede.

"It's the Leddy o' Ki'peddoch," he said.

And, as if to corroborate his statement, from away down the hillside, the sound of wild, uncontrolled laughter reached their ears, echoing again and again in the darkness. Without a word, the four men rushed out of the byre into the kitchen, closing and barring the door behind them. One man, in his terror, tripped over a chair and fell with it, landing heavily on the floor, accompanied by the crashing of breaking wood.

"Wheesht!"

"Whit wis't?"

"I dae (dinna) ken."

"The Leddy o'——"

"Pit some peats on the fire," said the old farmer gruffly, pointing to the embers which still glowed in the hearth. "It's near oot."

He took out a pipe, filled it with tobacco, lit it with a lump of burning peat, and proceeded to puff stolidly at it. The sight did something to steady the other three, who pulled in chairs and sat in a circle round the fire.

"Hoo mony years is't syne she was aboot here?" asked one man, referring to the local ghost already mentioned.

"Aye, there were twa shepherds and their dog disappeared that nicht," said the farmer, taking his pipe from his mouth and blowing out a cloud of smoke. "An' they never found ocht but the plaid o' yin o' them."

"Whit's she daein' wi' oor ewey's (cows) noo?" asked one, affrightedly.

"It's a sign. It's a sign," replied the farmer, after a full minute of profound thought. "It's means summat." With which lucid remark he relapsed once more into silence and devoted himself to puffing at his pipe.

All Manner of Implements.

The three men round the fire shivered and glanced fearfully round the dimly-lit room. A long silence then ensued.

Suddenly the farmer stood up.

"Wheesht!" he said, and, crossing quickly over to the window, peered intently into the darkness. There was no need to command silence. His three companions were already on tenter-hooks with fear.

Down in the valley, they could distinctly hear the bells of Kirkford church ringing.

For one long minute of silence they all stood motionless, as if paralysed. Then the farmer spoke up.

"Fetch your plaids," he said curtly. "We're gaun oot. There's summat wrang doon there."

Armed with heavy staves, the four hurried out together. The road to the village was long enough, but to these hardy men of the open air, the length was nothing, and in little more than half an hour, their speed possibly accelerated by fear of the ghost which had already done so much mischief, they reached Kirkford just in time to meet the villagers, armed with scythes and every other weighty thing they could lay their hands on, proceeding in a body to the churchyard.

"Then the Lord ha' mercy on ooor souls," said the old man. "It was him as was at ma kye this verra nicht. I heard him laughin' doon by the Annick at Queensford."

"The Lord be thankit for your escape," said Kerr. "A' the fiends o' Hell seem tae be oot the nicht. Come ower tae the front there, an' we'll awa' tae the kirk. We need a' the men we can get."

Half Human, Half Animal.

Scythes, clubs, milking-stools, and all manner of implements were raised, and the whole company proceeded towards the church. Brave as they all were, however, they could not summon up the courage to go straight into the yard and face the terrible power that awaited them there. So they made a detour round the outside of the village in order to arrive on the top of a neighbouring hillock whence they could view the churchyard from what they considered to be a safe distance.

By now, it was after four o'clock in the morning, but darkness still held the countryside in its thrall. By what light there was, the awe-stricken villagers saw a fearful sight. The bell rope, hanging down outside the church wall, was being pulled continuously and unceasingly by a dim black figure, the horns on whose head showed clearly against a whitewashed wall behind it. Half human and half animal, it seemed in the darkness, with cloven feet—the devil himself, sure enough.

Clang! Clang! Clang!

"Kneel, man! Kneel and pray!" exclaimed Kerr to the old farmer. "The Day o' Judgment is at hand!"

The words broke down whatever restraint had hitherto prevented his followers from giving way under the strain. Men dropped their weapons and fell to the ground, weeping like children, while their womenfolks in the rear, coming suddenly upon the sight, shrieked with terror and fell to wailing and confessing their sins. David Kerr and the old farmer were the only men there who did not lose control of themselves. Even in this extremity, Kerr did not forget that the neighbouring village ought to be warned of the impending doom.

"Here!" he said to the farmer, "ye'll find a horse in the stable doon in the hollow yonder. Awa' you an' warn Ki'peddoch. Quick, man, quick!"

Remembered Sins.

The number of villagers on the hillock was all this time rapidly increasing. Farmers from the neighbouring hillsides arrived on horseback arrived on horseback to find out what was the matter, and, hearing the dreadful news, joined the gathering of weeping repentants. The noise of wailing that went on throughout these long hours was indescribable. An elder of the church remembered the sin of sleeping during the sermon on the previous Sunday, and repented of it at the pitch of his voice. An old woman thought of the sock she had knitted on that same day of rest. A close-fisted old farmer called to mind the many transactions he had made which, although they might be on the right side of the law of the land, were not always in so fortunate a position in the eyes of divine law. The keeper of the village store remembered sins committee in the carrying out of his business, which intimately concerned many of those who now knelt beside him, but, unfortunately for these customers, the necessity for repenting of their own sinful actions was too pressing at the moment to all of their paying any attention to those of their neighbours.

And throughout the night, riders on horseback clattered along the country roads to warn the inhabitants of the neighbouring villages that the world was coming to an end and the Day of Judgment had arrived. Long before dawn there was hardly a village in the whole district of Cunningham that had not been warned and whose inhabitants had not collected on some neighbouring hillside to await the coming of the end. It was a night of terror for many an Ayrshire man.

Will's Ride.

But, to return to Kirkford.

The light of dawn was at last beginning to appear in the east when the old farmer, accompanied by young Will Rutherford—he who parted from Tam Craigon the hilltop at the beginning of this story—and a party of others, arrived at Kirkford from Kilpeddoch on horseback. Will Rutherford, whose adventures of that night were still fresh in his memory, was in a pitiable state of mind. He could hardly help believing in the sincerity of the old man's statement that the Day of Judgment was at hand, but at the same time he found it difficult to believe that this glorious world which he was enjoying so much was, perhaps within the next few hours, to come to an end. Thus, torn between belief and disbelief, and with a conscience none too clear, is it to be wondered at that he lagged behind the rest? But the most remarkable circumstance of Will's ride is yet to be related.

Just as he came clattering through the empty main street, a dark figure sprang out of a close and caught the bridle of his horse.

"Wull, Wull! Here ye are, then!" said the voice of Tam Craig. "I've been waitin' for ye these three 'oors. Man, whit a nicht! Whit a nicht!"

Thereupon the two friends withdrew together into the close, where, judging from the chuckles which could be heard every now and then, their conversation must have been an amusing as well as an interesting one—to themselves, at least. The two soon reappeared, and, while Wull remounted his horse, Tam slunk on ahead in among some thick bushes in the direction of the churchyard. Will, it is remarkable to note, rode on up the main street of Kirkford a very different man from who had entered it. When he reached the repentant worshippers on the hillock the darkness of the night was already giving way before the grey beams of light from the east. Noticing two of his companions of the previous night among the congregation, Will walked up to them unnoticed, tapped them on the shoulders and murmured a few words in their ears which seemed to cause them considerable astonishment.

"Wheesht!" said he when he left them. "Mind ye, when I give the word!"

He then walked to the front of the assembly.

"Are there ony here'll come wi' me intae the kirkyarid?" he called out.

The effect of his words was as startling as it was instantaneous. The men shrank back and women screamed with horror.

"Man, man," said Kerr. "Dinna brave the wrath o' God at sic an 'oor as this."

"Are there ony here'll come?" repeated Will calmly.

An Ignominious Flight.

The two young men to whom Will had spoken before now stepped forward, and, before any attempt could be made to stop them, the three had leapt into the churchyard and were advancing towards the dread figure at the bell-rope. The bell was rung more fiercely than ever, and the figure was seen to turn towards them. The excitement on the hillside was intense. Men shouted hoarsely to the foolhardy youths to come back while yet there was time. What the onlookers expected to happen nobody can tell, but when the three walked up to the rope and, after a few minutes—minutes that seemed like hours to the villagers—led forth an exhausted ram, the effect can be imagined rather than described.

A roar of rage went up, and the crowd rushed down towards the churchyard. Will, whose guilty conscience immediately interpreted the action as being directed against himself, turned and fled to his horse, which was tethered not far off. At the same time, a shout of "Wull, Wull," was heard from the neighbouring bushes. Tam Craig, who had tied the ram to the bell-rope, had been discovered. The two raced together before the angry crowd. Tam, quickly loosing the horse from the tree-trunk to which it was tied, mounted behind his friend, and the two clattered off down the main street of Kirkford amid a fusillade of sticks, stones, and every other missile imaginable hurled after them by their angry pursuers.

Will Rutherford, it says, was, fortunately for his own skin, not an inhabitant of Kirkford but of Kilpeddoch, a village lying four or five miles away, and, as he was able to prove that he did not himself participate in the actual playing of the prank, he managed to escape the wrath of the outraged villagers. He "settled down," as the saying goes, married shortly after, and died in the year 1865, a prosperous farmer of the same district. Tam Craig, however, was not so fortunate. Although he communicated with his father right up to the death of the latter, twenty years passed before he entered Kirkford again, and then it was as an influential Glasgow merchant.

Thus it was that Tam Craig came to try his fortunes in Glasgow, where he died, an old man and a respected Bailie of that city, in the year 1870.

Pure Breds Sacrificed With Scrubs.

SYRIO, PRIZE BRAHMA BULL, SACRIFICED WITH REST OF HERD OWNED BY REV. W. S. JACOBS OF HOUSTON.

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 31.—Highly valued, purebred Brahma cattle are being sacrificed with scrubs in an effort to check the spread of foot and mouth diesase in this region.

Thousands have already bee slaughtered and, although there has been a lull in the fight agaipst the plague, government inspectors are prepared with rifle and poison to destroy additional herds where the slightest infection is discovered.

This is the second foot and mouth outbreak in the United States this year. The first was in California.

The infection in Texas is believed to have started some time during September, by its entrance from South America through a gulf port. Galvaeston an Harris counties, and parts of Brazoria and Ford Bend counties, were first to be quarantined, and this form of control has spread to other districts.

The greatest loss is believed to have been incurred by Rev. William States Jacobs, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Houston, and one of the leading Brahma cattle breeders in the United States. It was on Dr. Jacob's ranch, 20 miles southeast of here, that the disease is said to have been discovered.

Dr. Jacob's herd of 450 Brahmas was the first to be condemned. It contained stock ranging in value from $2,000 each to $5,000, and was valued at $100,000 by its owner. With the rest of the herd went Syrio, considered the best Brahma bull in America, for which Dr. Jacobs says he would not have taken $5,000.

Besides shooting and burying infected herds, the government men are spreading poisoned bait freely through the territory for the destruction of coyotes and other roving animals that may act as germ carriers.

THRESHING WAS GOOD

Isaac Lawson and Thomas Tyler Worked in Partnership.

TRENT RIVER, Oct. 31.—Messrs. Isaac Lawson and Thomas Tyler, of 14th Concession, worked their farms in partnership this year, and the result of 2½ days threshing last week was as follows:—From one field of from 20 to 25 acres 800 bushels of buckwheat, and, altogether, from oats and rye and buchwheat, they threshed 1,600 bushels of grain.

Breeding Raccons

CANADIAN-BRED RACOON

VAUDREIL, Que., Oct. 31.—The Canadian farmer has adopted the playmate of the southern negro and is reaping a profit.

The domestication of the raccoon has reached that stage in Canada where the Dominion has recognized the business of raising these animals for their fur. Farms throughout this and other regions have been converted into abodes for the animals. They promise as thriving an industry as fox farming.

Half a million domesticated raccoon skins are shipped to London annually. Prices range from $1.50 to $6.50 each.

Canadian topography and climate lend themselves to such an enterprise.

POTATOES ARE SPLENDID CROP

FALL WHEAT GOOD.

HASTINGS, Oct. 31.—Farmers in this district are now busy lifting the late potato crop and other small roots. Potatoes are an excellent crop, and the prices asked are 50, 60 and 75 cents a bag. Turnips and mangols are about the average crop.

Corn was harvested in good shape, and was of good height in most places. Much of this has already been cut for silage.

Fall wheat is looking splendid and is of a good color and splendid packing quality. Considerable fall ploughing has been done by practically all the local farmers.

The pasture still remains very good. The extra heavy rains of a few weeks ago were of a great benefit to the pasture lands, thus enabling the stock to remain outdoors much later this season than those past.

The apple crop has not been up to the average of previous years and is now all picked.

Dairy butter still remains very scarce which is partly due to the fact that the local cheese factories are still in operation. Creamery butter is being imported by many of the local merchants in order to supply the demand.

Eggs are remaining at 36, 38 and 40 cents per dozen, and are not as plentiful as a short time ago.

Prices paid for hogs for this week was 9¼ cents per pound.

ORCHARDISTS BUSY.

COBOURG, Oct. 31.—A Hamilton Township farmer, who was in town, stated he had not done any fall plowing yet. His harvest was late, and since it was safely housed he has been kept busy cutting his corn, taking it to the canning factory, filling silos and picking and packing the apple crop. This last is no small task for orchardists in this vicinity, for the apple yield is excellent all along the lakefront in this part of Ontario.

Petherick's Corners Crop.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Oct. 31—A large number of the farmers are busy storing away the root crop which has turned out to be far beyond their expectations. Shortly after most of the turnips were sown there came a long spell of dry weather, and some of them did not come up quite thickly enough; but those that did survive this dry spell have grown wonderfully, and hence the root crop is up to the average yield.

The fall ploughing is not progressing very favorably, a large number of farmers having just made a start.

GETTING TURKEY READY FOR SALE REQUIRES CARE

Too Many Birds Are Marketed in Inexcusably Poor Condition.

HOW TO FATTEN

Variety of Feed Will Help in Development—Start Slowly.

Turkeys must be well feathered and finished to meet competition on eastern markets. Reports have drifted back that turkeys are lacking in finish, and inclined to be sinewy. While this report may not be representative of our shipments, nevertheless the fact remains that there are entirely too many turkeys marketed in poor condition which grade No. 2, possibly 3, not to mention the comparatively large proportion of culls. The well flushed turkey of an attractive color is a ready seller, whereas the lower grades are difficult to dispose of at any price. In many cases the turkeys are brought in off the open range and marketed when no effort had been made to provide a satisfactory fattening ration for them, thereby inducing the birds to ringe less and providing an opportunity to put on flesh and soften the muscles during the process of fattening. This state of affairs is responsible for the sinewy, poorly colored "blue" birds that burden the markets each year and which are carried at the expense of the high quality turkeys.

Fattening Turkeys for Market.

During the fall, following the harvest, turkeys may be ranged over stubble fields to pick up grains which would otherwise go to waste. This practice is commendable, but as the marketing season approaches arrangements should be made to provide the birds with a liberal fattening ration, which will induce them to restrict their ranging and provide an opportunity to improve the quality of flesh, besides making substantial gains in weight.

The ideal fattening ration is composed entirely of finely ground grains mixed with buttermilk or sour skim milk to a consistency of a porridge. The ground grains are most palatable and are digested and assimulated rapidly and in large quantities. In case grinding of the grains is not practical, it might be advisable to cook the food. The remaining alternative is to feed whole grain.

It is difficult to outline a definite fattening ration that may be used by turkey growers as the problem usually resolves itself down to the grains grown on the individual farms that are available in fattening purposes. However, the following ration may be used to good advantage: three parts ground barley, two parts ground wheat, two parts ground oats, two parts meat scrap by weight, moistened with milk. Corn, either ground or cracked, is invaluable in a fattening ration. Boiled potatoes serve as a variety and produce fine white flesh. Buttermilk or sour skim milk add materially in putting on flesh. Feed plenty of it, if available, in clean drinking vessels. It is a good idea to supply plenty of gravel for the turkeys to pick up as it aids digestion and keeps the birds in good condition.

Lose No Time.

There are a number of late immature turkeys in the country, and the season is advancing rapidly, so that no time should be lost in commencing to get your turkeys in shape for market. Commence feeding at once. At first the feeds should be light so that the birds will go away a little hungry, otherwise heavy feeding is likely to cause scores of bowle troubles.

As they become used to the feed the amount can be gradual, until during the week previous to sending them to market they can be given all they will eat three times a day. Remembering to keep your turkeys eating, for a bird off its feed will never fatten to advantage. If they tire of one feed try another, and in this way provide a variety of feed.

MILK LOWER; TEST HIGH.

BURNBRAE, Oct. 31.—Cheese prices are looking a little stronger. Fist shipments for October sold in Montreal for 17 5-8c. Brae Cheese Co. paid 41.50c per lb. fat for September milk being an advance of 2c per lb. over ay previous month.

October tests of milk are avraging considerably higher than September, due to the gradual falling off in milk production.

Mangols have nearly all been raised this week and are a fair crop. Empire crops of potatoes have been the rule many exceptional yields of good quality being reported. Prices, however, are low around 75c per bag.

The apple crop is still being harvested in this district. Some orchards have fairly large yields, while others are a total failure. McIntosh apples are being sold at $4 a barrel, while Tolmans and Spies are selling at $3. Some growers are offering Spies and other winter varieties at $3 a barrel at the orchard.

PAVING CAUSES TROUBLE

Farmers Have Difficulty in Getting Goods to Market.

COBOURG, Oct. 3.—Farmers on the provincial highway between Cobourg and Port Hope are having difficulty in marketing their produce this fall owing to paving operations. One farmer stated to-day that he has managed to take his stuff to the canning factory by means of a temporary road across his farm, but would not be able to get his apples away for some time yet.

Premier MacDonald Strolls In St. James' Park While His Labor Government Crumples To Dust Under Huge Majority Of 202 Opposition Members

(By LLOYD ALLEN, United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Prime Minister MacDonald and his colleagues of the Labor Government postponed to-day, until next Tuesday, the decision they must make—whether to resign at once in view of the Conservative vote or to face a hostile Parliament and be beaten on the first test vote.

With the Conservative Press clamoring to-day for immediate resignation, MacDonald was up early and out for a stroll in St. James Park before breakfast. He summoned his cabinet to No. 10 Downing street at 10.30 a.m.

Whatever the Labor Government's decision, the prospects are that Great Britain will have a Conservative regime for four solid years.

With returns from 600 of the 615 Parliamentary constituencies tabulated, the standing was: Conservatives 398; Labor 154; Liberals 40; Independents 4; Constitutionals 3; Communists 1.

These figures represent a net gain of 150 seats for the Conservatives, three for the Constitutionalists and one for the Communists. Labor's net loss was 42 seats, the Liberal's 110 and Independents two.

Stanley Baldwin, if he becomes premier, will have a clear majority in the next Parliament of 202 for the Constitutionalists were elected with Conservative support and will vote with Baldwin.

ACCIDENTS ON MARMORA TRIP

Party From Tweed Had a Few Thrills on the Way Over.

TWEED, Oct. 31.—The Dramatic Society of St. Carthage Church presented the play, "Because I Love You," to a crowded house in Marmora Wednesday evening. The trip going and coming proved rather disastrous. On the way over a car driven by M. Baker collided with a wagon, and was badly damaged. On the return trip J. Brennan had his arm broken and was cut about the head, when a car driven by Felix LeSage struck loose gravel and went into the ditch.

The meeting of the Deanery of Hastings was held in the Anglican Church Tuesday, October 28th. The special preacher was Rev. C. E. Clark, of Belleville. There were eleven clergymen present.

There is an excellent potato crop in this locality this year; other crops are also considered good.

Mr. J. J. Leworthy, Ralph McGuire, Thos. Whalen and Mr. Arber captured turkeys at a shooting match two miles west of Actinolite on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Fisher are moving to their farm near Chapman.

Mrs. Jas. Murray is spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Rupert, Beachburg, Ont.

A large bunch of May flowers was picked in a wood nearby on Sunday, and a robin was seen building a nest on Victoria Street.

A valuable horse belonging to Wm. Booth, Thomasburg, was struck on Sunday night by a car driven by Horace Yateman, of Belleville, and had its leg broken.

CAMPBELLFORD SCHOOL BOARD HAD A MEETING

Big List of Accounts Passed and Reports Presented to the Board.

A BARN COLLAPSED.

Two Men Had a Narrow Escape—Fire on Thursday Evening.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 31.—The October meeting of the Board of Education was held last night. Members present were: J. A. Loucks (chairman), Messrs. Chas. Benor, Wm. Stephens, J. M. Arnold, Jno. Hall, J. N. Bygott, Dr. H. O. Richardson, D. W. Douglas, J. L. Hoover and Geo. O'Sullivan. After the reading of the minutes new business was brought up. Two tenders were received for wire screens for the gymnasium windows. The matter was left in the hands of the Property Committee.

Mr. J. A. Daly came before the Board, asking permission for his son to attend public school. This was granted.

After some discussion, the Board authorized the Property Committee to purchase forty chairs from A. G. Watson and Company for physics laboratory. Three hundred chairs are to be purchased for the assembly room. A motion was placed on the secretary's book, that the chairs for the assembly room were not to be loaned for any purpose and they are not to be taken outside the building.

Mr Jno. Hall gave his report on work on the High School grounds and presented a bill for nine hundred dollars for same.

The matter of removing the foundation of the small building formerly used as a public school was left with J. L. Hoover, chairman of the Property Committee.

The truant officer, J. Wilkinson, gave a lengthy report on visits paid to delinquents. He stated that he would have to make an example of six boys.

Mr. E. H. Greig, B.A., Principal of the High School, presented the report of the High School Inspector, Mr. Rodgers, who visited the schools this week.

Inspector Rodgers rated all the rooms number one, excepting the cloak room, which he rated at number two. The reason for this was due to the doors of the cloak room.

A large number of accounts were passed in all amounting to about three thousand dollars. The largest of these accounts was one for the five furnaces that were overhauled and repaired, the cost of which was a little over nineteen hundred dollars.

The secretary-treasurer had to report a shortage of funds for high school purposes. The matter was left in the hands of the Finance committee, to make provision. This is the first time in the history of the High school that funds have been short.

The board then adjourned.

Barn Collapsed.

While Mr. T. S. Baker, Front street, was having his barn raised higher and when it was almost finished, the whole structure collapsed with two men under it. But very fortunately no one was hurt. Mr. Baker then had it all torn down and is having a new one built.

Fire On Thursday night.

About nine o'clock on Thursday night an alarm of fire went in. The truck was soon on the job. Fire had started upstairs in the building occupied by a family, over A. L. Riendeau's insurance office. It was supposed to have started from a coal oil stove. It was not long before it was mastered. Some considerable damage was done, but the prompt action of the firemen saved a large amount of damage.

George Dunn Funeral.

The funeral of the late George Dunn, Front Street, who died on Wednesday evening, will be held on Friday afternoon. Service at the house at half-past two, leaving for Mount Pleasant Cemetery at three o'clock. Rev. Hugh Shaw of Menie will have the service. It was under Mr. Shaw's pastorate that Mr. Dunn was converted and joined the Baptist Church. Mr. Shaw also baptized him, married him, and will conduct the funeral service.

The late Mr. Dunn was born in Seymour East, about five miles from Campbellford, in 1863. In 1888 he married Miss Helen Duff, of Menie, who died thirty years ago, leaving two daughters, one only a baby of a few days. Forty-three years ago he moved to Campbellford with his family, then for a few years later they lived at Warkworth, Banty's Mills and Dartford, where Mr. Dunn was in business, having a saw-mill and planing mill and chopping mill at these places. Then sixteen years ago the family moved to Campbellford again, where they have resided since.

Mr. Dunn was for a time foreman of the carpenter work at Calabogie and Burwash, under Mr. J. O'Brien, of Renfrew. He also had that position on the canal in Campbellford. His last work was head carpenter on the new High School. It was while at this work he took sick and never recovered.

He will be missed by his neighbors and friends, but most of all by his daughters and sister who lived with him. Mrs. Latta, of Dartford, the older daughter, has been home with her father for several weeks.

Social Evening.

The Baptist church had a very pleasant evening on Tuesday evening when they held a social for the Sunday school and church. The proceeds in all amounted to over $50, and will go towards buying a new piano for the Sunday school Mr. Mason, the superintendent of the Sunday school, was chairman for the night.

A good programme was given consisting of a vocal solo by Mr. R. Weston, Viole: Mason, and chorus by C.G.I.T. girls, Miss Lily Weston and Myrtle Hall being the leaders of the girls; piano solo, Miss Lily Weston and Miss Verna Shore, Grace Lebrash played a piano solo, and Mr. Gerald Lebrash a violin solo

The Kazoo Band, composed of Misses Verna Shore, Lily and Evelyn Weston, Hilda Sanderson, Myrtle Hall and Jessie Weston, favored the audience with two numbers, Miss Dulcie Carter played a piano solo. Readings were given by Ova Glenn, Jessie Carter and a splendid recitation in costume by Miss Myrtle Hall.

Then came a court scene, with Evelyn Weston, as King, Hilda Sanderson, Queen, Violet Mason, Princess; Marguerite Reid and Dulcie Carter were the jesters; curtain bearer, Miss Mary Shore. Other parts were taken by Winnie Glenn, Ova Glenn and Marion Cairns.

After the splendid programme refreshments were served.

HUNTING PARTIES HAVE A LONG WAIT

Hunters Camped Along the Shores of Rice Lake—News From Keene.

KEENE, Oct. 31.—Quite a number of Americans are still at Hiawatha waiting for the colder weather to come, to speed up the ducks.

Mr. Hargraft from Cobourg, has paid his usual visit to Lower Foley Island. The Field's party are over at Grasshopper Island.

Messrs. Fletcher and Chas. Mather of Keene, are at Elmhirst's cottage for their annual hunt again this year it is noticeable that there are still an ocasional poor sportsman on the lake, who insists on hunting the ducks out of motor boats. This is absolutely against the law and is not conducive of making good shooting for themselves or anyone else.

Partridge shooting was very popular this fall. The young birds having a hard time to come through the wet cold spring.

A few pheasants has been noticed this fall in this locality and hunters are asked to be very careful and preserve this fine species of game.

The stories of the lake are not all fish stories. One resident a short way from Keene tells of being on th eLake with another Keene resident who also vouches for the correctness of the story to the effect that while shooting a duck suddenly, rose off the lake. The hunter pulled back the trigger of the gun to fire but in the meantime the duck was too far away and he went to carefully. Release the trigger and in doing so the gun was accidently discharged. Upon laying down the gun to his surprise and his companion he found he had killed another duck in the accidental discharge of the gun.

The debate between Keene and Indian River debating teams, was not put on. Mr. F. C. McRae of Norwood, showed some lantern slides. Following this a dance was held and supper served.

Mr. Thomas Stillman of Havelock who has rented Mr. Braden's farm, started work this week.

The death occurred on Wednesday of the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hunter of Keene, aged 14 months, after a very short illness.

The Farewell entertainment put on by the Methodist church of Keene in honor of the Rev. McWilliams who is returning to his duties in the foreign field after a few months furlough, was a huge success.

The string music given by the Misses McFarlane, Misses Tretheway and Alfred Fletcher was much appreciated.

NEWS OF HASTINGS.

HASTINGS, Oct. 31.—At the regular meeting held at the Lodge rooms of the Catholic Order of Foresters, the following officers were elected for the coming year:

Firm Flesh Created by Rich, Red Blood

THAT charm of personality that fairly radiates from a superbly healthy body. Why do so many men and women who could possess vital, healthy bodies go through life without the charm that should be theirs?

All eyes are turned to gaze with admiration on the well developed, healthy girl and the upstanding, vigorous man.

If you are too thin or you realize that you are too easily exhausted; lack the buoyancy of full vitality and fear that your system is failing, then you should know that firm flesh is created only by rich, red blood.

It is the blood—and only the blood—which feeds the body tissues. To create a strong, symmetrical body we must think first of the blood supply. Restore your strength and nerve force; create more blood cells.

Wincarnis, the red blood builder, creates them. Red blood will throb through your veins. Your entire system will be reinvigorated.

If you seek firm flesh, new strength and abundant vitality, obtain Wincarnis from your druggist at once. A sixteen ounce bottle, which is a fourteen day Wincarnis treatment, is sold by all leading druggists for $1.50.

Wincarnis is so effective that only three tablespoonsful a day need be taken. Start the safe Wincarnis treatment now and see the difference just a few days will bring.

6 Daring Tests you should make before you buy any roofing

1. HEAT TEST: Lay sample of Vulcanite on hot radiator for 12 hours. See if it will melt or dry out.
2. ICE TEST: Lay sample on ice for 12 hours. Then pour boiling water on it. See if extremes of temperature affect it.
3. WATER TEST: Soak sample in water for 12 hours. See if, by weight, it absorbs any water.
4. ACID TEST: Immerse sample in hydrochloric acid. See if it is affected in any way.
5. FIRE TEST: Lay white-hot coal of fire on sample. See if it sets the roofing on fire.
6. "SCUFF" TEST: Lay sample on floor; scuff it hard with your shoe. See if any of the slate-surfacing will come off.

Lasting Protection for Your Home

THE roof of your home must bear the brunt of the continual attack of weather elements—is its most vulnerable point in case of near-by fires. Modern builders roof with materials built to be as wear-resisting as any other part of the building; to provide absolute protection against every kind of weather and a fire-safe guard against flying embers. They roof with Vulcanite Hexagon Slabs and have a permanent job.

Vulcanite Hexagon Slabs give double protection everywhere because of exclusive construction. Finished in Green, Blue-Black or Red Crushed Slate. Made to withstand the six daring tests listed here.

Learn all about these sturdy, modern shingles which cost less in the end. Write for free sample and our free book on roofing.

Vulcanite Roofing is also made in Doubletite Slabs, Four-in-One Slabs, Self-Spacing Shingles, Jumbo Hexagon Slabs for re-roofing and in rolls. Approved by National Board of Fire Underwriters.

The conditions will be the same as in previous years: One vote with every twenty-five-cent cash purchase or amounts paid on account. Voting coupons will be given at the time of purchase. Simply fill in the blank space provided with the name of your favorite institution. First prize will be given to the one receiving the largest number of votes, and so on down the list. A ballot box will be placed near the Elevator on the Main Floor, and as soon as the voting begins a bulletin will be set up giving the standing of the various organizations in the contest and will be changed every week as the results are received. Make your purchases serve a dual purpose by helping some deserving charity secue a substantial money prize at the end of the year.

Contest Starts Nov. 1st and Closes on Dec. 31st

How to Vote

At the time of purchase you will be given a ballot entitling you to the number of votes your purchase calls for. Fill in the name of your favorite organization and deposit in the ballot box situated near the Elevator on the Main Floor any time up to Dec. 31st, 1924

Conditions of Contest

With every 25c purchase or payment on account a ballot will be given to the customer. Organizations will be considered entered in the contest who receive a ballot. The number of votes cast will alone decide the winners. The contest will close on Dec. 31st, 1924.

The Prizes

$500.00 will be divided into fourteen prizes, as follows:

First Prize	$150.00
Second Prize	100.00
Third Prize	50.00
5 Prizes $25 each	125.00
6 Prizes $12.50	75.00
Total	$500.00

The highest total number of votes polled will decide the winning contestant.

Make every purchase from now until the end of the year mean votes for your favorite organization.

ROSENEATH TO BANQUET TEAM

COMMITTEE NAMED

ROSENEATH, Oct. 30.—At the Council meeting on Saturday, Reeve Honey brought up the matter of the silver cup won by the Roseneath baseball team, champions of the Northumberland League. He said that he had lived here for 29 years, and that this was the first time in his recollection that an honor like this had come to the village. He thought something should be done for the team to show the appreciation of the community. The rest of the Council heartily approved the Reeve's sentiments. Much discussion took place in regard to the financial end of the matter, and the apportion that would come from some quarters. The Clerk was asked for his opinion, and he said that in his estimation a banquet was the proper thing, and that in regard to knockers, he thought the more they knocked the less they would be thought of, as a man that didn't take any interest in the doings of the township was a poor citizen.

Finally it was moved by Councillor Shearer, and seconded by Councillor Arnold, that the Council of Alnwick tender a banquet to the players and officials of the Roseneath baseball team at Mrs. Turner's some evening in the near future, and that the Reeve be a committee to arrange for same. Carried.

Other Business.

On motion of Councillors Shearer and Arnold, the Clerk was instructed to notify Jas. Kelly to take the gate off on the road leading to Shearer's point as the agreement called for October 1st.

It was moved and seconded by Reeve Honey and Councillor Parker, that the Clerk write Dr. G. Leach, Hamilton, re James Marsden, who is in the General Hospital there.

Vote on Statute Labor.

In view of the number of municipalities abolishing statute labor, it was thought wise to lay the matter before the electors of this township at the municipal election as the Council did not feel like shouldering the task of doing this without the consent of the ratepayers.

It was moved and seconded by Reeve Honey and Councillor Arnold that a by-law be prepared to submit to the people to abolish statute labor.

The yeas and nays were called for and all voted yea except Councillor Parker.

School Fair Statement.

A communication was received from Mr. W. Smith, Brighton, district agriculture representative, with the statement of the Roseneath School Fair:

	$98.11

Accounts Passed.

On motion of Councillors Parker and Shearer, the following accounts were ordered paid:

Austin Lean, selecting jurors, $2; G. Honey, selecting jurors, $2; I. McMillan, selecting jurors, $2; S. A. Tucker, making tile, $26.70; Jno. McMillan, revising voters' lists, $8.50—total, $41.20.

A GOLDEN WEDDING HASTINGS COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Scriver Surrounded By Happy Family on Anniversary.

HASTINGS, Oct. 30.—This week Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Scriver celebrated the anniversary of their golden wedding at their home on the Norwood Road. On October 27th, 1874, John Bryant Scriver, second son of Roland S. and Margaret A. Scriver, led to the altar Mary Jane Tyler, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cosey, of South Dummer. The young couple were married by Rev. Byan, Methodist minister of Campbellford.

Eight children blessed this union, namely: David E., Mrs. Jos. Sherwin, Hastings; Mrs. J. Franks, Acton; Mrs. D. Thompson, Toronto; Mrs. A. Davis, Toronto; Sherman of Hastings, and William and Lewis of Hastings, all being present at the anniversary excepting Mrs. Franks.

Fourteen grandchildren of the bride and groom of fifty years were also present.

About ninety guests were at the golden wedding. A cousin of the groom, Mr. Dempsey Scriver, of Cleveland, Ohio, was present and related many happenings of fifty years ago. Mrs. A. Carnrite, of Trent River, a sister of the bride, attended with her husband. A brother-in-law, Mr. M. Van Volkenburg, of Belmont, and his son, Mr. George Van Volkenburg, Reeve of Seymour, and a niece of the bride and groom, Mrs. S. F. Bice, of Kearney, were present at the celebration and also attended the former wedding.

During the course of the evening's pleasures a family re-union was held and little Mary Scriver presented her grand-parents with a purse of gold, and David E. Scriver read the following address, which was beautifully written in gold ink:

Dear Father and Mother,—We your children, grandchildren and friends have gathered this evening to celebrate with you this fiftieth anniversary of your wedding.

It is very fittingly called "The Golden Wedding," for, like gold, such events are very precious and rare.

It is a long time since the happy day when you, a young and happy couple, stod before the bridal altar and the minister of Christ pronounced you husband and wife. Very few are privileged to celebrate such a happy occasion as this day brings forth.

As we have grown up and have homes of our own, we can in some measure understand what it must have meant to you to take care of your large family.

We can never fully appreciate your loving devotion to us through the years of our childhood and youth.

Now that we do more fully understand, there comes to us a great sense of indebtedness and love to you for your untiring love and affection for us through all the years.

We are grateful to a kind Providence that as an unbroken family we may rejoice with you on this your "Golden Jubilee."

We desire you, on behalf of your four sons and four daughters and families, to accept this purse of gold, by which we desire to show you that our love, honor and respect are golden. We pray that the great Father may ever bless you, sparing you for many years to live together in this life, and that in the great "Golden Jubilee" in Heaven you and all your loved ones may gather as an unbroken family to praise Him, without Whom the earth would be one dark wilderness.

Signed by the Family.

Telegrams of congratulations were received from Saskatchewan, Port Colborne and Toronto; other congratulatory messages were sent from friends in Parry Sound, Trenton, Toronto and other places.

Several other gifts were presented Mr. and Mrs. Scriver.

The aged couple are both active though the years were not without great hardships and trials in their early life, and are now resting, surrounded by eight industrious sons and daughters.

DAUGHTERS OF THE EMPIRE TO RAISE $65,000

This Will Be the Completion of Ontario's Contribution To National War Memorial.

MET IN LONDON.

Ontario Provincial Chapter Scored a Record Among Women's Conventions.

LONDON, Oct. 31. — Pledged through the word of their representatives in the Ontario Provincial Chapter, the Daughters of the Empire in Ontario will, during the next six months, make every effort to raise the sum of $65,000 as the completion of Ontario's contribution to the National Educational War Memorial.

The resolution, moved by Mrs. Ramsey Duff (Kingston), seconded by Mrs. R. V. Bray, (Chatham), was an important item on the business closing session in the Provincial general meeting in Wesley Hall this afternoon. It was pointed out that the I.O.D.E. in Ontario have already raised $136,000 for this purpose; $65,000 if raised by the April meeting of the Provincial, will have wiped off the provincial obligation.

Announcement was made of a number of speakers soon to be available at the expense of the provincial, to address the Chapters on the War Memorial scsheme.

The Ontario Provincial Chapter scored a record among women's convention when the general session concluded to-day to schedule at a few moments after four o'clock. Outstanding on the afternoon's agenda were the reports of interesting conferences held prior to the morning session; the Regents' conference reported by Mrs. E. F. Griffin, (Hamilton); The Secretaries' conferences by Mrs. Morden (Hamilton); The Educational Secretaries', Miss E. T. Raymond; the Organizing Secretaries by Mrs. R. V. Bray, (Chatham); Echoes Secretaries', read by Mrs. E. H. Malcolmson, and the Treasurers' conference by Mrs. Oscar Main.

Discussion elicited from Mrs. Bray an appeal for a further organization of junior chapters. She urged that 13 junior I. O. D. E. groups be in line by the 13th of February, 1925, when the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Order will be celebrated.

"There are by a singular coincidence 13 municipal chapters in the Province; make the 13th our lucky day," urged Mrs. Bray.

The report of Echoes painted a brilliant future for the I.O.D.E. organ. It was even suggested that this might in time take tre place of the objectionable magazine literature flooding Canada at the present time. Forceful comment on the magazine market seemed pending, but failed to break.

Mrs. W. D. Bowlby's report on the Girl Guide movement of the Provincial Chapter was an interesting resume of this branch of work by which the I.O.D.E. is sponsoring the formation of I.O.D.E. Girl Guide Companies. Mrs. Bowlby's election to the Provincial directorship of this branch followed. Mrs. E. H. Malcolmson, St. Catharines, and Mrs. Creet, Bowmanville, were named representatives to the Canadian Child Welfare Council.

Among the votes of thanks which were a closing formality was the very hearty record of appreciation to the President, carried standing. Mrs. Burkholder replied happily. Others so remembered were the Municipal and Primary Chapters of London; the Chamber of Commerce; the convenors of the London conventions; Westminster Hospital and the Sick Children's Hospital for enjoyable visits.

An invitation from Hamilton to hold the 1925 annual convention there was accepted.

BY BURTON DAVIS

PAT NEFF HONOR FARM, SUGAR ISLAND, Tex., Oct. 31.—They're on their honor now.

The guards and hounds are down. The doors stand open all the time.

And knowing what the old prison hell was like, they are willingly working blisters on their hands to keep from going back.

Texas, in the past, has borne the unsavory reputation of having one of the most brutal penal systems in the country.

Beating of "refractory" prisoners was permitted by the prison board.

Discharged convicts accuse the guards of "pickling" leather straps in oil, then rubbing them in sharp sand, before using them on the prisoners' bare backs.

Men have sneaked out bloody undergarments and filed affidavits to support these charges.

Echoes of these charges have come from a dozen prison camps scattered over east and southeast Texas. The prison board always has denied them.

But now there are fewer "refractory" prisoners. Every man is trying to get a berth on the honor farm.

It was a dramatic sight the morning Governor Pat Neff unlocked the door of the barracks here and threw away the key, as the crowd assembled on the banks of the Brazos River clapped and hurrahed.

As each man filed out into the sunlight, the governor shook hands with him and spoke a word of encouragement.

Mrs. J. E. King of San Antonio, chairman of the prison advisory board, to whom the new plan is largely due, stood by the governor.

Then the eight prison guards, mounted and armed, booted and spurred, and perhaps a bit contemptuous of this new idea, rode up Came then the blood-curdling bay of the bloodhounds, and the pack in the leash tugged up.

The executive turned to the guards:

'Men," he told them, "you are no longer needed here."

The governor was given a gold fountain pen. So was "Mother" King. The men had bought them with their few hoarded coins.

Robert Miller, an overseas veteran nearing the end of a six-year sentence, made the presentation.

"We hope you will wear out this pen signing pardons for the convicts of Texas," he said.

Neff has been known as the anti-pardon governor. His predecessor had leaned so far the other way as to be criticized for freeing too many men. It is not his custom to make promises or predictions.

But he assured the men that, "If I can, I shall make this honor farm the approach to pardon."

The governor grinned delightedly when an old negro prisoner sang a song of his own invention to the strumming of his guitar. He had been in prison since 1893.

The superintendent has not had time to take down the grating off the barracks windows. But the honor prisoners grin and say, "We left it there to keep the burglars out."

So far the experiment has been a success. Work has been done faster and more thoroughly than ever before, according to Captain Shannon, superintendent, W. C. McCleary and J. R. Joyner, overseers.

WOULD YOU SUSPECT ANY OF THESE HAPPY FELLOWS WERE "LONG-TERMERS?" THEY ALL ARE. BUT THEY'RE NO LONGER BEHIND BARS. THEY ARE "ON THEIR OWN" NOW ON TEXAS' FIRST HONOR FARM.

GOVERNOR NEFF UNLOCKING THE BARRACKS DOOR PREPARATORY TO THROWING AWAY THE KEY.

TO PROTECT CITY IN DAMAGE SUITS

System of Insurance Discussed by Finance Committee—Await Reports.

The discussion of a system to protect the city in the event of claims for damages arising out of accidents on the streets, occupied the Finance Committee last night during most of its session, and forced it to extend its time into that reserved by the Board of W[illegible], which met later.

It was shown by figures tabulated by the City Clerk that the following amounts have been paid in damages by the city:

1919	939.46
1920	628.94
1921	121.00
1922	35.00
1923	1265.07
1924 (to date)	3000.00

A plan of insurance was discussed, and recommendations will be received to be discussed by the committee.

NEWS OF BURNBRAE.

Young People Elect Officers —Special Meeting.

BURNBRAE, Qctober 31. — The Young People's Guild of St. Andrew's Church, Burnbrae, held their annual meeting on Monday evening. Rev. D. [illegible]. McKenzie addressed the meeting, taking as his subject "Investments." He cited education as a good investment for one to make especially that obtained from the reading of good books. The investment of life in something worthwhile. Most really great men looked upon life as a calling rather than as a career.

Hon. president, Rev. D. A. McKenzie.

President Mrs. Geo. Craighead.

Vice-presidents, E. L. Anderson, H. M. Donald, Miss Irene Thompson, Mrs. John Rannie.

Secretary, Miss Marjory Rannie.

Treasurer, Mr. Mitchell Rannie.

Organist, Miss Irene Thompson.

Rev. D. A. McKenzie conducted communion services at Burnbrae and Rylstone on Sunday, 26th October.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Watson, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Anderson, attended the fowl supper at Stirling Methodist Church on Monday evening, 27th October.

Neighbours have been busy assisting Mr. Bert Hay in hauling gravel for the foundation of his new barn which will replace the one destroyed by fire two weeks ago. Mr. Bidgood of Campbellford is engaged in building the wall this week.

Bridges and culverts on the 8th Line are badly in need of repair. One bridge has been broken down twice in one week by threshing engines, while another is in such bad condition as to be dangerous for automobile traffic.

ROYAL LIFE SAVING EXHIBITION AT "Y"

Examinations Which Proved a Big Success Last Year Will Be Held During Next Ten Days.

The Royal Life Saving Society examinations in swimming, which were a feature of the season at the Y.W.C.A. pool last year, will be conducted during the next ten days. The idea behind instruction in life-saving methods is of real community value. A knowledge of the proper procedure in water accidents and the skill to avoid such mishaps, is one of the prime requisites of modern existence and tuition in the art of swimming may well be classed as an absolute necessity. The more youthful the learner, the better for the community and the family.

The Royal Life Saving Society tests, originated in England, and recognized wherever the British flag is known, are severe trials of strength and endurance in the water. The contestants are obliged to swim 600 yards, fully clothed, then undress in the water, do balcony dives and undergo other rigorous tests.

On Saturday afternoon of this week the main portion of the examination will take place, with ten girls taking elementary and proficiency work, four in the bronze medallion class, and two taking the silver award of merit. This silver award will be taken by four girls: Marguerite Mason, Eleanor Hiland, Mary Dunlop and Mathilde Dunlop, but two of the girls will take the award at next week's meeting on Friday evening, when an exhibition of swimming, races, diving and stunts will be given.

On Saturday afternoon contestants taking part will range from the age of eight years to adults, and will afford a splendid opportunity of observing the skill of the various class members. Rev. J. D. Paterson will conduct the tests.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY.

TESTED BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—Rolled oats with coddled apples, creamed potatoes, fried eggplant, whole wheat toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Cream of corn soup, croutons, broiled lamb chops, stewed pears, whole wheat bread and butter, milk, tea.

Dinner—Pan-broiled pork chops, macaroni and onions, lettuce and tomato salad with French dressing, bran bread and butter, peach butter, custard bread pudding, milk, tea.

Children under 12 years should not be permitted to eat pork for their evening meal or any other, so order enough lamb chops for the juniors' dinner. Since the four-year-old had meat for his luncheon he should not have it for his dinner. The dessert is substantial to complement a light meat course for the family and serves as the "main" dish for the day's dinner.

Rolled Oats With Coddled Apples.

Six large smooth apples, 1 cup sugar, 1½ cups water, 3 cups well-cooked rolled oats.

Pare apples and remove cores. Care should be taken to keep the apples whole and that every bit of the core is out. Dissolve sugar in water and bring to the boiling point. Add apples and simmer until soft, but not broken. If you have a fireless cooker let the rolled oats cook overnight. If not, cook the night before and reheat over hot water while "coddling" the apples. Fill cavities of apples with cereal and place in a buttered baking pan. Bake 15 minutes, basting several times with the sirup in which the apples were cooked. Serve with thin cream.

Baked Macaroni With Onions.

One cup macaroni broken in inch lengths, 2 large onions, 2 tablespoons butter, 1½ cups milk, salt and pepper.

Cook macaroni in boiling salted water for 20 minutes. Drain. Put a layer of macaroni in a butter baking dish, add a layer of onions cut in thin slices, dot with bits of butter, sprinkle with salt and pepper and cover with a layer of macaroni. Repeat, layer for layer until all is used. Pour over milk, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake one hour in a moderate oven.

This dish furnishes both starch and a vegetable, thereby taking the place of potatoes and the extra vegetables considered necessary for every dinner.

BOARD OF WORKS ON SANITATION

Sewage Disposal Plant — Township Service and Plumbing Regulation.

START IN SPRING?

At a meeting of the Board of Works last night, chairman Robert Morrison presiding, a letter of thanks from W. R. Breyfogle, general manager of the DeLaval Co. was read expressing his appreciation of the good work done in cleaning the drainage ditch on Park street.

Alderman E. M. Turner proposed that all sanitary installations to be attached to the city sewers shall be subject to inspection of the city engineer and that the inspection be paid for by the persons installing the plumbing. This, it was intimated, will apply to all installations attached to the city sewer outside the city limits as well as in the city.

Would Extend City.

Alderman Morrison suggested making an endeavour to take both sides of the boundary streets into the corporation and make the boundary run behind lots instead of down the centre of the street.

Mr. Armstrong: "You must remember that would make you responsible for the upkeep of the whole street instead of just half as now."

Alderman McIntyre: "It seems as though we are now."

New Appointment.

Alderman Stocker suggested that the Council should keep in mind the appointment of a member of the Suburban Area Comission. By a change in the Statute it is not now permissible for a member of the council to hold this position.

The present incumbent is Alderman Robert Morrison, who will retire at the end of this term.

Sewage Disposal Plant.

Answering a query, City Engineer Parsons said due to the changed plans in the sewage disposal plant the city engineering department has been tied up with extra work for over a month. Mr. Parsons sees no reason why this pumping station should not be built this winter, but that is the only part he would consider possible. About $400,000 worth of work could be done in winter, but the city engineer does not recommend any work at all in winter.

Alderman McIntyre agreed that no construction work should be done, on account of the increased cost. It is too late now to start, he thinks. Alderman Crowe said that any possible work should be done in order to provide employment.

Alderman Maher asked when it could be completed if started early in spring.

Mr. Parsons: Probably by next December.

Township Sewer Connections

Following some discussion regarding connection of township houses with city sewers, a resolution was put through that the city council prepare a form of document to be signed by persons outside the city who wish to connect with the city sewers, in which they will agree to pay a rental for the privilege and which may be registere against the land of those entering into the agreement.

ARRAIGN TEN.

MONTREAL, October 31. — Ten people were arraigned yesterday in connection with the raiding of the postal mail van on 5th August of $35,000.

STUDENTS IMITATE CHICAGO SLAYERS

Kill and Hide Friend and Ask For $5,000 Ransom.

ROME, Oct. 31. — After eagerly reading all the details of the Franks murder case in Chicago, two university students in Sicily have imitated the crime in practically every detail.

The students are Simone Amore, 21, and Todaro Salvatore, 19. Both are sons of wealthy merchants. The victim of the killers was their companion, Gallea Calledora, 19, who disappeared October 13 and who was believed in the hands of kidnappers for ransom.

The three youths went for a walk near the old convent of St. Augustine, at the back of which is an ossuary. As soon as all three were out of sight of the monks the two students stabbed their comrade to death and carried the body into a remote corner of a far room of the ossuary, where it was hidden among the skulls and skeletons of Friars, some of whom had died centuries ago.

The family of the victim at first suspected he had eloped with a girl, but finally received a letter stating that the boy had been kidnapped and was [illegible] held for 100,000 lire (roughly $5,000) ransom.

The interests called upon their victim's family and condoled with the members on the disappearance of their friend and even went so far as to offer their services in helping to track him. Police working on the case secretly placed agents in ambush near the place where the money was to be placed.

One of the slayers appeared at the appointed time and was caught in the act of taking the money from the place of concealment. Finally both boys confessed.

As there is no capital punishment in Italy the heaviest sentence that can be given the youths is life imprisonment.

You have observed the tendency of industries to centre each in a special district of the country. Shoes have been made in and around Boston, autos in Detroit, meat in Chicago, steel in Pittsburg. And so on.

All this is a part of our age of specialization. Communities or districts of the country are getting so each has its own specialty, just as each individual has his "skilled line."

Usually industries congregate in particular sections because there they are close to fuel supply, near the raw materials they need, or strategically situated for distribution.

But when low-grade lumber is hauled from the Pacific Coast to New York, which could grow its own lumber, and machinery is hauled from New York to the Pacific Coast, which could make its own, the cost of long-distance transportation more than eats up the savings due to specialization by districts.

MARSHAL FOCH EULOGIZED AT KIWANIS CLUB

Speaker Was Rev. Paul Costello—A Military Genius.

THE KIWANIS FAIR.

Rabbi Brickner Will Address the Club on Thursday Evening Next.

Subjects discussed at to-day's Kiwanis Club meeting ranged all the way from social hygiene to Marshal Foch and the Great War. The former subject was dealt with by Dr. A. Y. McNair, vice-president of the Peterborough Social Hygiene Council, who, after enumerating the aims and objects of the Council, announced that Mr. Justice Riddell would visit Peterborough next month and give an address on the subject.

Kiwanian A. Moffatt was appointed to the Council as a representative of the Kiwanis Club.

Mrs. A. Stevenson and Dr. Jessie Birnie were present in the interests of the Well Babies' Clinic. The good that is being accomplished by the Clinic in Peterborough was referred to by both speakers.

The speaker of the day was Rev. Paul Costello, who spoke on Marshal Foch, whom he characterised as one of the greatest men living today. When France was threatened with invasion by the Germans and the Allies were standing with their backs against the wall, Marshal Foch was given command of the entire Allied forces. Foch possessed great foresight, and only a few months before the outbreak of war he knew so much about the activities of the German war machine that he was impelled to make a trip of inspection over the ground that a few months later was the scene of the world's greatest conflict.

The honour of presenting Miss Masson with a bouquet of flowers fell to the lot of Kiwanian Wilfrid Huycke.

Kiwanian Charlie Cook announced that it was not the intention of the Kiwanis Club to put on a musical show this year. The club will put on a three-day fair in the market building instead, at which exhibits of the goods manufactured and handled by Kiwanians will be shown.

Other features of the show will be a tearoom, dances in the evening, and booths of all kinds with fair ladies in charge.

Kiwanian John Craig, who is noted for his ability as a producer of good programmes, announced that on Thursday evening next Rabbi Prickner of Toronto will address the Kiwanis Club. The ladies are invited.

Two weeks from to-day will be a birthday night for the club, and big things are promised.

Kiwanian Mark Bredin of the Hamilton Club, was introduced as a new member of the Peterborough Club.

HALLOWE'EN TEA

The Hallowe'en Tea and Sale, held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. J. Mills, Hunter St., by the 57th Regimental Chapter of the I.O.D.E., was very well attended. The rooms were decorated with Hallowe'en fancies in yellow and black, and with a profusion of beautiful golden blooms from the gardens of Mrs. R. T. Hounsell, member of the Chapter, who donated the flowers for the occasion. The tea table was charmingly arranged with yellow flowers and candles, silver candelabra and a large silver basket. The guests were received by Mrs. Mills, and the regent of the chapter, Mrs. E. B. Clegg. Mrs. C. S. Stapleton acted as general convenor Mrs. B. B. Gillespie and Miss L. Belleghem, assisted by Mrs. H. Gilgour, had charge of a sale of dainty fancy work and home-made cooking was sold by Mrs. C. E. Jamieson, Mrs. T. W. H. Young, and Mrs. S. M. Touchbourn In the tea room, Mrs Arthur Stevenson poured coffee and Mrs. G. Evans poured tea. The assistants were Mesdames Holmes, Melton, Clark, Patterson, Dodds and Cottrell.

PRINCE AT HOME.

The Prince of Wales Arrived at Southampton To-day.

SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 31.—(Canadian Press.—The Prince of Wales arrived at home to-day on steamship Olympic from his tour of the United States and Canada.

"I have had a wonderful holiday but of course I am glad to get home again," he told the newspapermen, who with officials were the only persons allowed to greet him on the quay. It is always pleasant and interesting to travel and there is a great deal to be learned on the other side of the Atlantic where once again I was shown the greatest hospitality and kindness.

Y.W.C.A. APPEALS TO CITY FOR HELP

Small Sum of $1,500 Is Needed Each Year to Cover Overhead Expenses.

It's wise to support any good institution in our city, and our city can't be a good city unless the good institutions are supported. It's the people of Peterboro that make the city and it's the people of Peterboro that benefit, either directly or indirectly, from the good work of any institutions.

Among the institutions doing the most good is the Young Women's Christian Association on Simcoe Street, commonly known among its many lady friends as the "Y"; but its good work is done in such a quiet way that but few people know the full scope of its activities. Of its many classes that run from cooking to basketry, from elocution to a charm school, from home nursing to a children's story hour, its department of physical education and its lectures and entertainments. Its best work of all, however, is in furnishing a real home to the girls in our city without a home. Stop for a moment and think what that means. Do you get its full significance?

Any business man knows that his work can not be carried on without money. There is a regular monthly outgo, and naturally there must be a regular income to offset it. The boarding home is more than self-supporting, and furnishes financial help to other association work. That's proof of how well the finances are managed, but this source of income cannot accomplish everything. There is needed the small sum of fifteen hundred dollars each year to partly cover overhead expenses and allow the Association to continue in the full scope of its work, a work that effects the entire city of Peterboro.

The board of management have wisely decided that the best way to meet this annual charge is by an annual subscription, and between the dates of October 27 and November 7, you will be asked for a subscription. The amount needed is small compared with the good it will accomplish, no one can refuse.

The Y.W.C.A. is a credit and a help to the entire city of Peterboro, and you are a citizen of the city. Please remember this when you are called upon.

COURT ADJOURNED.

Jury in Case of Delorme Retired To-day to Consider Verdict.

MONTREAL, October 31 (Canadian Press). .... Shortly after one o'clock this afternoon the jury in the case of the third trial of Adelard Delorme, charged with the murder of his half-brother Raoul, retired to consider the verdict.

The Court adjourned until five o'clock.

Crown Prosecutor Calder this morning argued eloquently for the conviction of the accused.

"If you cannot come to a decision in this case," he said, "you will not be in accordance with the proof."

BANK CLEARINGS.

Total Clearings for Month Was $3,825,064.

The total bank clearings for the month of October was $3,825,064, or $590,787 more than the total last month, which was $3,234,277. For the month of October, 1923, the total was $3,783,571.

COMMITTEE HAS TAX OFFICE IN CONSIDERATION

Inability of Mr. Green to Return Rolls on Time Brings on Discussion.

EASY ON CITIZENS.

Consideration For Needs of Debtors May Lose Position For Collector.

At a meeting of the Finance Committee last night a sub-committee was appointed to investigate the needs of the Tax Collector's office and report back, with recommendations for improving the system now in force. The discussion arose out of the suggestion that City Tax Collector W. J. Green has arrived at the age for retiring, and several plans for re-organizing the department with up-to-date machinery, or amalgamating it with another branch, were talked over.

Mayor Turner remarked that he is really concerned about the condition existing in the Tax Collector's office now because of the out-of-date system in force, and that the Council as a whole is responsible for any difficulties immediately the second roll is put in the Collector's hands while he has the first unreturned. The auditor, F. J. A. Hall, reported against the practice of allowing two rolls to reach the Tax Collector's hands at the same time.

"The roll for 1922 was in the Collector's hands a year after it should have been returned," His Worship said. "I don't believe or suggest that there is anything wrong, but the system is not right, and we might as well change it now as later on. Mr. Green has been a faithful and efficient servant and is highly esteemed by all citizens, and his knowledge would be of great service to a new collector, whom he could assist. Mr. Green is a fine gentleman, and the only difficulty now seems to be that his heart is too large for his job."

Alderman Phelan, chairman of the committee, reported at this point that Mr. Green had told him by telephone a few minutes before that the 1923 roll is in shape to be returned now, except for some water rates that will be charged to the property.

Mayor Turner—"In this think I am thinking of the public interest and of the work being done in the proper way. It should be done in such a way that a check up could be made by the Collector every day and any discrepancy found immediately. The present system isn't good business, and we are courting trouble."

His Worship pointed out that people who neglect or refuse to pay their taxes jeopardize the Collector's position, as his business is to collect them, and no excuses are received from him. His duty is defined by by-law, and while out of the largeness of his heart he might personally be willing to allow five years for the payment, he is compelled by his office to insist on payment within the time defined by the Council.

Alderman Crowe—"It always has been difficult to get taxes in. We have never had the roll returned on time."

Mayor Turner—"If we get it in March it would not be so bad, or any time before the second roll is placed in the Collector's hands."

Alderman Stocker — "How about Toronto and Hamilton, where they have as much as $2,000,000 outstanding a couple of years?"

Mayor Turner—"They have another department there to handle such cases, but I don't think we need it, if the roll is returned on time."

Alderman Crowe—"Mr. Green told me he has all the taxes in but $103, and he can't get that party at home to serve the writ. He has been very lenient."

Mayor Turner—"Too lenient."

Alderman Crowe — "But the city hasn't lost anything."

Might Amalgamate.

Alderman Turner—"Is there anyone in the Treasurer's office to take Mr. Adams' position if he is sick?"

Alderman Morrison — "There should be an assistant in every department ready to take the senior man's place if the necessity arises."

Alderman Crowe — "In several places like Windsor and St. Catharines they collect the taxes in the Treasurer's office."

Mayor Turner pointed out that the city lost in interest on the unpaid taxes through paying more for money borrowed from the bank than it is allowed by law to charge as a penalty for unpaid taxes.

Alderman McIntyre suggested that Mayor Turner and Alderman Phelan be a committee to bring in a report on the office.

Alderman Phelan pointed out that the system of book-keeping in the Tax Collector's office is antiquated. There is no double entry system or anything supplementary to the cash book and the journal. An auditor some years ago recommended a new system, but it was never adopted. It would be a good thing to have a new system whereby the receipts could be checked every day and a record kept, probably in loose-leaf form. The system should be up-to-date and so complete that any day could be turned up and the transactions for that particular day ascertained without trouble.

Continuing, Alderman Phelan showed that the council had never provided the Tax Collector with any facilities for the collection of taxes. His office should be something like a bank, in order to handle the last day's rush of business when hundreds of thousands of dollars are passed into his hands. Instead of this, the collector has not even a divided money drawer, with places for bills of different denominations.

The lack of the ordinary facilities adds to the labor and detracts from the safety margin.

Alderman McIntyre moved that the committee be given power to act but was strenuously opposed by Aldermen Stocker, who said a report should be made to the committee or to council.

Ald. Crowe remarked that he did not think Alderman Phelan would accept the responsibility.

On motion of Alderman Turner, the matter was left to the committee to report on the present condition, and recommendations as to improvements to be made to the council.

No Discrepancy.

Throughout the discussion there was a general feeling of regret that the change should be found necessary, all expressing the greatest regard for Mr. Green and appreciating the fact that his books are clear of errors and the slackness in returning the roll is his only fault. This, they pointed out, is in large measure, due to his large-heartedness, when he refrains from pressing possibly poorly circumstanced citizens for their taxes. Sentiment has no part in his position, it was said, the rules governing the return of the tax roll on a certain date being rigid.

The Dawn of Better Times

CANADA has safely weathered the acute business depression following the war.

The Dawn of Better Times is breaking across the Dominion.

$200,000,000 More

The West has harvested a good wheat crop. It is being marketed at the highest prices since 1920.

Add the revenue from coarse grains, field crops, livestock, dairy and poultry products to the value of the wheat crop and Western farmers will receive over $200,000,000 MORE than in 1923.

The influence of TWO HUNDRED MILLION MORE DOLLARS received by the West will be felt through the arteries of trade all over the Dominion. It will be a stimulus to brisker trade. It will strengthen confidence in the present situation as well as in the future.

In addition to the West's rich yield is the bountiful harvest of Ontario and Eastern Canada, from which the farmers will receive the best money returns for several years. Farmers are now receiving high enough prices to make farming pay and to restore their buying power which was curtailed during the recent period of lower prices for farm products.

People More Confident

Another factor is the morale of the Canadian people, which is at a favorable point for good business. This year there have been no runs on banks—no wild rumors—no panics—no hysteria. The nation has settled down to a calmer, more confident state of mind. The soundness of Canada's financial structure has been proven. The Canadian Dollar is worth par. The record-breaking way in which the recent issue of Dominion Government Bonds was taken up is another indication of the financial health and strength of the Dominion.

Another good sign is that Failures for the first eight months of 1924 have been 2½ per cent. less than for same period of 1923. Our exports to date are 10 per cent. greater. They exceed our imports by $238,893,976 for the year ending Aug. 31st, and give us a very favorable trade balance. Our pulp and paper production snows a gain. Immigration is increasing. There is increased activity in Ontario's gold fields, which promise to surpass the famous gold fields of California.

The situation in Europe is clearing, too, and will result in an improvement of trade conditions throughout the world, and the opening up of larger markets for Canadian exports. Trade with the Orient is increasing, also, and in years to come the Orient will be one of the greatest markets for Canada's products.

Altogether there are good and sound reasons for Canadian business men to feel more cheerful, more hopeful, more confident than for several years past.

A New Normal

The worst is past. The sunshine of better times is on the horizon. While no boom is to be expected, healthier business—a new normal—is indicated.

But with better trade conditions, strong competition also seems certain. Domestic industries will have to battle with commercial invaders from Britain, United States, Europe and other foreign countries.

Now is the time for the domestic manufacturer to take vigorous action to secure a stronger, more dominant position in the home market.

Old outlets should be strengthened. New outlets obtained. New consumers started using the goods. More frequent turnovers secured.

Strong Publicity Will Help

Advertising that is strong, convincing, creative will help the Canadian manufacturer to strengthen his position, to obtain new outlets and new consumers, and to secure a generous share of the increased business better times will create.

The services of our large, strong advertising organization are at the disposal of manufacturers who desire to strengthen and extend their position in the Canadian market and reap a good share of the harvest of better times. Are you one of them?

☞ We will gladly supply Business Houses with copies of this advertisement to send to their travelers or to the trade. Limited numbers gratis. Larger quantities at cost.

NEW MONEY IN GERMANY

Will Be Issued in Two Weeks —Reichsbank is Now Reorganized.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—(Associated Press.)— Formal contact between the staff of Seymour Parker Gilbert, Jr., new Agent General for reparation payments, and German official quarters will be inaugurated Friday when Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, President of the Reichsbank, will give a luncheon to the new official, the retiring Agent General, Owen D. Young, and Rufus Dawes, Joseph E. Sterrett and Henry M. Robinson, American member of the Transfer Committee. The Reichsbank directorate will also attend.

Dr. Schacht has completed the reorganization of the Reichsbank to conform with the provisions of the Dawes plan, although the new issues of the gold-covered currency have not yet been printed in sufficient quantities to meet the ordinary requirements. These issues will make their appearance in about a fortnight, after which the present currency and the rentenmark will be gradually withdrawn.

DANCE AT HASTINGS.

A Number From Peterborough Present—A Drawing Contest.

HASTINGS, October 31. — The Dorontal Chapter, I.O.D.E., held its third annual Hallowe'en dance, on Wednesday evening in Lynch's Hall. The decorations were all in Hallowe'en color scheme, orange and black, pumpkins, black cats, owls and corn shocks.

The custom of Hallowe'en originated in France in 885 A.D. It is the evening before All-Hallows or All Saints' Day, November 1st. The saints built large bon fires around which they danced and shouted in order to drive away all of the evil spirits. A person possessing an evil spirit would bring some offering and present it to the gods by burning it in these holy fires and hence it got its name, Holy Eve or Hallowe'en.

Blood's four piece orchestra supplied the music, which was of the best. Twenty dances with four extras filled the programme.

During the evening the autograph quilt which the Chapter have made to raise funds, was raffled.

Mr. Ken Blood drew the ticket for same, the number being 137, the lucky ticket being held by Mr. A. Cassidy of Hastings.

Some of those present from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Soden, Mrs. Vic Scully, Miss Gerard, Miss Stinson, Miss Steinkrauss, Miss Airshaw, Miss G. "No—no, Orry, of course I don't."

"But—he says he found them in a vase—in your bedroom. In a large, tall vase that stands on a pedestal."

"Yes, I know the vase——"

"And did you—Nan, did you put the tablets there?"

"Don't ask me, Orry—oh, don't ask me."

"I must ask you, Nan. You did put them there, Nan, after Douglas' death, thinking nobody would find them. Didn't you?"

"Yes, Orry; but—but they weren't poison tablets."

"They found them, Nan, and they've analyzed them, and they contain arsenic; so I think, sister, you'd better deny all knowledge of them."

"Deny all——"

"Yes; Nan, pull yourself together. Realize that you're suspected of murdering your husband! They think you were poisoning Douglas, and you must stoutly deny it."

"You believe I was, Orry?"

"Of course not! But that's neither here nor there. The others believe you guilty——"

"Who?"

"Who? Why, the detective, the police, the district attorney, the reporters—all the horrid gang. Now, Nan, listen; you must deny it—in toto—firmly, positively and repeatedly."

"I will, then," and Nan looked half dazed.

"And do it intelligently, Nan. See? It won't do for you to face the detectives with that confused look, and say, calmly, 'No, I didn't do it.' Shout it to the skies—we'll all help—but our offorts will be as nothing unless you co-operate intelligently—see? Will you? Will you, Nancy?"

"Yes, of course," and in obedience to Orry's orders she began to put more vigor in her tones, more force in her voice.

But when they reached the house, and Detective Dobbins met her with the direct accusation of having dropped the tablets in the large vase in her bedroom in order to prevent their being found by the searchers, she broke down utterly, and cried out, "I did—yes, I did!"

CHAPTER IX.

An Awful Accusation

"It's this way, Orry," Finley said to Kent, as the two held private conclave in Kent's room, "that silly detective has his mind made up that Nan is concerned in Raynor's death. Now, old Goddard, who has no thought or care for any one but my own foolish self, forbids my taking any definite steps to protect Nan, because, he says, it will react against her to have me for her champion——"

"Why, for heaven's sake, does he say that?"

"You must see—you must know, Kent, that I love her with all my heart and soul. I have always loved her—if I hadn't gone away when I did, I might have made her marry me——"

"No, you couldn't have done that, Mal. She married Raynor of her own will—nobody forced her into that—"

"Raynor did."

"Yes—but I mean, no outside pressure was brought to bear. Why she did it, I don't know—but I am sure—positive, there was some strong reason, quite apart from affection for the man—she hadn't any."

"Never?"

"No, not even at first. The night before she was married, I had a talk with her, and she looked like a girl at the very end of her rope. She seemed desperate—and yet despondent—I couldn't get anything out of her, though; she just begged me to let her alone—said she knew what she was about."

"Your father? What did he say?"

"Dad seemed puzzled—more than anything else. He tried to ask her some questions—but she wouldn't answer any of them."

"There was some reason," Finley said, thoughtfully, "some threat Raynor held over her. But, never mind that now—it's up to us to get her out of all this trouble and start life afresh for her. I'll tell you, Orry, that when the time comes, I hope to tell her all I feel for her—but not now. I won't add the weight of a straw to the burden she has to bear. But, as you are her brother, I must talk to you plainly. What about these poison tablets?"

"I don't think, Finley, I can discuss that—even with you."

Finley saw at once he believed in Nan's guilt.

"But you must, Orry. If Nan did try to poison Raynor, I'd rather know it."

"What do you think yourself?".

"I don't know what to think. I saw Nan—twice—put something in Raynor's cup. I thought at first it was saccharine—then I tried to think it was some harmless medicine—but why should she do that, when he had a trained nurse?"

"I know Nan was desperate—I know Raynor had brought her to the last stage of desperation—and, I know she studied up the subject of poisons. Do we need more proof?"

"We must know all we can find out, in order to prove the contrary. Here's my predicament, Kent. I know a first-class detective, who would come out here and solve the whole business in short order—but, do we want him? Do we want him to prove that Nan killed her husband—or even attempted to kil him? Isn't it better to let Dobbins blunder along—even—even giving him some manufactured evidence, if necessary——"

"Manufactured evidence?"

"Yes; make up some clues. Now, as to that print of an overshoe—I believe somebody faked that—to turn Dobbins on a wrong scent."

Kent looked at the other curiously.

"Who would do such a thing?" he asked.

"Why, Miss Raynor is quite capable of such a trick—or old Goddard, or Miss Turner—or you, yourself, if you'd thought of it. It all draws suspicion away from Nan——"

"And away from you. Maybe Nan did it for your benefit, Finley?"

"Maybe she did," said Finley thoughtfully. "It wasn't a bad scheme; except that it was a little ridiculous to a keen observer. It was so—so obvious."

"And you propose doing more of such obvious hocus-pocus?"

"Don't take that one, Orry, as if I were compounding a felony. But if by any such trickery I could divert suspicion from Nan, I'd gladly do it. However, if I were to engage the detective I have in mind—Wise, his name is—he's see through all planted clues in a minute. He's go straight to the truth of the matter—and, if that involved Nan——"

"Then we don't want Wise—that's positive," Kent declared. "Now what about Lionel Raynor and his will business?"

"Looks bad to me. That's the thing I'd like to put Wise onto. He'd soon settle the will business; he'd straighten out all the question of property and inheritance, and he'd show up who did the poisoning and who did the shooting!"

"Well, old chap, there's no chance that you did it, if you're willing to have the big sleuth on the job!"

"I didn't shoot Raynor; but look here, Kent, I'd swear that I did if Nan should be accused of that."

"Don't get that detective, Finley," said Kent. "Let's manufacture clues—or whatever your plan is—ourselves."

A tap on the door sounded, and Kent admitted Goddard and Detective Dobbins.

"We've come for a definite talk about these matters," Dobbins said; "it's time things came to a focus. Now, I'm sorry, but I can't see any way to look for the criminal in this case, except toward the one most interested—most benefited by the death of the victim—and that's Mrs. Raynor."

"She's not benefited at all," said Orry, coolly. "She's practically cut off——"

"She didn't know that until after the deed was done," returned Dobbins, "and I don't mean financially only. Mrs. Raynor was exceedingly unhappy with her husband, she had tried for some time to take his life by administering a slow, cumulative poison. Not succeeding, and urged on by the reappearance of her former suitor, which, I admit, made the attitude of her husband harder to bear, Mrs. Raynor became desperate and ended her bondage—for it was dondage—by shooting her tyrant."

"But you accuse me of the shooting," said Finley. "Only my fingerprints were found on the revolver, I'm told."

"That was a clever stunt of yours, Mr. Finley," and the detective looked at him with a sort of grudging admiration. "I believe you picked up that pistol, just as you say you did—and, I believe, that you had seen who dropped it—who fired it, as well—and, to save her you were quick-witted enough to whip out your handkerchief and polish off all finger marks except your own. It was an ingenious dodge, and it worked—in that it eliminated the prints of Mrs. Raynor's fingers. But you can't get ahead of me, Mr. Finley—I'm onto your little games."

The astounded even crestfallen look, which Malcolm Finley was not quite quick enough to hide, seemed to corroborate the opinions of the detective.

"Cut it out, Dobbins," said Orville Kent, sternly; "perhaps you have some reason to suspect my sister of giving tablets of some sort to Mr. Raynor, but you have no evidence to warrant such a suspicion as you are now suggesting! My sister was out on the west terrace at the time that shot was fired——"

LEFT TEN MILLION.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—(Canadian Press).—The bulk of a ten million dollar estate left by Herman Frasch, "Sulphur King," is to be expended in developing agricultural resources of the United States, under the will of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Frasch, widow, filed yesterday.

Mr. Frasch invented a process for eliminating sulphur from unrefined oil, and later made a vast fortune by discovering a method for extracting sulphur from the beds under the marshes of Louisiana.

BUILDING WAS WELL IN FRONT IN PETERBORO

Ahead of Every Other City Approximately Its Size in Ontario.

$90,884 MORE IN 1924.

Only Five Other Cities in the Province Had Increases.

That Peterboro was ahead of every other city approximating its size in the increase in the amount of the building permits issued in September, is only surpassed by one smaller city, and was higher than many larger cities, is revealed in figures just compiled. Oshawa, with a population of 11,940, shows an increase of $101,925 over 1923, but falls down on the nine months from January to September by $669,600, the figures being $753,115 for 1924, compared with $1,422,715 in 1923.

September, 1924	$51,755
September, 1923	$17,686
Increase in 1924	$34,069
First 9 months of 1924	$337,136
First 9 months of 1923	$246,252
Increase in 1924	$90,884

And the Peterboro record in the first nine months of 1924 shows up well against the background supplied by 18 cities that have decreases over that period. Only five other cities besides Peterboro show increases.

Some Comparisons.

Interesting comparisons show Peterboro well to the forefront in the list of cities of its size. Taking the month of September, Peterboro with its population of 21,726, and its increase of $34,069 over September of last year is ahead of Population.	Increase.

Chatham	13,256	$19,425
Galt	13,216	2,825
Guelph	18,128	15,308
Kingston	21,753	7,256
Niagara Falls	14,726	32,350
Owen Sound	12,190	5,000
St. Catharines	19,881	7,830
Stratford	16,094	20,540
Woodstock	9,935	6,998

Cities that had a decrease in the month over last year were:

	Population.	Decrease
Brantford	29,440	$132,012
Fort William	20,541	31,375
Kitchener	21,763	154,345
Port Arthur	14,886	252,210
Sarnia	14,877	8,685
Sault Ste. Marie	21,092	11,640
St. Thomas	16,026	250

Among the larger cities the reports showed:

Hamilton	114,151	Dec.	$277,550
London	60,959	Dec.	136,350
Ottawa	107,843	Inc.	186,030
Toronto	521,893	Inc.	1,080,903
Windsor	38,591	Inc.	136,878

All of these large cities that show an increase in the month of September this year report a decrease aggregating $8,643,014 in the first nine months, whereas Peterboro shows an increase of $90,884.

Healthy Sign.

The condition indicated by the comparison is healthy in Peterboro.

The average man now lives 31 years longer than he did in 1800. He has to in order to get his taxes paid.

CATHOLIC WOMEN'S LITERARY EVENING

Review of the Life Work of Dr. Drummond Given By Miss Agnes McCarthy.

The first literary evening of the season, under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League, was held last night in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum, with an attendance of about one hundred ladies. The president, Mrs. C. J. Snider, was in the chair. A short business session preceded the reading of a paper on Nursing, given by Mrs. James O'Brien, and a review of the life work of Dr. Drummond, the poet of the habitant, by Miss Agnes McCarthy. His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, occupied a seat on the stage.

Minutes of a previous general and executive meeting were read by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson. Mrs. Snider made a few announcements, and urged the members to attend the meat demonstration to be held next week in the Market Hall, under the auspices of the Local Council of Women. The first vice-president, Mrs. B. Law, reported on the establishment of a prefect system in a campaign for membership, of a finance committee to act in unison with the Girls' Entertainment committee, and a reception committee. Mrs. H. Owen, second vice-president, reported on educational work, and Mrs. E. G. Hiland, third vice-president, on a committee for relief work and a sewing group to look after requirements of St. Joseph's Hospital. Mrs. Ed. Hickey gave the treasurer's report. Bishop O'Brien, congratulating the ladies on the work already accomplished, made several suggestions, including a recommendation for more endeavor in visiting invalids and newcomers to the city.

Paper On Nursing.

Mrs. James O'Brien gave a very interesting paper on Nursing, introducing her subject by a comprehensive review of the growth of hospital service, from the establishment of the first hospital in Persia for men and animals, the second in Ulster, to the workers in the Temple of Esculapius, and the famous hospital of St. Basil in Caesera, down to the sixth century, when a hospital was built near the church of St. Sophia, in Constantinople. Then the combined military service and care of the sick given by the Knights of Malta and the Order of St. John, the establishment of the famous London hospital in the seventh century and of the Holly Cross Hospital in the twelfth. The first hospital in the New World was founded in Mexico in 1524 by Cortez, in 1540, the Royal Hospital in Mexico was built, in 1663, the first hospital on Manhattan Island. In Canada, the first hospital was established in Sillery, Quebec, in 1639, this hospital being transferred later to Quebec city. In 1644, the Hotel Dieu was built, and in 1693, the General Hospital at Quebec.

A consideration of the work of Catholic nurses included a review of their activities during war time, from the Crimean War, when Sisters of Charity and other nursing sisters assisted the members of Florence Nigtingale's band and received the Royal Red Cross from Queen Victoria for their services, down to the noble work done by them in the great world war. Over 700 hospitals in the United States and Canada are now under supervision of religious nursing orders.

A description of the various fields of labor opened up in modern times to the nursing profession followed, with a review of the course of study and the duties of the nurse in training. Mrs. O'Brien spoke of the example of high thinking and physical well-being which should at all times be given by the nurse, who should also be wholly alive to the spiritual needs of the patient as well as the needs of the suffering body, and remember the obligation upon her to live up to the characterization of the nurse as a "white-capped angel of mercy."

Dr. Drummond.

With excellent enunciation and admiral delivery, Miss Agnes McCarthy gave a brief review of the life and work of Dr. Drummond, the famous portrayer of the character of the French-Canadian habitant. The youthful speaker referred to the comparison often made of Drummond as being a Canadian prototype of James Whitcomb Riley and Eugene Field, as a writer of dialect, and quoted the assertion that Drummond was to the habitant what Riley had been to the Indiana farmer and Burns to the Lowland Scotch laborer. Dr. Louis Frechette's warm appreciation of the patriotic and altruistic motives underlying Dr. Drummond's writing was also referred to, and the reader concluded with a reference to French Canadian characteristics and a recital of Drummond's poem, "The Bells of San Michel."

Both speakers were thanked very heartily by the president, Mrs. Snider.

GAY INDIAN WAS SEEN ON STREET

Business Men on George Street Saw Unexpected Visitor Last Night.

The spirit of Hallowe'en was abroad last night, as several citizens, more or less startled, found.

Rounding the corner of George street into Simcoe at 7.30, several citizens came on a gaily dressed indian in beads and braids, and multi-colored cloak.

On Hunter street there appeared a ghostly figure, with pumpkin head, and white robes, somewhat marred in effect by the appearance of modish shoes and stockings.

These were the advance guard of a horde that will be let loose with darkness to-night, when George St. will be the stamping ground of cowboy and Indian walking arm in arm, angel and Mephistophles hob-nobbing and friendly ghosts and humans parading together.

Whatever the diversions of the revellers the police express the hope that the revelry will be as orderly as it was last year, and that no necessity will be given for official interference.

DOCTOR FINDS CURE.

Business Man's Disease Called Angina Pectoris Can Be Cured.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 31.—(Canadian Press).—Angina pectoris, a "disease of the business man," can be cured with a knife, doctors attending the Tri-State Medical Association convention and Inter-State Post Graduate Assembly said yesterday.

Dr. M. E. Dandy, associate professor of surgery, John Hopkins University, declared that experiments to cure the disease by operating have been largely successful.

The operations were performed to remove glands at the base of the brain and certain nerves adjoining the arteries, Dr. Dandy said.

Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.—Prov. 16:18.

HUMBOLT'S TROUBLES

Order of Chosen Friends, Holding Town's Debentures, Appeals Decision.

OTTAWA, Oct. 31. —(Canadian Press.)—Judgment was reserved by the supreme court Thursday in the case of the Canadian Order of Chosen Friends versus the local government board of Saskatchewan and the town of Humbolt.

The town had been in financial difficulty and the local government board had made an order purporting to adjust the affairs of the town. The Order of Chosen Friends, holding debentures of the town and being dissatisfied with the order, appealed against it on grounds of lack and excess of jurisdiction of the local board, the court of appeals for Saskatchewan.

The court of appeal, on the ground that they had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal of the Chosen Friends from the order of the local government board, dismissed the case.

HELD FOWL SUPPER.

St. George's Church Supper Proved a Big Success.

A fowl supper, supplemented with a large array of cakes, pies, etc., was held in the basement of St. George's Church, South Peterborough, on Wednesday, 29th October. It was attended by a record number of the members, neighbours, and friends from the city, from six o'clock to eight o'clock—a busy time for all engaged in waiting upon a hungry crowd of patrons.

Very great credit is deserved by all engaged in the undertaking.

After supper the following programme was rendered—Mr. W. H. Buller occupying the chair:

"God Save the King."
Chairman's address, Mr. W. H. Buller.
Tenor solo, A. J. Hayter.
Vical solo, Mrs. H. Rew, Jr.
Tenor solo, W. Gadfield.
Vocal solo, Mrs. W. Dickenson.
Trombone solo, A. Breadman.
Soprano solo, Miss Ruby Quartermaine.
Violin solo, Master Gadfield.
Baritone solo, Rev. J. L. Hughes.
Accompanist, Mrs. J. L. Hughes.
"O Canada."

HUNTING MOOSE AND DEER.

For many years hunters from Ontario have realized that the very best hunting grounds are located in the vicinity of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Hunting clubs, as well as small parties, appreciate the necessity of arrangements made in advance. Canadian Pacific agents are qualified to give you accurate information as to where deer, moose and big game can be found. They are plentiful in the French River district to Sudbury from French River; along the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway from Sudbury to Chapleau, and also in the Maritime Provinces, as well as in the district around Sharbot Lake. Ask any Canadian Pacific agent for a copy of the Hunters' Pamphlet or write W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent, C. P. R. Building, Toronto. 10,17,24,31

AT THE CAPITOL.

REGINALD DENNY IN SPEEDY DRAMA AT CAPITOL TO-NIGHT.

He kicked a phoney earl into a kidnapping taxi; a millionaire sportsman stole a diamond necklace out of his pocket and stopped a wedding, and he cleaned up a newspaper office with his bare fists—these are some of the adventures of Reginald Denny at the Capitol to-night in "The Reckless Age," his latest and most delightful Universal-Jewel feature was screened.

It is a mad, joyous whirl of high society excitement — and the redoubtable Denny mingles comedy and thrills in a remarkably swift moving story; with a little of everything Denny is famous for. He stages a fight as thrilling as any in Dempsey's "Fight and Win" series.

The story is an adaptation of Earl Derr Biggers' Saturday Evening Post story, "Love Insurance," and Denny, as an insurance "trouble shooter," is assigned to the strenuous task of watching over the romance of a nobleman who has taken out a policy against failure to marry an heiress. A blackmail plot, a necklace theft, a threatened breach of promise suit add comical complications—and to cap it all he falls in love with the girl himself! How he extricates himself from his tangled web makes one of the liveliest comedies in years, but still crammed with such thrills as the battle, a daring automobile drive and other adventures.

The cast is specially well chosen. Ruth Dwyer is a very charming heiress, and William Austin convincing as the English nobleman. Hayden Stevenson, who played the fight manager in the Dempsey pictures, appears as a high-power advertising specialist, getting many laughs by his clever handling of the role. May Wallace, John Steppling, Fred. Malatesta, Tom McGuire and other standard players are adequately cast.

"THE WHITE SISTER" COMING TO CAPITOL MONDAY, SHOWS FAMOUS STAR AT VERY BEST.

In "The White Sister," coming to the Capitol for a special three-day engagement next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday ,Lillian Gish does the most magnificent work of her career. That is saying a great deal for Miss Gish has been seen in many of the great productions of the past and in each has had a wealth of new laureis to her already established fame. Back in the days when D. W. Griffith made "Hearts of the World" Lillian Gish had already established herself as a great star. Then came "Way Down East," in which she won millions of new admirers. This was followed by "Broken Blossoms," where her role of the poor girl of the slums gave her unlimited scope to use her great talents as a dramatic actress. "Orphans of the Storm," that mighty Griffith spectacle in which Lillian appearer with her sister cemented her popularity and placed her in the front rank of screen players. In 'The White Sister" Miss Gish plays the role of the little Italian girl, who, believing her lover to be killed in action, becomes a nun. Greeted as the most heart-touching scene ever offered in any picture, the re-union of the two lovers shows Miss Gish to be indeed the "Duse of the Screen," as her admirers have nicknamed her.

"The White Sister" was produced in Rome, Italy, and required eight months to make. It is a picturisation of the celebrated romantic drama by F. Marion Crawford, and is alive with all the thrilling situations, tense moments and heart-reaching pathos that go to make a truly magnificent story.

Among the many thrilling scenes are those showing Mount Vesuvius in eruption, a great flood in which an entire city is destroyed, battle scenes with the desert tribesmen in Algeria. The calm beauty of old Italy provides many striking settings for the vivid dramatic theme of the story.

AT THE ROYAL.

IRISH PICTURE CROWDS THE ROYAL.

Irish Furnish Fun in "April Showers"—Comedy Drama Is Extremely Engaging and Original.

A most carefully selected cast of Irish players contribute to making "April Showers" one of the very best picture stories of Irish folk ever secured by a local exhibitor. This Preferred picture is playing at the Royal Theatre.

Director Tom Forman can trace his own antecedents to folk in Old Erin. For the brown-eyed colleen of the picture he chose Colleen Moore, of course, and Kenneth Harlan, who plays one of the leading roles, has a decided liking for the wearers of the green. Myrtle Vane and Ruth Clifford may also wear shamrocks, and McCoy, who supervises the exciting fight scenes of the picture, is a true son of Old Erin. Johnny Buff, former world light and flyweight champion of the ring, also claims Irish descent. Of course, these Irish players enter into the spirit of the picture as actors of no other nationality could possibly do.

Tenement Love.

Although "April Showers" is a story of Irish folk, it is not located in Ireland itself but in one of those intensely little "bit o' Old Ireland" communities on the lower East Side of New York. The intimate family life of the tenements was never depicted with more realism, for all the contagious fun occasioned by families living close together has been caught by Director Tom Forman as well as the sympathy of people who bear troubles in common.

Rich Scenes Too.

The entirely laudable ambition of every Irish immigrant to become a great fighter or a member of the police force forms the underlying basis of this absorbing picture story. Although the really vital interest of the onlooker is concerned with the action of the principal players, large scenes have not been entirely omitted from this splendid picture.

Something New.

A most unusual cafe scene will prove a real novelty to picture fans who think they have seen everything new. In this particular cafe, Director Tom Forman has conceived an entertainment stage which is presumably underseas. A rocky bottom, sea-weed, mermaids and darting fish give a background of unusual beauty and the camera has accomplished some wonderful under-water effects. A great fighting bout witnessed by an enormous throng comprises the other big scene in this feature picture. "April Showers" is to be classed among the entirely clean and wholesome picture offerings of the year.

JAMES BROWNE IN IRISH SONGS AT THE ROYAL.

One of the extras on the Royal programme last night was the singing of some of the old Irish songs by James Browne. Mr. Browne is in excellent voice, and these numbers were thoroughly enjoyed.

Wm. Duncan in "The Fast Express" is all action and thrills, and the comedy, "Some Tomboy," is up to the quality mark maintained by the Royal.

KIDDIES' DAY ON SATURDAY AT ROYAL.

The window at the Royal is attracting all kinds of attention from the children, who can hardly wait until Saturday afternoon when the cowboy watch fobs will be given to the boys and the vanity mirrors to the girls. These prizes are worth owning, and no doubt the Royal will be crowded as usual to-morrow afternoon.

AT THE GRAND.

REMEMBER, IT'S TO-MORROW.

Extraordinary Performance at the Grand.

One cannot be too insistently reminded of the great event that takes place to-morrow evening at the Grand Opera House, where the De Feo Opera Stars, coming directly from New York, will appear for one performance only.

It is not an ordinary travelling show that visits our city; it is a company composed of the best singers available, backed by an excellent orchestra and by beautiful stage settings.

The artists appearing to-morrow possess the most beautiful voices one can want to hear, and have obtained experience and success on the principal stages in Europe and America.

The operas, 'Rigoletto' and 'Aida,' in the special arrangement that will be given, are well known by everybody; their principal airs have been often broadcasted by radio and made popular by the gramophone. It will be the realization of a life-long ambition to hear these same airs sung by real live artists on the stage.

It is to be emphasized again that the prices of admission make it possible for everybody to be present at this unique performance. The Grand Opera House will undoubtedly be well filled, judging from the interest that the coming of the De Feo Grand Opera Company has already aroused in Peterboro and in the whole district.

Don't stay at home and dream about head hunters and cannibals and the land where the men slay and the women work. Come along to the Grand Opera House and see them live in the first true motion picture record of "The Lost Tribe" taken by Captain Frank Hurley and his gallant band of Australians in Unknown New Guinea.

This wonder picture of the century comes to the Grand Opera House for three days, starting on Monday, 3rd November, with matinees daily and the management positively assure you that no motion picture previously screened in Peterborough—no story ever published in our magazines and newspapers—is half as interesting and as thrilling as this record picture of a journey into the trackless regions of New Guinea by plane and boat. Don't say there are no cannibals or head-hunters! Don't say civilisation has reformed the world and ousted these creatures! See "The Lost Tribe" and you will discover that the most fearsome head-hunters in the universe not only exist, but are in this very town.

Captain Hurley will be remembered as the intrepid adventurer who gave to the screen "Allenby in Egypt" and "With Shackleton to the South Pole and the Bottom of the World. In his latest thriller he has given the world a thrill of an entirely different sort.

There is something in this wonder picture for the tired business man, the weary housewife, the flapper, and the sport, for it contains thrills and sport, beauty and quietness, excitement and the solitude of the great outdoors.

The picture is to play Peterborough at popular prices at the desire of the local management instead of the two dollar prices which it obtained in New York last month.

AT THE REGENT.

JACKIE COOGAN AS PRINCE IN "LONG LIVE THE KING."

First Picture Under $1,500,000.00 Contract Promises to Be Lavish Production.

The long heralded Metro production, "Long Live the King," starring Jackie Coogan, is now playing at the Regent Theatre Friday and Saturday. Particular interest is attached to this latest film of the young star as it is his first production under the $1,000,000 contract which was given him recently in addition to a half million dollar bonus by Metro Pictures Corporation.

"Long Live the King" was only recently completed at Hollywood and its engagement at the Regent Theatre is among the early dates allotted to a few houses throughout the country. From various sources the information was current that a huge sum of money was being spent in the making of this film and recent reports definitely fix the sum as $600,000. Of this huge amount nearly two-thirds was spent on the construction of the magnificent sets which furnish the atmosphere of "Long Live the King" and which surround Jackie with regal splendor.

As is known to millions of readers, "Long Live the King" was adapted for Jackie from Mary Roberts Rinehart's novel of the same name. The plot is set in the mythical Balkan kingdom of Lavonia and hinges around the escapades of the little Crown Prince (played by Jackie), who is beset by a band of terrorists who threaten to seize the government. The book is fascinatingly told, filled with romance and excitement a-plenty. The producers of the film version of "Long Live the King" have retained these essentials of a good romance and Jackie is said to have the greatest role of his career as the adventurous Prince Otto.

"Long Live the King" was directed by Victor Schertzinger from the adaptation by C. Gardner Sullivan and Eve Unsell. It was photographed by Frank Good and Robert Martin, with art direction in charge of J. J. Hughes and research in charge of William Van Brincken. It was produced for Metro under the personal supervision of Jack Coogan, Sr.

ONLY THREE AGAINST.

The following despatch has been received at the Church Union offices in Toronto: "Edmonton, Oct. 30.—Sentiment in favor of Chutch Union throughout Alberta was revealed to-day in the Presbyterian Synod in Edmonton. The main resolution, calling upon all ministers, elders, members and adherents to follow the Mother Church into Union on June 10, 1925, was adopted by a vote of 76 for and only 3 against."

DOUBLE DROWNING.

Five Small Boys Ventured Out on Water in Old Boat.

NEW LISKEARD, Ont., October 31 (Canadian Press). — Coroner Dr. Arnold will hold an inquest here today into the deaths of Adolphus and Herman Billneff, 12 and 8 years of age respectively, victims of the double drowning in Pike Lake, Hudson Township.

With three companions, brothers named Clarke ,and all older than Villneff children ,the lads had ventured out into the lake in an open boat, which in some manner was upset.

The three Clarke boys reached the shore safely, bu the two youngest members of the party were drowned before help could reach them.

Reports to the Provincial Police indicate that the tragedy was accidental.

J. P. MORGAN LOAN.

Germany's Loan Is Now Held in U. S. Banks.

NEW YORK, October 31 (Canadian Press). — J. P. Morgan & Co., and the bankers identified with the $110,000,000 German loan, placed approximately $100,000,000 to the credit of the German Government.

The money has been deposited in New York banks, subject to the call of Germany and can be shifted about at will in this country, or sent abroad in the form of gold.

The bankers do not anticipate, however, that the gold shipments will be made for some time.

The German Government has no use for money here.

PETER McARTHUR BURIED

EKFRID, Ont., October 31.—Canadian Press. — Peter McArthur, the Canadian philosopher and literateur, was buried here yesterday, in the little cemetery nearby his country home where he spent his boyhood and declining years of his life. The day was a genial autumn day with sun brightly shining.

"Leave Me by a Scarlet Maple," Bliss Carmen's poem in his honor, was read at the funeral service.

Hundreds of friends came from far and near to pay their tribute to Ontario's Nature Poet.

Rev. William Willans of Glencoe, read the burial service of the Anglican church.

OSHAWA SQUAD HERE TOMORROW

Return Rugby Game With Collegiate Should Draw Crowd at Riverside.

TWO FAST TEAMS

Oshawa High School's husky team of rugby players come here tomorrow fully confident that they can beat the local Collegiate squad at Riverside Park. Oshawa although beaten on their own gridiron at Alexandra Park by a substantial score feel that it was Coach Browne's training in interference tactics that crossed them up and gave the victory to P.C.I. All week they have been coached to contend with this mode of attack.

When the fans turn out to see this game tomorrow they will see the fastest rugby game that has been staged here in years. C. S. Browne who has trained the local Collegiate's rugby teams for the past five years with marked success, his teams' each year always winning the group and getting into the finals, believes that this year he has the best team that has ever represented the P.C.I. He is confident that if the squad keeps in improving as they have during the past six weeks of training they will win the Ontario Interscholastic championship.

The team is trained to the last minute and works with machine-like regularity and unison. Queen's interference plays have been adopted.

Oshawa High has a real team too. They have a heavier line than the locals and a great bucking squad. Hart their left half is a great sprinter and tears off some fast runs. They are not as well trained as P.C.I. and this cost them the game last Saturday. However, Monday they set to work to remedy this and tomorrow will show how they have succeeded.

If P.C.I. wins, and Coach Browne says all that they will, then the locals will meet Kingston C.I. for the championship of the East. If Oshawa High are victors and they threaten they will, a third game will be played at Port Hope, the winners to meet Kingston.

The P.C.I. had a work out on Wednesday afternoon, a signal practice yesterday, and final grooming this afternon. Nothing more could be done and Coach Browne said, "Good."

He will use the folowing lineup tomorrow:

Flying wings—Cheu and Outram.
Halves—Cole and Bookout.
Quarterback—Pogue.
Snap—Yelland.
Insides—Killaly and Craw.
Middles—Rye and Ebbs.
Outsides—Henry and Wood.
Subs — Goheen, Amys, Fraser, Neal and Martin.

SOFTBALL SCHEDULE

Following Games Will Be Played Next Week.

The following is the schedule for softball games to be played next week in the Brock Street Rink, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights, between the hours of 7 and 10:

November 4, 8 o'clock—Rotary vs Triple Link.
November 4, 9 o'clock—Bowlers vs L.O.L. 50.
November 5, 7 o'clock—Teachers vs Knights.
November 7, 9 o'clock—Belmonts vs Kiwanis.
November 7, 7o'clock—Rotary vs Knights.
November 3, 9 o'clock—Quakers vs Porcelain.
November 3, 8 o'clock—De Laval vs Engineers.
November 4, 7 o'clock—C.N.R. vs Quakers.
November 5, 8 o'clock—De Laval vs Toolroom.
November 5, 9 o'clock—Porcelain vs Lock Co.
November 7, 8 o'clock—Brass vs Engineers.

STERLING ADVANCES

Impressive Move Influenced by Outcome of Elections.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.— Heavy buying of sterling exchange in the London and local markets followed the news of the big Conservative victory in the British elections, the local demand rate moving up 1 5-8 cents to $4.51 7-8, the highest in several months. In view of the unusually heavy grain and cotton exports, the advance was regarded by foreign exchange dealers as particularly impressive.

PERCY HAUGHTON BURIED

Famous Harvard Coach Lies Near Scene of His Victories.

BOSTON, Oct. 31. — (Canadian Press).—The funeral yesterday of Percy D. Haughton, founder of a football system at Harvard College, coach of that game at Harvard, Cornell and Columbia, and a man of many activities in the field of sport as player, coach and executive, was marked by the simplest of services. The congregation that filled St. Paul's Cathedral was representative of the many interests whom they mourned, players whom he had guided to greatness, mothers of men who had been the better of his coaching, deans and delegations from colleges that he had served, classmates at Harvard, fellow officers in the army, friends of high social standing, associates in business and and in professional baseball.

At Mount Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge, a short distance from Soldiers' Field, and the stadium where as player and coach Haughton gained fame in baseball and football, interment was made in the family lot.

LEAGUE SOCCER GAMES TOMORROW

The Four Teams Battle for the League Points.

Two very important soccer games are scheduled for tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon in the local league championship.

Down on King Edward Park the Canadian Woollens and the Thistles battle for the league points, which are very valuable to the team that may be fortunate to gain the full points. At present the Woollens lead the league with two more games played than their opponents, who must win to keep in the running for the White Challenge Cup and the medals. The Thistles hold the Clarke Shield as the runners-up in the league last season. Only last Saturday the Woollens defeated the Jags by 2 goals to one in the Peck Cup final, so tomorrow's game will be a good one from start to finish, as they always give a good brand of soccer.

The Canadian Woollens will select their team from the following: Hillman, Cridland, Chambers, Read, Monkman, Roberts, Sayers, Warde, Gaskill, Mitchell, Hodgson, Jones, Dundas and Jackson.

All the following Thistle players are requested to be on the grounds at 2.30 prompt: Curtis, Rae, Bishop, Anderson, Hotston, Newman, Carmichael, Ross, Dawson, McPhail, Hutton, Young, Richmond, Burgess and Williams.

Mr. Alex. McKinley will handle the whistle in this game.

While up at the Oval the Great War Vets meet the Quaker Oats in a league game. Some people think this game will be one-sided, but you can take it for granted that there will be excitement, because two ex-Quaker boys will most probably turn out against their old rivals. But the Quaker boys intend making the Vets travel all the way to gain the points. Kick-off at 3 o'clock. Referee, Jack Clark.

MEMORIAL TO CHANCE

"Peerless Leader" of the Old Cubs Will Be Remembered.

CHICAGO, October 30, — Frank Chance, one of the great players and leaders of organized baseball, who died recently after a lingering illness on the Pacific Coast, is to be honored by the erection of a fitting memorial to his s ill as a player and his genius as a leader of the old-time pennant winning Chicago Cubs. It was so decided to-day by the board of directors of the club who met in annual session.

Chance, who became known as the "Peerless leader," led the Cubs to many National League pennants and two world's championships.

HUSSARS LOST GAME TO OAKVILLE TEAM

COBOURG, Oct. 30.—(Special). —The Fourth Hussars of Kingston, met Oakville here to-day at Horse Show Park in the finals of the Intermediate O.B.B.A. series and were defeated by Oakville, the score standing 29 to 1. Kingston's pitcher played a good game, but did not get the right backing, the combination work being fine

ZACHARY GIVEN CREDIT DUE HIM

Scorers Consider Fair Play in Reversing Decision—Marberry Relieved.

MANY ENQUIRIES

The second game of the world series raised a point in scoring that has already caused at lot of discussion.

Washington won the game 4 to 3. Marberry as relief pitcher was first credited with the victory. Later it was given to the original starter, Zachary.

It will be recalled that Zachary pitched brilliantly in the second game until the final inning.

Going into the ninth inning with a 3 to 1 lead, the Giants tide up the score. With two out and a runner on second, Marberry was sent in to finish the game.

Marberry proceeded to strike Jackson out on three pitched balls. Washington put over the winning run in the last half of the ninth.

As the crowd filed out of the park the general impression was that Marberry had won the game. The official scorers of the series were of that opinion. Some of the experts in their stories played up the fact that Marberry won a ball game on three pitches.

The day following the game the scorers decided that the ruling was rather unjust to Zachary and switched back to him.

Under that ruling Zachary was credited with a game in which he had lost his identity by being removed in favor of Marberry.

Since the close of the series I have received scores of inquiries relative to the final decision in awarding the victory to Zachary, a player no longer in the line-up.

Fair play must be the basis for everything that is right in sport. Fair play to Zachary caused the scorers to reverse their original ruling in favor of Marberry.

When Marberry entered the game with two out and a runner on second, Zachary technically stood to lose the game but had no chance to win it.

If a New York batter had hit safely, scoring the runner on second after Marberry had entered the game, Zachary would have been charged with the defeat, since he put the winning run on that base.

Thus Zachary technically never had a chance to win the game after being relieved by Marberry, but could have been charged with the defeat had the runner on second when he retired from the game scored the winning run.

In a sense such a situation is manifestly unfair. After pitching eight and two-thirds innings, if the scoring rule was strictly followed, Zachary had no chance for a victory, no opportunity to be rewarded for his fine pitching.

While Marberry in fanning the batter for the third out of the ninth inning and final one as far as the Giants were concerned, did a fine bit of pinch-pitching, it was not as deserving of the award of victory as the brilliant work of Zachary that had gone before.

The decision was a just and proper one but killed many a lead story how Marberry on three pitched balls won a world series game. Incidentally it puzzled fans how a pitcher could receive credit for a game after having passed from the line-up.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED

Rifle Being Placed in Canoe Discharged—Was Filming Moose.

HALIFAX, N.S., Oct. 31.—"Ted" Norwood, only son of Rev. Dr. Robert Norwood, pastor of the Memorial church of St. Paul, Overbrook, Philadelphia and well known writer, was instantly killed Thursday near Caledonia, Queens County. He was with a party making moving pictures of moose in their native haunts and was killed when a rifle he was placing in a canoe accidentally discharged, the bullet piercing his heart.

Bowling

MERCANTILE LEAGUE.

In the Mercantile League played at Solomon's Alleys last night the Post Office won two out of three from the Dentists, after three hard fought games. Some great rolling was turned in by both teams last night and the scores were exceptionally good.

Ballard came through with the high three games when he rolled a great score of 698. In this sensational rolling he got the high single when he rolled 279 in his last game. Green had the next best score with 584 and Buchanan came through with 580.

Following are the scores:

Dentists—
Green	154	218	212	584

BANKERS LEAGUE

In the Bankers' League last night at Solomon's Alleys the Bank of Nova Scotia took two out of three from the George Street Branch of the Bank of Montreal, after three nice games, in which some good rolling was turned in.

Ackman was high man of the evening with a nice score of 536, while Cummer was next with 509. Cummer had the high single of 199.

Following are the scores:

Montreal, George Street—

FIVE TEAMS NOW ENTERED IN LADIES' MERCANTILE LEAGUE

Five teams have now been entered in the Ladies' Mercantile League which will be played at Solomon's Alleys. The teams entered so far are: C.P.C., Westclox, Quaker Oats, Richard Halls and a team composed of ladies from the various law offices in town. Then entry list will close Monday night and arrangements will be made for the playing of the games. Another team is needed and the Examiner Ladies are expected to enter. More teams can enter if they wish and there is no reason why a team should not be entered by the ladies from the Bell Telephone or from the Insurance offices of the cities. The Canadian Woollens have some good lady bowlers and they could put in a team that would make a good showing. A ladies' league like this will provide great fun for the girls and any of the young ladies who have been bowling lately will verify this.

BRINTON CARPET LEAGUE

The Brinton Carpet League opened last night at Solomon's Alleys with four team in action. Some good scores were turned in when the Dominions took two out of three from the Windsors and the Carltons took two out of three from the Ardebils.

The high three games was rolled by Leether with a score of 589, with Hellewille right in line wit h576 and Bishop with 564. It is interesting to note that three high scores were rolled by members of the same team, who rolled a grand total of 2132 for a four-man team, which is sure great rolling. Bishop had the high single of 264 and Cripps was only eight pins down with 252.

Following are the scores:

Dominions—
Bishop	150	264	150	564
Murray	123	137	143	403

A MARATHON SWIM STAR

Pictou Maiden Revels in Endurance Feats and Will Tackle English Channel in 1925.

EVA MORRISON.

Recently she was in the water seven hours in an effort to swim to the Boston Light and only gave up when the tide turned too strong against her.

At the age of 15 she plunged into the cold waters of Pictou as the ice was going out in the spring and rescued an aged citizen who had fallen off a wharf among the ice floes.

That same year she swam from the Canadian National Pier to the Pictou Light and back—five miles, a feat which nobody else has done. She is now training in Boston as a long distance swimmer and next year will try the English Channel swim.

TURNER CUP FINAL

Masseys and C.P.C. Juniors at King Edward Park Saturday.

The final for the Mayor Turner Charity Cup will be played on King Edward Park on Saturday afternoon The contesting teams will be the C.P.C. Juniors and the Masseys. Both teams are playing in their best form and the Masseys are the only team that have defeated the Packers this season. A great game is in store for the fans and as the proceeds will be equally divided between the C.A.S. and St. Vincent's Orphanage ther should be a record crowd. His Worship Mayor Turner will present the cup to the winning team from the band stand immediately after the game, which is called for 1.45 p.m. sharp.

Mr. J. L. Howarth will referee.

SATURDAY A BIG DAY ON THE GRIDIRON

(BY HENRY L. FARRELL

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—(United Press).—With all the interesting and exciting preliminary formalities ended last week, the football season will get into heavy action tomorrow with a schedule filled with a flock of banner attractions. With the exception of a very few games, where varsity teams are taking a rest before a severe test next week, every game on the schedule rates as a feature attraction. Hundreds of thousands of fans will fill to capacity all the great stadiums of the country.

Ranking as the feature game of the schedule because of its spectacular trimmings and its promise of hard, if not perfect football, is the Army-Yale game at New Haven. For the third time the game will fill the huge Yankee bowl to its capacity of 75,000. The demand for tickets was so great that all the tickets were sold more than two weeks ago and none were offered to the public.

There is something patriotic and inspiring about a drill of the West Point cadets that nothing else can equal in the way of a spectacle. It is a thrilling sight to see the cadets marching down Pennsylvania Avenue in the inaugural parades, because it is the finest drilled body of men in the United States, but it is something vastly more inspiring to sit in the towering stands and see the battalions drilling down on the green turf of the big Yale bowl. More spectators go to the Army-Yale game to see the cadets drill than to watch the football game.

The Army has a powerful team and Yale doesn't seem to be as strong as the champion team of 1923, making bright the prospects for an even and hard-fought battle.

From a pure football standpoint the Army-Yale game will not be the most important game of the day in the East. There are six other games that may have more of an important bearing upon the award of the Eastern championship.

Lafayette and Pennsylvania meet in their annual battle at Philadelphia and the East doesn't have to be told that it will be a football game.

Syracuse and Pittsburgh meet at Syracuse in another annual battle that always brings out some of the hardest football of the season.

Penn State goes to Annapolis for a return game with the Navy midshipmen and it is sure to be a hard-fought game even if the Navy did get away poorly.

Columbia, continuing on a schedule that was made for a team of war horses, meets Cornell at Ithaca. Since William showed how it can be done, Columbia will not be overawed by the past reputation of Cornell.

Dartmouth, always one of the best teams in the East, has a game against Brown. It was scheduled for the purpose of giving Dartmouth a breather after two successive battles with Yale and Harvard but it may not turn out to be that way.

Three other major teams of the East tried to ararnge for a let-up under the strain and prepare for hard games next week.

Princeton, making the same preparations for Harvard, has a harder game against Swathmore.

West Virgini, out of the Centre game last week and getting ready for Colgate next week, meets Bethany at Morgantown.

After visiting the West, seeing Western football and hearing Western football fans, it seems as waste of words to say that all the good games will not be played in the East tomorrow. From a Western angle it should be more to the point to say that a few good games are to be played in the East.

As a matter of fact the West tomorrow has all the bulk of the games with intersectional flavor and with neighborhood importance.

Two big intersectional games are on the card. Georgia Tech, one of the leading standard bearers of the South, comes to South Bend to meet Notre Dame and repay the visit that Notre Dame paid last year. Relations have always been so cordial between these two teams that they have become almost permanent fixtures on their schedules. There are some reasons why Notre Dame team should not be popular in Aalanta and it is a tribute to the sportsmanship that football develops not only among the players but among the spectaors that the relations of these two teams have always been so friendly.

Another intersectional contest that has become rather regular will be played in Detroit when Washington and Jefferson, one of the leading teams of the East, plays the University of Detroit.

Two very important games will feature the "Big Ten" competition. Michigan plays Minnesota at Minneapolis, and Illjnois meets Iowa at Urbana.

Chicago meets Purdue in another interesting game, if not as important.

Ohio State has a breather game against Wooster and Wisconsin getting ready for the Notre Dame game next week, has an off-day.

Nebraska's game against Missouri will feature the Missouri Valley schedule. Kansas plays Washington at St. Louis.

With Georgia Tech away from home fields the big Southern games will be between Vanderbilt and Auburn at Nashville and between Alabama and Mississippi at Montgomery.

California and Southern California will play the big game of the Pacific Coast conference at Berkeley. Stanford is idle.

SEES DOUBLE

Stribling's Conqueror Forced Into Retirement By Eye Trouble.

AD. STONE.

A peculiar eye ailment similar to that which kept George Sisler out of baseball for a year, forced Ad. Stone, star light heavyweight battler into temporary retirement.

Stone came out of his recent bout with Young Stribling, which he won by a neat margin, with a blurred vision. Various treatments failed to restore the sight to normalcy. Now he is seeing double. Stone was in line for a battle with Gene Tunney, the champion.

Kick-off 2.30 prompt, at the King Edward Park. Will all players please be on hand not later than 2.15.

BIG CROP IN QUEBEC

Best in Two Decades, Says Minister of Agriculture.

QUEBEC, Oct. 31.—According to Hon. J. E. Carron, Minister of Agriculture, the Province of Quebec this year has its best crop in the last 20 years, so far as the production is concerned, but it is too early yet to judge whether the prices will sustain sufficiently to estimate what will be the price. In the eastern section of the province, according to reports received by the Department of Agriculture, the crop is three times that of last year, and the other sections average twice that of 1923. Potatoes are very abundant, but unfortunately due to the fact that they cannot be exported to the United States farmers will be facing a considerable decrease in their price, as they will have to be sold exclusively here, the exportation to other countries being insignificant. Last year the crop was valued at $133,137,400, and judging by the estimates of the Minister of Agriculture, notwithstanding a decrease in prices, the value will certainly reach over $200,000,000.

A PIMPLY SKIN NEEDS SULPHUR

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out.

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.

BOMB DIDN'T GO OFF.

Faulty Construction Saved House of Carl Holtz From Being Blown To Ruin.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 31. —(Canadian Press). — An attempt was made to blow up the house of Carl Holtz, at La Salle, across the river, yesterday, and only the faulty construction of the bomb prevented the disaster. Twelve sticks of dynamite were found tied to a clock-work arrangement, which apparently had stopped. It is believed that bootleggers made the attempt, as Holtz has been exceedingly active against the smugglers of aliens and liquor.

THE NUT CRACKER BY JOE WILLIAMS

THE BALL PLAYERS SEE LONDON

McGRAW: Now you birds remembes, when in London, do as London does.

JENNINGS: I always laugh last anyway.

RUEL: There's something about the burg that reminds me of Walter Johnson.

KELLY: Dont be simple. This is fog, not smoke.

YOUNG (registering high scorn): What me mingle with the common people..... Mr. Rossmore Parkington..... San Antonio, Tex.! You shock me.

CVENGROS (reading sign on store front): "Framing Done Here." .....I didn't know Abe Attell had left America.

PICINICH: I'll bet they haven't got a clown in it good as Nick Altrock.

TERRY: I want to go to this here Eden Mussee place and see the wax dummies.

NEHF: Didn't you see enough of them things with the Phillies last summer?

JACKSON: They say No. to Downing street is the most famous address in the world.

FALK: Maybe so. But I'd rather have Gilda Gray's right now.

HOOPER (giving the statues in Trafalgar Square the lengthwise and crosswise): Who was this bird Nelson, Admiral Nelson, it says?

GROH: That's just another of them typographical errors you read about. It ought to be Battling Nelson.

FABER (looking up perplexedly from the London Times): Say, what do these guys mean by the peerage?

THURSTON: You ain't even third-witted. It's a place where suicides jump off.

STENGEL: What's the Knight of the Bath over here?

RICE: Saturday, just the same as in Des Moines or Baton Rouge.

SMITH WITH SENATORS.

Hooley Smith, of Granites, Has Signed With Ottawa.

TORONTO, October 31. — Reginald "Hooley" Smith, the Toronto Granite hockey star, will play at right wing for the Ottawa Senators, in the coming national hockey league season, Tommy Gorman, manager of the Ottawas, announced following a conference with Smith here this morning.

"Hooley has accepted a salary advance and signed a contract, Gorman stated. Smith will make his permanent residence at Ottawa very shortly.

Irish Songs at Royal To-night and To-morrow

Three Fine Irish Songs By Mr. James Browne—A Fine Programme.

At the Royal Theatre to-night in connection with the programme, including the excellent feature picture, "April Showers," Mr. James Browne will sing the following three songs, one of them before the feature picture starts: "River Shannon," "Mother Machree," and "Believe Me, of all those Endearing Young Charms." The Royal Theatre was packed last night to hear the songs, and see the programme. Be there to-night and you will enjoy it immensely.

VOL. LV., No. 104 — PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1924 — PRICE THREE CENTS

MACDONALD CABINET MEETS ON TUESDAY AND MAY RESIGN THEN

Reception of Committee Report on Zinovieff Letter Expected To Be Its Final Act—Personnel of Conservative Cabinet Arouses Speculation.

NEW LABOR LEADER MOOTED.

LONDON, Nov. 1. — (Canadian Press).—The events in the political world for next week as at present conceived are that King George will return to London on Monday from Sandringham Castle; that the MacDonald Cabinet will meet on Tuesday to receive the report of the committee appointed to examine the authenticity of the Zinovieff letter, and that Premier MacDonald then will present the resignation of his government to the King, who will summon Stanley Baldwin, leader of the Conservatives, to form a new Cabinet. The remainder of the week would then be employed by Mr. Baldwin in constructing a new Conservative Government.

There already is much speculation over the allocation of portfolios, and especially over the question whether Lord Curzon will return to the Foreign Office. According to some reports, Curzon will not come back to the office of his former labors, in which case it is possible the portfolio might be offered to J. Austen Chamberlain, or even to the former Liberal Foreign Secretary, Viscount Grey. The choice of Viscount Grey, though it is considered unlikely, would not, in the minds of some of the political leaders, be inappropriate, since the axiom held hera is "continuity in forign policy."

What of Coalitionists?

There is a deal of speculation also whether Mr. Baldwin would now accept the services of Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Birkenhead, who have been ostracized from association with a government under Conservative administration since their intimate association with former Premier Lloyd George. As Mr. Lloyd George is now definitely committed to the good or ill fortunes of the Liberal party and there no longer is any hope for the formation of a centre party, the belief prevails in some circles that Mr. Baldwin will take back these former Ministers into the Cabinet fold. Another source of speculation surrounds Sir Robert Horne for the post of Chancellor of the Exchequer. Some persons believe that he could be induced to abandon his commercial pursuits and return to politics.

In consequence of the large number of new men on the Conservative side in the new House of Commons, it is thought there is almost certain to be considerable new blood in the next Conservative Cabinet.

Criticize MacDonald.

One feature of the aftermath comment by the press on the outcome of the elections is the somewhat frank discussion of what many of the newspapers regard as Mr. MacDonald's mismanagement of the Zinovieff affair and of the events generally which led up to the present disaster to the two progressive parties, and there already is talk of a change in the leadership of the Labor party by which James H. Thomas, Secretary for the Colonies, or John Wheatley, Minister of health, might replace Mr. MacDonald and thus be in the running for the Premiership whenever Labor again approaches the goal of government.

The New Cabinet

At his country home to-day, Stanley Baldwin worked on the cabinet list, which he will submit to King George and to parliament when he succeeds Prime Minister MacDonald next week.

It is now practically certain that Labor's resignation will be submitted next Tuesday or Wednesday, after the cabinet hears its committee report on the matter of the Zinoviev letter.

Austin Chamberlain it is thought will have the foreign post, instead of Marquis Curzon, who formerly held it. Curzon may be Lord President of the Council, Nevell Chamberlain Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Sir Robert Horne, Sir Douglas Hogg Sir Samueli Hoare, Viscount Peel and Lord Birkenhead will have places in Baldwin's government.

Foreign secretaryship is Mr. Baldwin's biggest problem. He disagreed constantly with Marquis Curzon who occupied that post in his last cabinet and nobody wants Curzon to take up the quarrel with France where he left it. Austen Chamberlain is now mentioned for the job.

Majority Increasing

With eleven results to come, strength of political parties, following election stands; Conservatives 406; Labor 150; Liberals 37; Constitutionalists 7; others 4.

Present Conservative majority over all other parties combined therefore is 208.

Conservatives have had a net gain of 156 heads, Labor a net loss of 42 and the Liberals a net loss of 112.

His Final Speech

"We must be sports", declared J. H. Thomas, secretary for the colonies in what he described as his last speech as member of labor cabinet at a farewell dinner to Sir Charles Ferguson the new governor general of New Zealand. The verdict of the electors he said, having been given, must be accepted. Not only must the king's government be carried on but whatever political party was in power the one paramount consideration was prosperity and well being of the British Empire.

Thomas stated that although it might be considered a great experiment in constitutional government for working man to hold such high office as he had, he would hand over seals satisfied that he had endeavored to discharge the duties of his high office impartially.

MUSIC SCHOLARSHIP WON BY BLIND ARTIST

Gabriel A. Cusson is the winner of the Province of Quebec Scholarship for Music, known as the "Paris Prize," which entitles him to three years' study in Paris. The award of the scholarship to Cusson was not considered extraordinary by those who know his command of the piano, but it is remarkable that one who has been blind since birth should have qualified for the distinction. Cusson travelled alone under the care of the Canadian Pacific officials. He has taken residence with the Institute National for the Blind, where he will stay during his studies in Paris.

STARVING CREW ON RUM VESSEL

Without Food Seven Days They Forced Skipper To Surrender Boat.

WERE SHANGHAIED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1. — Four starving sailors who said they had been shanghaied into the rum row service, compelled a reluctant skipper to surrender to the coastguard cutter Gresham yesterday the natty two master Dorothy M. Smart of Newfoundland and her cargo of brandy.

Michael Gillan of Halifax was the skipper's name. His crew was composed of Louis Coccini, Mate and Albert Edouard Burgomaster, cook, both of New York; and Henry A. Gillis of Perth Amboy, N.J., and Carl Jaeger of Boston, seamen between the rum fleet and shore, the Gresham's searchlights Thursday night picked out the glimmering toplights of a craft that seemed abandoned. Her decks were deserted; her anchor chain slapped against the pitching bows; her rudder swung at the will of the waves; her masts were bare of sails.

Signs of Distress

A British ensign hung upside down from a lanyard—the sign of distress. Under it were strung corroborative signs—shirts and blankets, shredded and frayed.

The Gresham hailed the little two master and four despairing sailors answered. They announced that they were prisoners aboard; that they had been without food and water for seven days; that their skipper refused to put them ashore. They pleaded to Captain Ben Brockaway of the Gresham to heave them a line tow them inside the 3-mile limit, take possession of the Dorothy M. Smart, and feed and water her crew.

Captain Brockaway consented to tow the craft and thus the cutter and its prize arrived Friday at the Battery where it was boarded by agents of the department of justice who seized the twenty barrels of brandy in the vessel's hold and began an investigation of the Shanghai story.

Woke Up Amid Casks.

"We shipped out of New York 23 days ago," was Mate Coccini's tale. 'We were told we were signed up for the brick-carrier Enterprize, sailing between New York and Cape May. They took us out at night, in a speed boat, and when we woke up next morning we were on the Dorothy M. Smart, surrounded by casks of rum and in the midst of the rum fleet."

Orders to hoist sail for a voyage to Halifax, the sailors countered with a demand that they be set ashore at once, they said. The skipper refused, and so they drifted about for 22 days with sails furled. The anchor was lost and a week ago the food and water ran out, and distress signals were run up. The sailors said they might have taken command of the craft and sailed her into port, but the skipper warned them that that would be mutiny and piracy."

WANTS GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

KINGSTON, Ont., November 1.—The Kingston branch of the Moderation League, has passed a resolution favoring Government Control for the cities, especially those cities that gave a majori for it. It is opposed to any stricter prohibition legislature.

TROUBLE BREWS IN SPAIN WHEN RIVERA ABSENT

Agitation For Resumption of Civil Government—Premier In Morocco.

LOSSES ARE HEAVY.

Military Hospitals Crowded With Wounded In Riff Campaign—New Conscripts Called.

PORT VENDRES, France, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press).—The political situation in Spain has become somewhat complicated since the departure for Morocco of General Primo Rivers, the Premier, whose presence hitherto has caused a certain restraint to the turbulent spirits among the partisans of the civil regime.

Virtually all sections of the country are said to recognize that General Primo Rivera since his arrival at the scene of operations in Morocco, has been executing with rapidity the task which, it is generally conceded, should have been undertaken several years ago, namely, the abandonment of dozens of useless positions whose objects originally were to prevent raids by the followers of the bandit leader, Raisuli.

Cost Many Lives.

Although Raisuli for some time past has been on apparently friendly terms with Spain, the Moroccan positions, totalling several hundred, have been maintained at a heavy cost of lives and money. The Premier always favored their evacuation and took the first opportunity to put the plan into effect. The first result of tht evacuation scheme was a general rising of the tribesmen, many of whom were heretofore neutral. The reason was that they feared they would be massacred by the fanatic Riffians as soon as the Spaniards left the country.

In consequence of the native rising and the ensuing sharp fighting, the Spanish army in the field called for strong reinforcements. Tens of thousands of troops were hurriedly despatched from the peninsula. Many barracks were emptied, necessitating the calling up for a period of military training thousands who were hertofore exempted from active service owing to unfitness.

Political Unrest.

The losses during the fighting in the western section of the Spanish zone protectorate have been unusually heavy since the beginning of September. The military hospitals throughout Spain have been crowded with wounded, while many private buildings have been transformed into hospitals. Meanwhile, in and out of Spain, former political leaders have taken advantage of General Primo Rivera's absence from the country to begin an agitation. Copies of letters from several of these former leaders have been passed around among the public with the intention of creating an atmosphere favoring the resumption of a civil government.

B. C. LIQUOR UNDER NEW CONTROLLERS

Hugh Davidson Made Dictator Supplanting Old Commission.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 1. — The biggest shake-up in British Columbia liquor administration for a number of years came Friday when the British Columbia commissioners, appointed three years ago, were removed from office and control of the traffic placed in the hands of one man. The new commissioner is Hugh Davidson, an associate of A. C. Flumerfelt., Davidson was formerly a director of the International Coal and Coke Co. and representative of Cassidy's Limited. He is given full charge of administration of liquor and the suppression of the bootlegger.

Mr. Davidson will be the "dictator" of liquor control and has been placed in charge of the campaign against the bootlegger. The three men composing the board for the past three years have not been entirely removed from office, it is announced, but they will probably drop out as soon as the new commissioner is fully acquainted with t details.

Mr. Davidson is a well known business man.

In official circles the opinion seems to be gaining ground that there will be no changes whatever in the liquor control arrangements at this session of parliament, many members favoring giving Mr. Davidson a free hand to organize the department and awaiting another year at least before adopting "beer by the glass" or making any other change.

FAINT RUMBLES OF WAR ROLLED BACK BY LEAGUE'S INTERVENTION

Satisfactory and Amicable Settlement of Two Problems Threatening Peace of Europe.

FIVE-DAY SESSION.

Britain's Political Upheaval Raises Apprehension as to Effect on Protocol.

BRUSSELS, November 1.—When the members of the council of the League of Nations separated here last night, to meet in Rome on December 8th, they mad no effort to conceal their satisfaction that in the five days since they assembled in Brussels they had been able to settle two political problems which if left unsolved undoubtedly would have menaced international relations and perhaps provoked war.

Following the council's successful liquidation the other day of the Mosul dispute between Turkey and Great Britain the council last night, to the satisfaction of the delegates of the nations affected had adjusted the complicated and dangerous controversy between Turkey and Greece which arose out of the arrest and imprisonment of C...k residents in Constantinople.

Czecho-Slovakia's official notification to the council that Czecho-Slovokia had ratified the Geneva protocol for the pacific settlement of international disputes served to turn all minds to the future prospects of that protocol, which in practice requires ratification by the British parliament before any international conference on reduction in arms can be held.

Election Result.

In league circles there seems to be apprehension that Great Britain under a Conservative government would not approve the protocol without some amendments, and that this would entail either reconsideration of the document at the next regular assembly of the league or its re-examination at a special assembly; that in any case it would mean the postponement of the arms conference scheduled for June, 1925.

The correspondent finds in Brussels diplomatic circles considerable discussion of the so-called Japanese amendment to the protocol, which if finally adopted in that document, would mean that certain questions hitherto regarded as democratic in nature, could be aired, though not decided at a council of the league of nations.

Opinion Exaggerated.

Among the representatives of the governments which took a prominent part in shaping the protocol, the opinion is expressed that United States public opinion exaggerates the importance of the so-called Japanese clauses. Although it is generally admitted that immigration might figure as one of the problems which might find its way before the council, there apparently is an attempt being made to mitigate the importance of the entire matter involved.

Meantime the council of the league yesterday sticking to its role as an organism dedicated to mediation and conciliation, and scrupulously avoiding any super-state attitude, succeeded in regulating the Turco-Greek dispute by a diplomatic scolding, which however was almost a warning both to Turkey and to Greece.

DOUKHOBORS FOR FUNERAL.

GRAND FORKS, B.C., Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press).—The first contingent of Doukhobors from prairie provinces arrived Thursday night to attend the funeral of Peter Veregin on Sunday. M. J. Cazakoff, vice-president of the Doukhobor community, was in the party.

KINGSTON DOCTORS OUT OF LIQUOR BUSINESS

Several Will Refuse To Issue Any More Prescriptions.

KINGSTON, Nov. 1. — The Standard carried a story last night to the effect that several local doctors have refused to issue prescriptions for liquor, and it is shown that, since since the plebiscite vote, a number of other doctors have written the Government to the effect that at the end of the month (yesterday) they will decline to accept any more books of prescription blanks, and will thus also refuse to handle liquor.

SAYS HOAR TELLS OF DOUBLE MURDER

It is Reported That He Confessed to Killing Two Men Who Have Been Missing For a Number of Years.

LINDSAY, Oct. 31.—(Special).—A sensational story is being circulated in Midland and other points on Georgian Bay to the effect that John Hoar a well known figure on the upper waters, who died a few weeks ago, is reported to have made a death bed confession that he murdered two campanions and buried their bodies in a spot that is now being looked over for evidence that will substantiate the statement.

Some years ago Hoar and two other men, Lecroix and Marcholden were out on a fishing expedition among the islands of the bay. The two men disappeared, and according to Hoar's statement perished in a shipwreck. A few days ago Hoar died, and before passing away declared that he had murdered his two companions and buried their remains under a house now occupied by Mr. Wallace, lighthouse keeper, Hope Island. This week men have been engaged excavating at the point named to ascertain whether there is anything in the story or not. Hoar failed to give his reason for doing away with his companions.

Change Partridge Season By An Order In Council

After publishing the correct date for the closing of the partridge hunting season, The Examiner was "corrected" by a Justice of the Peace, who produced literature from the Crown Attorney's office to show that the season does not close until November 15.

For the information of all who contemplate shooting partridge, the Order-in-Council is reproduced below, showing that the open season closed last Saturday:

Copy of an Order-in-Council approved by His Honor the Lieutenant Governor, dated the 9th day of October, A.D., 1924:

Upon the recommendation of the Honorable the Minister of Mines, the Committee of Council advise that pursuant to Section 8, Clause (E) of the Ontario Game and Fisheries Act, the hunting, taking, killing or destroying of ruffed grouse (commonly known as partridge) be permitted from the 15th of October to the 25th of October, both days inclusive, for the current year, and that Section 10, Sub-section 1, Class (d) of the Ontario Game and Fisheries Act and subsequent regulations be amended to conform with the open season now recommended.

FATHER DELORME ACQUITTED IN THIRD TRIAL ON MURDER CHARGE

Jury Out Four Hours Returned Verdict of Not Guilty—Half Brother Was Slain on January 6, 1922—First Two Juries Disagreed.

THIRD TRIAL BEGAN OCTOBER 6.

MONTREAL, Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Rev. J. Adelard Delorme, Roman Catholic priest, who for nearly three years has been in the hands of the police, and who in that time has undergone three trials on the charge of murder of his half-brother Raoul on the night of January 6, 1922, was acquitted late Friday afternoon after the jury had deliberated for over four hours.

At 4.45 p.m. the jury returned to the court-room and pronounced their verdict of "not guilty." Father Delorme was immediately freed and left the building with Lucien Gendron, one of the defence counsel, by a door which had not been opened for half a century. In this way the liberated priest escaped the thousands who were waiting outside the court-room for a glimpse of him.

Two Disagreements.

This was the termination of the third trial in one of the most arresting cases in the annals of Montreal. Disagreement of the jury in the first two necessitated the third, which has resulted in Delorme's acquittal. Additional to these, Father Delorme in June, 1922, was found insane by a special jury of the Court of the King's Bench and was incarcerated in Beauport Asylum. Several months later, he was discharged from the asylum on certificate of the superintendent that he was sane and his first trial was begun on June 20, 1923. A second trial was necessitated by a disagreement of the jury, and this was begun February 25, 1924. The result of the second trial was the same as that of the preceding one, and Delorme was called upon to submit to a third, which opened October 6, before Mr. Justice Tessier.

Public Interest Waned.

Until the last two days there was little public interest in the third trial.

Yesterday the address of R. L. Calder, K.C., Crown prosecutor, and the charge of Mr. Justice Tessier to the jury occupied the morning session, following which the jury retired to consider their verdict.

The Judge's Charge.

The Judge spoke in such a low tone, that at times his words were inaudible to anyone but the jurors. It was evident that he felt his responsibility and position keenly and his voice broke towards the end, saying: "You must not take into consideration the fact that the accused is a priest."

"Priests, lawyers, judges, rich, poor, high, low—all are equal before this country's courts of justice; each must have equal consideration. You will be faithless to your consciences, to your oaths, to your duty, to your families and to society, if you do not weigh all the evidence you have heard impartially, and fairly and render a judgment in accordance with it, leaving aside all outside considerations of any kind. It is your duty to give the accused the benefit of every reasonable doubt, but the doubt must be reasonably strong, in connection with the essence of all the evidence."

His Lordship carefully recited all the salient facts that had been brought before the jury, pointing out the difference between circumstantial and direct evidence. Circumstantial evidence, he declared, was sufficient to convict—if it was strong enough. He said that the crime for which the accused was standing trial did not admit of a verdict of manslaughter. The accused was either guilty or innocent of murder.

"Kindly remember that this court has no interest in this case except to get from you an honest verdict. We want a verdict in accordance with the proof and the law—nothing else. After having carefully weighed everything that you have heard, we want from you a verdict which will never in the future weigh upon your consciences, one that will enable you to look every man in the face and feel that you have done your duty."

WINNIPEG MAYORALTY.

Col. R. H. Webb, Hotel Manager, Announces His Candidacy.

WINNIPEG, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Col. R. H. Webb, local hotel manager and executive member of the "On to the Bay" Association, yesterday announced his intention of contesting the Mayoralty in the civic elections to be held next month.

Mayor S. J. Farmer, who captured the office for Labour for the past two years, is regarded as the strongest and most logical candidate to be advanced by the Labour forces, although it has been hinted that he would decline to run again.

The nominating convention of the Indepedent Labour Party will be held ext Tuesday night.

GRAIN GRADES LOWER.

Commercial Standards Intended as an Aid to Producers.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press).—The Western Grain Standards Board, at their annual meeting concluded here Thursday, set the commercial grades of wheat as numbers four, five and six, which will be the basis upon which this year's crop will be marketed, lowering to some extent the standard of these grades as compared with last year.

Very careful consideration was given to the matter, but it has decided to be as lenient as possible in favor of the Western producer without damaging the reputation of Canadian wheat in so far as grading is concerned.

Whether this will be of direct benefit to the farmer remains to be seen, as the spreads may widen sufficiently to wipe out any advantage that may be secured in the lowering of the grades.

The grade number two feed was eliminated entirely.

AWARDED FIRST PLACE.

For the seventh consecutive year the BBuick Motor Co. have been awarded the first choice of space at the National Automobile Shows to be held in New York and Chicago in January, 1925. This award is made on the basis of the total amount of retail sales for the preceding year.

What more conclusive evidence could be produced to show that the Buick and McLaughlin-Buick continue to improve from year to year, adopting those advanced features that have been desirable and practicable, thus, proving that they have given the most value per dollar in the judgment of the buying public.

PLEA FOR ASQUITH.

Conservative Paper Urges That His Return Be Facilitated.

LONDON, Nov. 1.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—A Conservative evening newspaper submits a suggestion from a correspondent that in view of the failure of the Conservatives of Paisley to support H. H. Asquith, the Liberal leader, against "the common enemy," the party should remove the stain by offering the former liberal premier the opportunity of returning to parliament, "which it would be possible for a proud and sensitive man to accept."

Presumably the proposal means that the Conservatives should not oppose Mr. Asquith's return at the first favorable opportunity for him to offer himself at a by-election.

THE WEATHER.

The month of October, which has just passed into history, was one of the finest months ever seen in this section—bright, balmy days, little wind, and few showers. Of the 12 months of 1924, October should take the highest honors. The warmest day was the 3rd, with 74 degrees, and the temperature went below the freezing point on six days. Rainfall was only .55, falling on six days. This amount is a little more than ½ inch. I looked over weather books last night for about 30 years past, and the only month that could favorably compare with the late October was the same month of 1908. In October of that year the rainfall was only .27 of an inch, falling on but three days.—W.P.

STORM CLOUDS ON THE FRENCH POWER

Herriot's Radical Socialist Group May Be Swept Out of Office.

(By WEBB MILLER, United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Nov. 1. — Storm clouds threatening the political life of Eduoard Herriot's radical-Socialist government gathered on the horizon today in the wake of the storm that swept Ramsay MacDonald's socialist Labor Government from power across the channel.

A national Congress of the Socialist Party met at noon to decide whether to continue to support Herriot when the French Parliament reassembles next Tuesday. Two wings of the Socialist are dissatisfied with government's treatment of questions of amnesty, economic policies and the budget project.

Support of the Socialist deputies is necessary if Herriot is to remain in power and the former angered at his action regarding thousands of railwaymen who were discharged during the 1920 strike. Yesterday they held a stormy meeting in the Chamber and decided to demand that the Premier practictally annual decision and adopt the Socialist demand for re-employment of the strikers, without conditions.

The decision to be reached to-day or to-morrow is most important because it may lead directly to fall of the Herriot Government.

TEMPERANCE WORK IS DISAPPROVED

Strong Resentment in Lindsay Against Vigilence Committees.

LINDSAY, November 1. — Strong resentment is being manifested against the action of prohibitionists of town and county in organizing vigilance committees to prosecute and give evidence against those who violate the Ontario Temperance Act. Those who are opposed to the idea point to the fact that a serious cleavage now exists between sections of the people and the new move would only tend to aggravate the situation. It is also held that pot hunting of law breakers savors too much of the Klan idea, and might encourage reprisals on the part of those prosecuted.

Many prominent citizens—business and professional men—have openly voiced their disapproval of the organization of vigilance committees, and claim to scent danger if the plan of the temperance workers is carried out.

Friends of government control claim that the idea advanced by the temperance people of having one druggist handle the dispensing of liquor in a municipality is adopting the shop proposal as advocated by the opponents of the O.T.A.

TRUCK DERAILS TRAIN.

Two Occupants Of Truck Killed at Tulsa, Okla.

STROUD, Okla., November 1. — Two men were killed and three coaches of the Meteor, fast St. Louis San Francisco train en route from St. Louis to Oklahoma City, were derailed late on Friday, when the engine struck a ton truck at a street crossing here. Nine of the coaches overturned and after a delay of an hour and a half the train proceeded to Oklahoma City.

GERMANY INSTALLS A FORGERY FORCE

Wholesale Passport Forgeries in All Sections of Germany, Is Increasing.

BERLIN, Nov. 1. — (Canadian Press).—Because of the increasing evidences of wholesale passport forgeries in all sections of Germany, Berlin police headquarters has installed a special section which will devote itself exclusively to uncovering the sources of spurious documents which have been presented at the American Consulate the past few months. Further evidence that Communists have chiefly identified with the traffic in fake birth certificates and passports is said to have been discovered by the police. Max Kettner, former public school teacher, was arrested on evidence given by Max Kaczinski, who was taken at the United States Consulate on Wednesday on the allegation that his birth certificate and passport were forgeries.

Kettner, the police declare, has been identified as a go-between for the Communists in the sale of forged documents. Kaczinski, the police assert, charged that Kettner supplied him with German credentials which he presented at the United States Consulate, and which were later found to be forged.

CHANGING WEATHER.

Climate of England Has Grown Worse During Last Few Years.

LONDON, Nov. 1. — Englishmen of a scientific turn of mind, seeking explanation for the progressively worse climate of the last few years, are wondering if they can blame it on the shifting of the Gulf Stream, following disclosures that the water of the English Challen has fallen steadily in temperature since 1921.

Charts made from observations taken at Plymouth station of the Marine Biographical Association show that the waters of the channel reached their highest average temperature in 1921 and that the average has fallen a few degrees each year since.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

THE GUMPS—ON TO VICTORY!

RAILWAY MEN DEFEND WAGE

Average In Canada In 1923 Was $1.381—Reply To Demand For Freight Rate Cut.

FEWER EMPLOYEES.

OTTAWA, November 1 (Canadian Press). — That the wages of railway workers have not increased proportionately with the wages of other trades and occupations in Canada over the 1913 level, is the outstanding declaration in a memorandum just submitted to the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada by the Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad Employees.

The memorandum was occasioned by an application for the reduction of freight rates on railroads made to the Board by the Tudhope-Anderson Company, Ltd. ,of Winnipeg and Orillia, and the basis of which was the existing freight rates were excessive because of extravagantly high wages.

Wage Ratio Smaller.

The statement of refutation from Railroad Brotherhood declares that since 1913 the increase in railway freight rates has been considerably smaller than the average increase in prices of commodities carried by the railways, while the increase in the railwaymen's rates of pay has been much smaller than in the case of the wage rates in other occupations.

Quoting from official statistics, the memorandum points out that the ratio of salary and wages to operating expenses in 1913 was 63.5 per cent., in 1923 the ratio was 60 per cent.

It is contended that this is proof positive that actually wages and salaries form a smaller proportion of operating costs to-day that they did before the war. It is also declared that a smaller number of employees are operating a greater mileage of rilways than in1922, as compared with 1913, and consequently the average employee was giving proportionately greater service in 1922 than in 1923.

U.S. Wage Higher.

The Railway rotherhood quotes figures compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics showing that the average wages and salaries of all railway employees in 1923 was $1.381 per year, including presidents and other highly paid o cials.

The average wage for 1923 in the United States was $1,488.

The Brotherhood contends that when the proportion accounted for by high salaries is deducted from the ordinary employees is not left with yearly earnings sufficient to maintain a fair standard of living.

It is also pointed out that these earnings are obtained at a risk of life and limb far beyond that involved in other industries.

The memorandum states that in 1913 178,652 Canadian railway employees operated 29,304 miles of railway. In 1923 165,635 railway employees operated 39,7733 miles of railway. In ten years the number of employees was reduced by 13,017 and the number of miles of railway operated increased by 10,469.

STRUCK BY AUTO.

Toronto Boy Celebrating Hallowe'en Was Seriously Injured.

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press). — Celebrating Hallowe'en may cost the life of Jack Clarkson, aged 9 years, who lies in the Hospital for Sick Children in a serious condition with a fractured skull.

He was struck by an auto while running for apples thrown out to children by a storekeeper.

A TRIP THROUGH AIR.

WASHINGTON, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Transcontinental excursions in dirigibles of the type of the Shenandoah and ZR-3, with round trip tickets ranging in price from $1,000 to $5,000, may be one of the developments of the Shenandoah from Coast to Coast, according to Rear-Admiral William A. Moffatt, Chief o fthe Navy Air Service.

BUSH FIRES SPREAD.

Large Force of Men Out Trying to Check Blaze.

CARGILL, Ont., November 1 (Canadian Press). — The Greenock Swamp fire is gaining considerable headway due to the high wind prevailing last night and to-day.

Another large section of bush was swept by fire last night, and one of the big lumber camps owned by Cargill ,Limited ,is becoming more serious.

Residents in the vicinity of the fire-swept area are greatly alarmed, as further outbreaks are feared, when scores of farm buildings will be in danger.

Fire fighters are having considerable difficulty in checking the flames, especially during the present gale, and rain is the only thing that can help the situation.

LINDSAY MAN IS STILL AT LARGE

Circulars Have Been Distributed Through Country By Attorney Anderson.

LINDSAY, Nov. 1. — County Crown Attorney Anderson has sent out circulars to the police of the country regarding William J. Checkley, of this town, who is wanted in connection with the $5,000 burglary at the home of Lady Hughes some weeks ago. Checkley is a married man and is father of Harry Checkley, one of the youths at present in the county jail in connection with the theft. His wife and daughter also reside here, and are highly respected.

Checkley, Sr., the police assert, was the master mind behind the robbery. He it was who suggested that his son rob the house. The father afterwards carried off the loot. Officers of the Criminal Investigation Department have learned that Checkley had given a pair of field glasses, the property of Lady Hughes, to a woman with whom he was residing in Toronto. He has a criminal record, and is also wanted in Toronto in connection with the theft of machinery, patterns and tools from the Gray Foundry. He wears a Masonic button, and tries to secure favors thereon.

KEEP WHISKEY HERE.

Canadians Buy Whiskey To Ship and Drink It Instead.

WASHINGTON, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Canadians buy large quantities of whisky to export to the United States, but they don't send it across the border. Instead, they drink it themselves.

This is the explanation Wayne B. Wheeler, Anti-Saloon League attorney, gave to-day of the report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics that 293,475 gallons of whisky were taken into the United States from Canada last year.

The United States Government records show no permits for such importation ,he said ,and it would be a physical impossibility for smugglers to ship that quantity over the border.

Wheeler pointed out that under the Canadian laws, while there is a limit on the amount of liquor individuals can buy for their own consumption, there is not a limit on the purchases for exportation. He declared Canadians took advantage of this for their own personal use.

CHARGED WITH FORGERY.

Joseph Vien, of Ford, is Being Held in Windsor For Trial.

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Joseph Vien, of Ford, is held here on a charge of forgery presented by Lindsay A. Mason, accountant of the Royal Bank of Canada, who said Vien forged a cheque for $100. Vien was arrested at Hull, Que., Monday, and was arraigned in police court at Windsor yesterday. The trial was set for November 8.

SUMMER CAMP SITES.

Northern Ontario Section Will Be Broken Up For Tourists.

PORT ARTHUR, November 1. — F. H. Keeler, M.L.A., parliamentary secretary for Northern Ontario, announced Friday that the government had withdrawn from sale as timber or mining lands, a considerable area bordering on White Sand, Ross and Lynx Lakes, about ten miles west of Schreiber, and that the area would be surveyed for sale in small acreage as camp sites.

The Candaian Pacific Railway will do the advertising and purchasers will be required to spend a specified amount in the construction of camps in order to hold the property.

The idea is that they will be taken up by the people of the United States and Ontario to be used as summer camps and hunting lodges, thus promoting the tourist trade of the district.

DE VALERA SENTENCED.

Ulster Leader Given One Month in Prison in Belfast To-day.

DUBLIN, November 1. — Eamonn DeValera, who twice invaded Ulster in behalf of the Republican candidates for the British parliament, was sentenced at Belfast to-day to serve one month in prison for disobeying the order prohibiting his entry into the northern provinces.

De Valera's candidates were beaten, in some instances, the vote being 25 to 1 against the Republicans.

The erstwhile president of the Irish Republican "refused to recognize the authority of the court which sentenced him to-day, because it is the creature of a foriegn power not sanctioned by the Irish people."

WILL COST MORE.

To Become a British Subject in Canada.

OTTAWA, Nov. 1. — (Canadian Press).—It costs more to become a British subject in Canada than it used to. Fees payable upon issuing of a naturalization certificate have been increased by Order-in-Council. Fees that were $3 and $2 are now $5 on the recommendation of the Secretary of State.

HEALTH FABLES

BATH IN BED.

Do you know how to give an invalid a bath in bed?

Few people do, and yet the possibility of an emergency is always present as Mrs. Mann of Anytown learned when little Billy had been sick for several weeks.

Here are a few handy hints for such an occasion:

Be careful never to administer a bath until some time after a meal. Just before breakfast is considered a good time. Close the windows and be careful not to allow the patient to be chilled.

The necessary paraphernalia includes a washcloth for the face and another for the body, a face towel, a bath towel, a cake of soap and some warm water. Put one towel under the patient's head and another under his chin, when washing the face, thus keeping the bed dry.

Bring a tin foot-tub, filled with hot water. Wash one arm at a time, drying each before starting on the other. Do the same with the legs. Then the chest and abdomen and, turning the patient face down, wash the back. If the patient cannot turn over, try to get him in a sitting position, putting a towel at the base of the spine to keep sheets and mattress from getting wet. Rub with good brisk movement to aid circulation.

HAPPINESS.

Half he happiness of living
Comes from willing hearted giving;
Comes from sharing all our pleasures
From dividing all our treasures.
And the other half is loving
First the Lord, then all things living.
So each mortal should be sowing
Love seeds while his life is growing.
For all hapiness in living
Comes from loving and from giving.

—Alice Van Lee Carrick.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Sudden Death of Harry Skitch — Hydro Employee Hurt—George Dunn Funeral.

CAMPBELLFORD, November 1. —Mr. E. Skitch, Rear street, received word on Friday, that his brother, Mr. Harry Skitch of Port Hope, had died very suddenly. He had just celebrated his 75th birthday last week.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Pearse of Campbellford, who were spending the week end in Port Hope, saw him at church on Sunday and he seemed in the best of health.

Face and Hand Burned.

Mr. Ferguson of Hamilton, who has been in Campbellford for some time working with his brother installing machinery at the Hydro construction works at dam eight, had his face and hand badly burned on Friday. He was placing an electric switch and as he pressed it into place it exploded giving him a very bad burn. He and Mrs. Ferguson are living in part of Miss Edith Archer's house on Booth street.

Funeral on Friday.

The funeral of the late George Dunn on Friday was largely attended. Rev. J. P. McClennan of Norwood, a former pastor at Campbellford, assisted Rev. Hugh Shaw, at the services. Two hymns were sung, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," and "Peace, Perfect Peace," Mrs. Shaw playing.

Mr. Shaw gave a very impressive talk on the text, "Prepare to meet thy God."

Mr. Shaw was the minister who preached the funeral sermons for the three brothers, James, Alexander and George Dunn, all living at the time of their deaths on Front street, in Campbellford. The pallbearers were old friends of the late Mr.Dunn, Messrs. James Massie and Chas. Bedford of Campbellford, John Sweet of Sweet's Mills, Mr. Dulmadge, W. Pickens and Mr. Yule of Dartford.

Mr. Will Dunn, a nephew, of Niagara Falls, New York, attended the funeral, also other relatives from Sitrling and Springbrook.

The beautiful flowers showed the respect in which he was held:

Gates Apjar, from the Family.
Wreath—Mr. Robert Dunk and Family.
Sheaf—Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Kelley.
Sheaf—Mr. and Mrs. C. Bedford.
Sheaf—Mr. and Mrs. Bidgood.
Cross—Baptist Sunday School.
Wreath—Baptist Mission Circle.
Spray—Sunday School Class of Miss Nellie Dunn, a daughter of the deceased. Mrs. John Carter has been the teacher of this class while Miss Dunn has been unable to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Paling, of Hamilton, sent a beautiful sheaf.

Miss Dunn and Miss Nellie feel very grateful to the neighbors and friends for their kindness during their great bereavement, as well as during the long illness of Mr. Dunn. They appreciated very much all that was done.

Boy Hurt by a Car

Master "Toots" Irwin, Maple Street, while going across the bridge on Friday night, stepped to one side to let some boys who were dressed in Hallowe'en costumes pass and in doing so lost his balance at the place where there is a step by the walk. In falling a car passing struck him on the head, cutting his face and giving him some scratches and bruises but fortunately nothing serious. He was taken to the Doctor and cared for.

Hallowe'en Parade

The youngster and some grown-ups, had a big time on Friday night with their many different kinds of costumes and playing harmless tricks.

One of the favorite things the youngsters like to do is, calling at the houses for candies, apples, etc.

One bunch of several boys dressed as darkeys called at a house and the spokesman said, "Please Mrs. —— have you any candies?

Of course they all got some.

An old car fixed up and driven by a team of horses, with noisy boys filling the car, caused great merriment. They drove up and down the streets, filling the air with their music and jests having the good time that they all expect on Hallowe'en night.

Several Parties.

There were several Hallowe'en masquerade parties on Friday night. Mr. and Mrs. George Shaw, Havelock Road, entertained a large number of their friends.

Miss Ina Boyd, Margaret street, invited a number of her school friends to a masquerade party for Friday night and a merry time they had guessing one another and playing games.

The pupils of the High school, with teachers, enjoyed a dance in the Assembly Hall on Friday night.

Nora Cowell, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Cowell, had a very pretty masquerade party at her home on Friday night, when nineteen boys and girls were entertained. The invitations were given out in the shape of a pumpkin face design, with dark eyes, mouth and nose.

The house was beautifully decorated in Hallowe'en colors in crepe paper and each one of the small guests were dressed to represent something. They played games and at the close of the evening all enjoyed the dainty things to eat, that were set on a table decorated with orange and black runner and streamers from the light to the corners of the table.

Mrs. Roy Post, of Frankford, is visiting Mrs. George Shaw, on Havelock Road.

Dr. and Mrs. Watson and son Maynard motored to Kingston on Thursday. Maynard was taken to a specialist for his eyes. They returned on Friday night.

Messrs. Bert Bibby, John Jeffs, W. I. Stillman, C. E. Turner and John I. Adams, of the L.O.L., Campbellford, motored to Norwood on Thursday night and visited the L.O.L. there.

A MEXICAN PLOT TO KILL LEADER

Favourite Pastime of Natives Broken Up By Police.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press).—A plot to kill the incoming President of Mexico, General Plutarco Calles, has been discovered in Mexico City. This was confirmed by a statement issued by Salvator Oliveros, member of the City Council and a prominent Labor leaded.

"We found that more than 1,000 were implicated; the plan was to throw dynamite bombs at President Calles when he was taking the oath of office in the stadium on November 30th at midday."

Data in the department of police, according to Oliveros, give the names of the leaders in the plot and the location of the place where the dynamite bombs are being made.

PROVIDING EMPLOYMENT.

The City Council might do well to check up the unemployment situation, and in the light of that survey come to a final decision as to the advisability of commencing work upon the sewage disposal plant now, instead of waiting until next spring.

The City Engineer, as indeed it was his duty to do, has reported against winter work on the undertaking in view of the increased cost that would be entailed.

It was Mr. Parsons' obligation as a city official to emphasize this respect of the situation; it is the duty of the City Council to decide whether the providing of employment during the winter months will justify going ahead with the work at once even in the face of the Engineer's report.

It is realized that there will be a fairly large number of citizens without steady work this winter, and they will constitute a problem for the civic government.

If work can be provided for some of them on the sewage disposal job it is up to the members of the Council to weigh the matter carefully before deciding to postpone the work until next year.

THE Y.W.C.A. APPEAL.

The Young Women's Christian Association is appealing to the people of Peterborough for the sum of $1,500, needed to balance the budget.

The question is not whether Peterborough can afford to support this splendid institution, but rather can Peterborough afford not to do so?

The Y.W.C.A. is doing a work in this city that is only appreciated to the full by those who are benefitted by it, and those who have had an opportunity of coming closely into contact with the institution's activities.

It could be completely self-sustaining were some of its service to the public curtailed.

But the Examiner imagines the people of Peterborough would prefer to have that service increased rather than lessened, and that the small sum estimated as necessary will be readily forthcoming.

If it were for only one phase of the Y.W.C.A. work, providing a safe, cheery, comfortable home for the girl who is away from home, the Young Women's Christian Association would richly merit the support of the community.

When to that department is added all the other activities of the association the complete success of the appeal would seem to be assured.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES.

The latest report from the Annuities Branch of the Department of Labour, indicating that more people are buying Federal Government annuities, is gratifying in the indication that principles of thrift are not being abandoned altogether by Canadians.

The report shows that on September 6 there was the sum of $8,714,726 in the treasury, representing a little more than 7,000 contracts for the purchase of annuities.

Some of the latter are completely paid for, while others are being paid by instalments, the Government plan providing that the annuities may be obtained for cash or by the month.

It is singular that these guarantees against a destitute old age are not more in demand in this country.

An annuity, guaranteed by the Government, will do much to drive out all fear of what the later years may bring.

It is good business for the holder, as well as for the Government, inasmuch as it furnishes the former with an income so long as it is needed, while it provides the latter with another method of borrowing money.

The arrangement is business-like, fair to both sides, does not affect the tax rate, makes the holder independent for life and is without any hint of paternalism.

The advantages of Government annuities might well be kept before the people by means of Government advertising.

The merit of the plan should cause it to be more generally followed if Canadians generally were better acquainted with the details.

PETER VEREGIN.

Evidence points to the fact that Peter Veregin, leader of the Doukhobor colony in British Columbia, was the victim of a plot carried out by some of his enemies who resented his methods.

The death of Veregin removes one of the most striking personages in the history of Western development.

The people of Eastern Canada know very little about him, unfortunately.

To the majority of them the name "Doukhobor" suggests a race of people chiefly distinguished by a tendency to suddenly strip off all their clothes and start a pilgrimage across country.

As a matter of fact that conception is as far off the mark as possible, and Peter Veregin was the man who was responsible for the conditions that make the general idea about his people so erroneous.

Veregin did not, as many people seem to think, accompany the vanguard of the Doukhobors to Canada in 1898.

He was at that time serving a life sentence in Siberia for refusing to do military duty, but four years afterward was released on condition that he leave Russia.

When Veregin arrived in Canada his fellow-countrymen were in a deplorable condition, with food scarce and their cattle starving.

That was in 1902—yet so effective was the leadership of this remarkable man that his death leaves the Doukhobors a group of 14,000 contented people, rated by far the richest community in Canada, with hundreds of orchards in British Columbia and tens of thousands of acres of wheat lands, buildings, factories, lumber mills, stores.

No one man has made a more notable contribution towar dCanada's material wealth than this Doukhobor, known to his people as Little Father Veregin.

TOO MANY WHITE-COLLAR GRADUATES.

There is a growing conviction among those who are studying world industrial developments that in Canada our educational system is producing too many white-collar graduates and not turning out sufficient number of competent mechanics—if our manufacturing concerns are to hold a place in world markets, says the Financial Post.

In a recent address, C. H. Carlisle, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, predicted that Germany and France would soon be in a position to enter energetically into the world's markets, and as Ontario at present exports nearly 50 per cent. of her industrial production, particularly automobiles and accessories, he declared that we would have to face the problem of new competition from countries where wages were low and hours long.

To meet this situation requires efficiency on the part of both management and workers. Men who have made outstanding successes of their own lives—who have grown from poor boys into great leaders—almost invariably agree that boys should get to work at the calling for which they are suited and which they propose to follow, not later than fourteen years of age, because from fourteen to twenty are the years in which they benefit most from training. Many of the business and financial leaders in the United States and Europe are sending their own boys to work at the age of fourteen for this reason. Boys and girls will have a better opportunity to become prosperous and useful citizens if, after completing their public school education, at eleven or twelve, they can be sent to the technical schools to learn farming or a mechanical trade or given practical instruction in whatever calling they propose to follow, thus combining practical work with their further learning.

The cost of this enlarged technical education could be met, largely at least, by curtailing the heavy appropriations now made for higher education. The universities are doing a great work, but there is tremendous waste of material and energy. Too many mentally undersized boys and girls are sent there on whom an art education is not only wasted but proves an actual handicap in that it takes the very best years of their life and unfits them for the work in which their talent would give a reasonable opportunity for success.

THE RUSSIAN SITUATION.

If the Zinovieff letter is finally proven to be genuine—and the Foreign Office officials should certainly feel that the burden of the proof lies with them, and that public proof must be made—then it will be very difficult for any British Government to proceed with close relations with a junta of rulers who have been convicted of such gross and glaring bad faith. If the very promises they make to gain better relations are to be broken with brutal insolence within a few weeks of the making, how can one possibly bargain and agree with such people?

Still Great Britain has "recognized" Russia, and it seems most unlikely that this formal act will be withdrawn. Unreliable as the present Russian Ministers may be, it can do us no harm to have the ordinary facilities for discussing matters with them. Other Governments have been unreliable in the past, though usually with greater finesse and more successful concealment. They at least saved the faces of the Ministers doing business with them. But unreliability has never been regarded as a prohibitive bar to "recognition." There are people today who would think the Germans unreliable.

The French will now try to bargain for the payment of their debts. They will probably get the refusal of the "trick" loan proposition which captured—and probably wrought the ruin—of the MacDonald Ministry. That is, they will be told that if they will lend the Soviet Government a certain handsome sum, on the security of the Soviet's somewhat tarnished good faith, the Soviet Government will set aside a part of this loan to pay Russian debts in France. It is a net which was spread within the sight of the canny British bird in vain. We fancy that the French eagle will be just as cautious. That will leave France and Great Britain in very much the same relations to Russia which is probably what they both want.

* * * *

The Americans are farther away, have infinitely less at stake and can afford to take a detached and superior attitude. They will not touch "the unclean thing." Few of them expect to make much on Russian trade or exploitation anyway. But there are thousands of families in Great Britain which would have more to eat if satisfactory trade relations could be established with Russia—and, especially, if the Russians could be set on their feet and encouraged to produce in the old way. The position for any European nation is much different.

Then there is Germany. She recognized Russia long ago. She will in any case get the lion's share of Russian trade. But both the French and the British think it dangerous that she should be allowed to get a monopoly. Not only would this bring her material advantage—which few would grudge her—but it would put her in the commanding position of being Russia's only open friend in the world. This might give Germany a monopoly of Russia's political and military power which might be very disturbing, indeed.

We mention these facts because it is necessary to keep in mind that the whole of the Russian problem is not contained in the authenticity of such documents as the Zinovieff letter or the malodorous subject of Soviet bad faith. We on this Continent can safely indulge our disgust at Bolshevik tactics and keep our skirts clean from all contact with ill-smelling Moscow mire; but the Powers of the Old World are not so free and removed and happy. They cannot ignore a hundred and eighty million neighbors on their door-sills. —Montreal Star.

A THOUGHT.

THE THING THAT KILLS.

Familiarity does not always drive man and wife to the divorce court, but it frequently dulls the edge of admiration.

When a man takes his new wife on a long wedding trip, his beautiful goddess, after the return home, looks like just a woman, many times out of ten.

The over-long honeymoon is cruel to beauty and frequently a little rough on ugliness.

Niagara Falls was far enough in the earlier days, but listen to Elsie McCormack and her story of a million dollar honeymoon trip that took in the Seven Seas on a luxurious 98-foot yacht.

Miss McCormack says: "And now, after all this attempt to get well acquainted, the heroine of the expensive and spectacular wedding journey, covering a period of a year and a half, the little wife is suing her husband for a divorce on the grounds of neglect."

Feasting their eyes on each other for a day or two went well, but feeding on a romance that lasted eighteen months, gave both the indigestion of indifference.

Too much familiarity is a torment that always threatens the tyranny of indifference, and "indifference" is the thing that kills.

Under the tropical moon these rich romancers sailed for months with icebergs of indifference in their hearts. Constant companionship proved a matrimonial hazard with these two young colts. Hermit islands lost their charm. Petty irritations grew into that indescribable feeling sometimes called "I'm-sick-of-you."

The most precious possession that can come to a man's heart is the love and affection of a good woman; but after you have made Niagara Falls, it is a wise plan for a husband to start the fall ploughing or do something that will keep his familiar face out of the way of the kitchen work.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, November 1. — The export buyers wanted lower prices on Monday in keeping with their latest cable, and sellers were hard to deal with. The compromise finally left prices at about the level of the previous week, although advances of 10 to 15 cents a cwt. were registered in some cases. For three loads of extra choice heavy steers, $7.50 a cwt. was paid, but other loads were no better than $7.35, and the bulk only brought from $6.25 to $6.75 a cwt. Nearly 400 feeders were taken in a range from $5.50 to $6.40 was paid, for cows $4.75 to $5.75, and some bulls cost $3.90 to $4.75 a cwt.

There were few real choice butchers in the several shipments, and the top of $6.50 a cwt. was paid for a small number. Good butchers cost $6.00 to $6.25. The bulk of butchers came in the medium class, and brought $5.00 to $5.50. A load of finished Western steers, about 1200 pounds each, sold at $5.60. Light butchers 'heifers were had at $4.25, and common killers of the worst types were bought at $3.00 to $3.50 a cwt. Butchers' cows were well taken all week, with very little change in prices. Cows fitted for export were $5.00 and higher. Good cows sold from $4.00 to $4.50, medium cows averaged $3.50 ,and common cows were $2.75 to $3.00 a cwt.

Business in stockers and feeders was larger this week and specialists called prices somewhat firmer. Short keeps went around $6.00 and 1,000-pound feeders $5.00 to $5.25 a cwt. Breedy yearling stockers sold from $3.75 to $4.25.

Calves have had another firm week and prices have wavered very little. For the right kind of 200-pound calf 12 cents is being paid and close competitors are bringing 10 1-2 and 11 cents. Good medium calves are up to 9 1-2 cents, and heavy and common ones sell at 6 to 7 cents. Light runs of grassers have brought the prices for these up to $3.75 and $4.00 a cwt.

Ewe lambs of the right weight are selling at 12 cents a pound. A good many lambs now arriving have been kept back too long and are too weighty for the trade and are not wanted except at a discount of a dollar to one dollar and a half a cwt.

Handyweight sheep are quite steady at 6 1-2 cents to 7 1-2 cents, and yearlings 8 to 9 cents a pound.

Hogs are down 50 cents a cwt. from a week ago, and packers are still working for a lower level. The week-end quotation is $9.25 a cwt. fed, and $10.25 off cars.

THREE OPPORTUNITIES TO WIN $1,000

How Many Objects in This Picture Begin With the Letter "B"?

The above picture contains a number of objects beginning with the letter "B". Just take a good look at the picture—there are all sorts of things that begin with the letter "B"—like "boy", "buggy", "baby" and so forth. Nothing is hidden; you don't have to turn the picture upside down. Make a list of all the objects in the picture the names of which begin with the letter "B". Have the whole family join in—see who can find the most. Don't miss any. Fifty cash prizes will be awarded for the fifty best list of words submitted. The answer having the largest and nearest correct list of visible objects shown in this picture starting with the letter "B" will be awarded first prize; second best, second prize, and so forth.

Young and Old Join in the Fun

The Mail and Empire announces to-day another puzzle game in which all can participate —from the tiniest child to grandfather and grandmother. No object is so small but that the poorest eyesight can see it. It is a test of skill. Your ability to find "B" words determines the prize you win. Right after supper this evening, gather all the members of your family together; give each of them a pencil and a sheet of paper —and see who can find the most "B" Words. You will be surprised to find how large a list of words you can get with a few minutes' study. Sit down NOW and try it—Then, send in your list and try for the big prizes.

THE PRIZES

Winning Answers will receive the fifty cash prizes according to the table below:

OBSERVE THESE RULES

1. Any man, woman or child who lives in Canada, and is not a resident of Toronto, and who is not in the employ of The Mail and Empire, or a member of an employee's family, may submit an answer.

2. All answers must be mailed by November 22nd, 1924, and addressed to C. A. Montgomery, Puzzle Manager, Mail and Empire.

3. All lists of names should be written on one side of the paper only, and numbered consecutively, 1, 2, 3, etc. Write your full name and address in the upper right hand corner. If you desire to write anything else, use a separate sheet.

4. Only such words as appear in the English Dictionary will be counted. Do not use obsolete words. Where the plural is used, the singular cannot be counted, and vice versa.

5. Words of the same spelling can be used only once, even though used to designate different objects or articles, or parts of objects or articles. An object or article can be named only once.

6. Do not use hyphenated or compound words, or any words formed by the combination of two or more complete words, where each word in itself is an object.

7. The answer having the largest and nearest correct list of names of visible objects and articles shown in the picture that begin with the letter "B" will be awarded First Prize, etc. Neatness, style or handwriting have no bearing upon deciding the winners.

8. Any number of people may co-operate in answering the Puzzle, but only one prize will be awarded to any one household; nor will prizes be awarded to more than one of any group where two or more have been working together.

9. In the event of a tie for any prize offered, the full amount of such prize will be awarded to each tied participant.

10. Subscriptions (both new and renewal), payable in advance of $5.00 per year by mail or $6.00 per year delivered by carrier boy in Hamilton, will be accepted. However, in qualifying for the $1,000 Bonus Rewards, at least one new subscription must be sent in.

11. A new subscriber is anyone who has not been receiving The Mail and Empire since October 25th, 1924.

12. All answers will receive the same consideration regardless of whether or not a subscription to The Mail and Empire is sent in.

13. All new subscriptions will be carefully verified by the Puzzle Manager. Candidates marking old subscriptions as new will positively forfeit the credit of such subscriptions as qualifying for the Maximum Bonus Rewards.

14. Three prominent Toronto citizens having no connection with The Mail and Empire will be selected to act as Judges, to decide the winners, and participants agree to accept the decision of the Judges as final and conclusive.

15. The Judges will meet on December 3rd, and announcement of the Prize Winners and correct list of words will be published in The Mail and Empire as quickly thereafter as it is possible.

You Can Win $1,000
THERE ARE THREE $1,000 PRIZES

The "B" Word Picture Puzzle Game is a campaign to increase the popularity of The Mail and Empire. It costs nothing to take part and you do not have to send in a single subscription to win a prize. If your list of "B" Words is awarded FIRST, SECOND OR THIRD PRIZE by the Judges you will win $35; but if you would like to get more than $35 we make the following special offer whereby you can win bigger cash prizes by sending in ONE OR TWO subscriptions to The Mail and Empire.

HERE'S HOW: If your answer to the "B" Word Picture Puzzle wins FIRST, SECOND OR THIRD PRIZE and you have sent in one yearly subscription to The Mail and Empire at $5.00 by mail or $6.00 delivered by carrier boy in Hamilton, you will receive $500, instead of $35; fourth prize, $250; fifth prize, $150, and so forth. (See second column of figures in prize list.)

Or if your answer wins FIRST, SECOND OR THIRD PRIZE and you have sent in two yearly subscriptions to The Mail and Empire (one new and one renewal, or two new subscriptions), you will receive $1,000 in place of $35; fourth prize, $500; fifth prize, $300, and so forth. (See third column of figures in prize list.)

Now is that for a liberal offer? But, LOOK, there are three $1,000 prizes. Therefore, if you stand FIRST, SECOND OR THIRD, and have sent in two yearly subscriptions at $5.00 a year each by mail or $6.00 delivered by carrier boy in Hamilton (one new and one renewal, or two new), you will win $1,000. It takes but two yearly subscriptions at $5.00 a year each (one new and one renewal, or two new) to qualify for the big $1,000 rewards. Absolutely, that is the maximum. You can do this with little effort. Your own subscription can count. We can also take subscriptions to start on any future date. Just mark on your order when you want the paper to start and we will not commence delivery until you say.

THE MAIL AND EMPIRE TORONTO CANADA

LOCAL BAKERS RAISED PRICE OF BREAD 1 CENT

Raise in Price of Wheat Has Already Affected Price of Bread.

RED CLOVER HIGH.

First Grade Sweet Clover is Worth $5.00 Per Bushel.

The high price paid for wheat has already influenced the price of bread. Local bakers in several instances have added another cent to their loaves, and still further advances may be expected if a $5 price for a half-barrel of flour materializes by Christmas, as anticipated. In the district, for wheat which is of softer variety and goes into the making of pastry flour, the farmers are getting $1.35 per bushel.

Advances are recorded in the prices paid for barley and alsike. The first grade of sweet clover is coming in at $5 a bushel, and alfalfa is $7 a bushel. The latter is an exceptionally large crop this year. It is estimated that, for the first time, Canada is growing enough alfalfa to supply her domestic demands without importations. It's asserted also that Peel County alone this year has grown enough to supply the market. Red clover is very scarce. The crop was immature when the frost arrived to put the finishing touch on it. In some centers, the seed is selling at $18 a bushel.

Prices on hogs remain fairly stationary, with a slight advance during the past fortnight on the dressed varieties, and a decrease in quotations on live animals.

Dairy products are firm in price. Eggs are high. Fresh extras are asking 55 cents a dozen, fresh firsts are 50 cents and storage firsts 43c., in the majority of the stores. The highest quotation on butter is in the neighborhood of 40 cents.

The first of the season's oysters arrived this week, along with the shrimp in its pink dress. Oysters are 75 and 80 cents a pint, shrimps 40 cents. Packaged codfish, "desecrated" codfish, as the bride called it, is with us again also, at 25 cents a pound.

Peaches are on their last legs. A few remain, in small baskets, but grapes occupy the center of the picture just at presnt, at 40 and 45 cents a basket, with rumours of increased prices soon. The big, succulent honeydew melons are in the stores, at half a dollar apiece, and there are pomegranates, that remind one of the old school-reader story about Prosperine and the seeds she swallowed while on a visit to the lower regions. The number of seeds determined, the story said, the number of months in the year that the earth was covered with snow, while Prosperine visited King Pluto.

A few green gages for the rearguard of the plum season. Apples are fairly plentiful, and fairly moderate in price. The apple crop of Canada this year has been estimated at about two-thirds of normal and lighter than for three years back. Compared with twelve months ago, the present crop is short by nearly a million and a quarter barrels, and a million and three-quarters behind that of 1922. The small producing provinces of New Brunswick and Quebec show an increase in yield over a year ago, but the large districts in Nova Scotia, Ontario and British Columbia are down 30 per cent. Across the line, a big yield is expected, New York State harvesting more apples than all Canada. There is only a very slight decrease in the Eastern States, though the Northwest expects 20 per cent. les than in 1923. The Old Country crop, always a factor in prices on the British market early in the season, will be light.

In Ontario fall varieties, such as Snows and McIntosh, are much better than in 1923, but Spys, Baldwins and Ben Davis are down, almost a failure in some sections of Eastern Ontario. The crop is two weeks late, and, due to the wet season, much of the fruit is dirty. Aphids have done more damage than in many years past, excreting honey dew on the leaves, which has been followed by a sooty fungus. The Georgian Bay district expects a fair crop, but, speaking for the whole province, only 70 per cent of a full crop yield will be harvested. Gravensteins are turning out well in Nova Scotia, but Kings, Baldwinus, Starks, and Ben Davis are very light.

The exports of apples from Canada to Great Britain this year is considerably larger than a year ago, while the prices realized were very much greater. Ontario apples sold in Liverpool recently for $5.12 to $5.34 from $5.34 to $6.45; British Columbian apples brought up to $4.17 per box for McIntoshes, with Wealthies bringing up to $5.36. This years' prices are considerably higher than those of last season. On October 11th at Glasgow last year, the best B.C. McIntoshes were worth $4.36 per box, Nova Scotian Gravensteins were selling almost up to the present figure, but early Ontario fruit was around $4 to $5.

JAPAN'S UNEMPLOYMENT.

Japanese Government Seriously Considering Merger of Steel Plants.

WASHINGTON, October 31. — Facing a steady loss, the Japanese government is seriously considering a merger of all the steel plants in the country, government as well as private, according to advices to the department of commerce made public yesterday.

Such action will be the culmination of a move begun at the end of the war, when Japanese industry, especially steel and iron plants, were heavily expanded.

Proposed consolidation is expected to eliminate the unsound plants left as a result of the war boom and increase the general efficiency of the others.

POLICE CASE ADJOURNED.

Adjournment Till Monday Owing to Physical Condition of Alban Germain.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—(Canadian Press.—Enquiry under Mr. Justice Coderre into local police affairs was adjourned shortly after 11 o'clock this morning until Monday owing to the physical conditions of Alban Germain K.C., chief defense counsel for police force which has been charged with accepting bribes and other alleged irregularities. Mr. Germain's voice was so hoarse that he could hardly speak. The effect of his five hour address yesterday to the jury in the Delorme trial in which he was defending the accused priest.

EASILY FATIGUED AND DESPONDENT

A Condition Known as General Debility Due to Watery Blood.

General debility is a term used to describe a weak and run-down condition of the system. Debility may come from a number of causes. The after effects of acute illness, lack of nourishment due to poor digestion, overwork or worry, or anything that makes the blood thin, thereby preventing it from carrying nourishment and health to the tissues of the body. The symptoms of debility vary, but weakness is always present, often a tendency to be easily fatigued, spots passing before the eyes, weak back, dizziness, wakefulness caused by inability to stop thinking, and unrefreshing sleep.

Mr. Lorenza L. Gamache, Rockland, Ont., was a severe sufferer from this trouble, and tells how he found release. He says: "Two years ago I was in that condition which medical men call general debility. I made periodical visits to Montreal for fourteen months to undergo electric treatment. At the end of this time I was feeling well and thought with proper care I would continue in good health. But in the course of a month or so the symptoms came back more acute than ever. I lost appetite and could hardly sleep during the night, and what sleep I had was disturbed with nightmares. I had headaches and the least effort was telling on my nerves. I always felt pains somewhere, and had to lose much time. After suffering for three months, trying various things without good results, I was terribly depressed and disheartened. One day I met a friend who noted how pale and thin I was, and he so strongly recommended Dr. Williams" Pink Pills, that I determined to give them a fair trial. I got six boxes and began the treatment at once. After I had taken four boxes I began to notice an improvement in my health. I could sleep better, and I scarcely had a headache. Since that time my health has been steadily improving and now I feel just as well as ever. I have gained twenty pounds since I began the treatment. Now I would not be without Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the home, and strongly recommend them to all who suffer from a depressed system and the aches that follow."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SLEEPING SICKNESS PASSES

TOYKO, Nov. 1.—(United Press)—The epidemic of sleeping sickness which recently caused alarm through out Japan apparently has passed. The strange malady was worst in South Japan, where it took more than 3,000 lives. The advent of cool weather seems to have been fatal to the germ.

MILLBROOK FOWL SUPPER TUESDAY

Methodist Church Annual Event Proved a Big Success.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 1.—The annual fowl supper in connection with the Methodist Church was successfully carried through on Tuesday evening, the Ladies' Aid having the event under its auspices. The supper tables, laden with good things in addition to the generous helpings of fowl, hot potatoes and gravy, etc., were attractively decorated with marigolds and other fall flowers, hollowed-out pumpkins providing novel "jardiniers" for the gayly-colored bouquets. The color scheme was further carried out in the yellow shades on the lights, and in the Chinese lanterns and autumn leaves which adorned the walls and archways.

The tables, seating about one hundred at a time, were repeatedly filled, and it was 8.30 before the programme upstairs was begun, though the excellent radio selections, provided through the kindness of Mr. F. Smith, and the music furnished by the Millbrook Band, under the leadership of G. A. Duncan, kept the audience fully entertained until all those assisting down stairs were able to relinquish their duties and join those already gathered for the enjoyment of the evening together.

Rev. F. H. Howard filled the chair capably, and the following items composed the programme:

Radio selection—Band number.

Vocal solo—"I Love You," Mrs. W. R. Widdess, Peterboro, Miss Margaret Widdess being the accompanist. Encore—"Mighty lak' a Rose."

Reading — "Buying a Pair of Shoes," by Miss Irene Breckenridge, Peterboro. Encore—"When I was a Laddie."

Violin solo, by Mr. Stuart Widdess of Peterboro.

Address—Rev. R. T. Richards, of Cavanville.

Quartette—"Those Golden Bells," by Mrs. G. W. Sayles, Mrs. Irwin Hatherly, Messrs. W. H. Coombe and F. N. Alcorn. Encore—"Just a Song at Twilight."

Reading—"Ojusta" (Pauline Johnston), by Miss I. Breckenridge. Encore—"Specially Jim."

Solo—"Shades of Evening," by Mrs. W. R. Widdess.

Band selection.

Address—Rev. G. S. Gervan.

Solo—"The Sunset of the Year," by Mrs. Widdess.

Reading—"The Dutch Lady at the Theatre," by Miss Breckenridge. Encore — "Good Mornin', Miss Katie."

Violin solo, Mr. S. Widdess.

Address—A. J. Fallis, M.P.P.

Closing remarks by Rev. Mr. Howard.

Band selection and National Anthem.

The total receipts were in the neighborhood of $250. G. W. Sayles acted as auctioneer of the cakes, pies etc., left from the supper.

The foundation for the new Community Hall at Ida is now completed. The building is on the hill directly opposite St. John's Church, the A.Y.P.A. of that community having the raising of the necessary funds under its charge.

The original plan was to have a frame building, but there is under consideration the idea of having it of cement blocks instead, though whether this will be done is still to be definitely decided.

Most of the work is being done by volunteer labor, and it is scarcely likely that it will be possible to complete the hall this season. The time of its completion is eagerly looked forward to as such a building is a community necessity.

Miss Edith Sing, of Port Hope, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Hugh Kennedy, "Highland Farm."

Mrs. Russell Howe and baby girl, Peggy, are spending the week-end with friends in Lindsay.

Mrs. Earl Doxsee and baby daughter, Betty, left for Kirkland Lake on Thursday, to join Mr. Doxsee, who has secured a position in that town.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard Strong and daughter, Miss Verna, of Peterboro, were in town on Tuesday and attended the fowl dinner in the Methodist Church.

Mrs. H. A. Elson, who has been in the West for the past three months, visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. Sled, of Regina, returned home on Thursday.

Misses Alice and Lottie Vance are spending a few days in Millbrook, returning here on Thursday. They intend being in Toronto for the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. P. Stinson motored to Orono recently and were guests of Rev. S. T. and Mrs. Tucker at the parsonage, attending the play, "Safety First," put on by the Enniskillen Dramatic Club the same evening.

Miss Gladys and Mr. Ewart Tucker, of Orono, were guests of Ernest and Jean Burnham for the week-end, returning home on Sunday. Anniversary services were held at Liskeard, an appointment on Rev. Mr. Tucker's circuit, on Sunday afternoon and evening, with the annual fowl supper Monday night. Over $400 was received as a thank-offering on Sunday, and the crowd on Monday evening was a record one.

Mrs. E. J. Burnham, of Peterboro, was the guest of Mrs. E. S. Burnham for a brief visit this week, returning home on Thursday.

Mrs. Murray, of Lindsay, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Harry Nattrass, for the past two weeks, left for home on Thursday.

Mrs. V. Lambert and daughter, Lenore, are guests of friends in Oshawa.

U. S. CALLED ON CANADIAN UNIONS

In Raising Funds Lafollette Campaign Called on Canada.

WASHINGTON, October 31 (Canadian Press). — In the campaign fund investigation being conducted by a special Senate Committee, W. L. Bourland, counsel for the Republican National Committee, sought to-day to bring out the testimony from Secretary Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labour, that in raising funds for the Lafollette campaign, Canadian unions were called on to help as well as unions in the United States.

Mr. Bourlad endeavoured to show that appeals went out to about 32,000 unions, and this number included 2,000 unions in Canada.

Mr. Morrison insisted that if any requests for contributions went to Canadian unions, it was a mistake.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The Fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm, the next cold and wet, and unless the mother is on her guard, the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent colds, or if it does come on suddenly their prompt use will relieve the baby. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CARS CRASHED ON STREET

Keene Man Has His Automobile Badly Smashed When Truck Struck It.

While driving his car on King street yesterday evening, Fred Whalen, of Keene, stopped to allow a street car to pass and was struck by a motor truck laden with lumber and driven by John Thompson, 591 Sherbrooke street. The damage to the automobile consisted of three flat tires, the left rear wheel off and broken, the fender damaged and the radiator bent and leaking. The accident was attended by Constable Gordon T. Puffer, and a settlement was made.

DELORA DRAMATIC CLUB MET MONDAY

Smoker Will Be Held by the Society in the Near Future.

MARMORA, Nov. 1.—The annual meeting of the Deloro Social and Dramatic Society is fixed for Monday eevning, November 3. Following general business and the election of officers for the ensuing year, a smoker will be held. A good programme is promised, for which the best of local talent has been secured. There is also the possibility of an entertainer being engaged from Toronto.

Messrs. F. A. Bapty, F. A. Elliott, J. Callery, J. Quinn and Dr. H. Crawford attended the Kingston-Oakville ball game in Cobourg on Wednesday.

"Because I Love You", a southern romantic drama in four acts written by John A. Fraser was presented in Marmora Town Hall on Wednesday evening by the Amateur Dramatic Society of St. Carthagh's Church, Tweed. Following is the cast of characters:

Jean Courtleigh—Mrs. J. Black.
Ginger—Miss Grace LaFontaine.
Nance Tyson—Mis Analena Courneyea.
Prudence Freeheart—Miss Irene Gabourie.
Horace Verner—Mr. Felix Rashotte.
Dick Pots—Mr. Mike Baker.
Ira Courtleigh—Mr. Stafford Cassidy.
Buck Tyson—Mr. Jack Brennan.
Elmer Van Sittert—Mr. Ovilia LaFontaine.
Major Duffy—Mr. James Black.
Squire Ripling—Mr. E. Meraw.
Lige—Mr. S. Trudeau.

A very pleasing speciality preceded the play, five young ladies and five young gentlemen in dainty costume performing a Spanish Minuet. From start to finish the play proved most entertaining. No one could be more naturally surly than Mr. J. Brennan in his role of Buck Tyson, the gypsy tinker. His philosolphical remarks and amusing antics provoked the greatest merriment. Miss G. La Fontaine as Ginger the gypsy waif, played her part with ease and naturalness. As Jean Courtleigh, the wilful, wayward and wealthy lady of the drama. Mrs. J. Black displayed striking dramatic powers. Her reciting of one of Drummond's gems, between the second and third acts, was elocution of the first order. Mr. Felix Rashotte very creditably impersonated the character of Horace Verner, the artist hero. Mr. O. La Fontaine as Elmer Van Titter, the anglomaniac New Yorker made a very good hit. The part of Nance Tyson, the tinker's wife, was faithfully portrayed by Miss A. Courneyea. Mr. F. Cassidy, as Ira Courtleight, Jean's guardian did well with a hard part. All on the cast showed the result of efficient training in their high standard of acting. The tableau towards the close in which Dick Potts, the artist's chum (played by Mr. M. Baker) plays the mandolin and serenades Ginger with the song "Give Me Your Smile" was heartily applauded. Two other specialities were given. Between the the first and second acts (five young ladies in Spanish costumes, with tambourines rendered a pretty chorus. Between the third and fourth acts, Miss H. Sampson furnished a vocal solo with ability. Mrs. C. M. Flood acted as pianist.

After the play was concluded, seats were cleared aawy for the dance arranged to follow.

The attendance was large and will be so again, if in the future this Amateur Dramatic Club decides to favour Marmora with another visit.

BALDWIN'S RETURN WILL HELP CANADA

Economic Results To Australia and South Africa Will Also Be Outcome.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3. — (Canadian Press.)—It is considered certain here that the return of the Baldwin government with a majority sufficient to bring its own policy into effect, will be attended by economic results of much importance to Canada, Australia and British South Africa as well as other portions of empire. For one thing it will undoubtedly mean return of McKenna duties which places tariff of 33 1-3 per cent on automobiles, musical instruments and picture films, when imported into Great Britain from foreign countries, but which granted preference of one third if this goods were from Dominions.

At first exports of automobiles, musical instruments and picture films, when imported into Great Britain from foreign countries, but which granted preference of one-third if this goods were from Dominions.

At first exports of automobiles to Britain did not seem to be much affected by repeal but subsequent trade relations show otherwise.

Canada Australia and British South Africa are keenly interested in prospective adoption by British parliament of preferential trade proposals of Baldwin Government made at last imperial conference and which were subsequently rejected by British House of Commons. Canada would benefit greatly through prererence on canned salmon and lobster apples, honey and probably fruit juices and on preserved fruit.

LONDON MAY HAVE A CHEAPER THEATRE

LONDON, Nov. 1.— Aplayhouse where seats may be bought for six pence and a shilling is to be opened shortly through the efforts of a band of parliamentarians, including Mr. Lloyd George, Lady Astor and Mr. Stanley Baldwin, who have started a campaign to raise £1,500 necessary to open the house. Only popular dramas and comedies will be presented.

SHIP CAIRNDHU WILL DOCK ON NOVEMBER 10TH

Many Wholesale Dealers Are Anxious To See Boat Safely Landed.

LADEN WITH FRUIT.

If Boat Is Not Here Before November 15 It Will Cost Merchants More.

The "Cairn-dhu" comes into port at Montreal on the 10th of November. The announcement of the arrival of the ship will probably not mean much to the average reader of shipping news and views, but it means a lot to Canadian wholesalers who have goods aboard the vessel with the Scotch name. Should she slip up on her schedule and not arrive until after the 15th of November, some merchants would be out money on the transaction.

On the 15th of November, the new trade agreement between Australia and Canada goes into effect, allowing dried fruits from Australia to come in free, and the general rate to be raised from two-third cents per pound to three cents per pound, thus affecting the prices of California dried fruits and those imported from Greece and Spain. This is along the line of British preferential tariffs, but many wholesalers are of the opinion that the proposed changes will not have the effect desired. They express surprise that Australia should be able to compete in quantity or quality with long-established dried fruit producing centres in other countries, and claim that the general public will have to pay more for their fruits, citing as factors that will work against the Australian imports the long transportation and the fact that the fruit is not seasonable at the time of the big Canadian demand—Christmas. At a recent convention of the Bread and Cake Makers' Association of Canada, unanimous disapproval of the new arrangement was voiced, the bakers being of the opinion that the Australian supply will be inadequate for Canadian demands.

The "Cairn-dhu," one of the freighter boats which cruises about the Mediterranean and picks up a cargo for North American ports, is expected to arrive on November 10th and the wholesalers of the Dominion, with goods aboard, petitioned the Government to allow the new rates to lie inactive until November 15th, so that they might have an opportunity to dispose of their fruit at old prices. So the safe arrival of this ship means a good deal to Canadian housewives as well as to purveyors of dried fruits.

Questioned as to whether the increase of 2 and one-third cents on the pound would be passed along entirely to the consumer of dried fruits imported from other countries than Australia, local wholesalers were evasive in their replies. If Australia can produce the goods to supply the Dominion's wants, all will be well. If not, the consumer will have to pay more for his dried fruits than heretofore.

In return for this agreement, Australia will give a preference to Canadian canned fish, especially canned salmon. Formerly a buyer in Alaskan markets, Australia will now purchase Canadian salmon in larger quantities. British Columbia sockeye is already a popular food on Antipodean tables. During the fiscal year ending March 31st last, Canada sold to Australia canned fish to the value of $845,901.

Wholesale fruit and vegetable dealers report a plentiful supply of good quality potatoes. Apples are also plentiful, but much of them are of inferior quality. The Flemish Beauty pear, a fruit that requires much care to offset scabby conditions in growth, is the latest arrival, and there are plenty of grapes, Concord, Red and Black Roger, and the green Niagara. Wholesale prices on carload lots of grapes are up this week over last week's quotations, a change that will probably reflect itself in higher retail prices.

Oranges are higher in price. In the stores, some of the big golden balls are a dollar a dozen. Instead of hundreds of carloads out of California, only fifty a week average are coming now, until the shipping of the new crop, about the first of December. The Elder Dempster Steamship Line has for some time past been endeavoring to work up a trade between Montreal and Africa, in oranges, but the venture has been found impractical. One factor which mitigates against its success is that oranges from the "Dark Continent" are available only from June to September, whereas those from California, Florida and the West Indies constitute a more or less even flow the year round. However, one feature favoring the South African fruit is the fact that they would be available in early summer, just when the California product is shortest.

New arrivals in the wholesale lines for the Christmas trade are the Hallowi dates, layer and bag dates, the new peels and the new almonds from Spain and filberts from Sicily.

With regard to supplies of canned vegetables, orders placed by wholesalers in the beginning of the season will be filled to seventy-five per cent. capacity in the standard corn lines, and about sixty per cent. in the choice grades, while tomatoes will have seventy-five per cent. of a pack and peas about fifty per cent.

Matches and soap are on the upgrades. One line of laundry soap has already been advanced by 40 cents on the case, and a generally-used type of match is up $3 on the case, following a strike in the factories.

Teas and coffees also show bullish tendencies. Some of the former have increased in price recently by six cents on the pound. A general shortness of supplies in world markets and a short crop in Brazil due to drouth are factors in the coffee situation, while in the tea markets, the uncertainty in Chinese affairs and a combined shortage in the Indian and Ceylon crops of about 50,000,000 pounds, along with increased tea consumption all over the world, are responsible for higher prices. Interrogated as to the reason for the waning popularity of green teas, once general favorites, one merchant is of the opinion that "the people want a stronger drink," and turn to the black brew, in consequence. The ripples of the sea of prohibition lap the shores of Asiatic tea markets.

HYGIENE COUNCIL TO HAVE LECTURES

Local Branch Is Arranging For a Series of Addresses This Winter.

It will no doubt be of interest to learn that the Peterboro branch of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council is arranging for a series of lectures, or addresses, on the work and objects, and topics allied, during the coming autumn and winter. A panel of speakers, all of the number eminent in the professions and who will present the subjects in interesting and informative form.

The first of these lectures in Peterboro will be presented under the auspices of the local branch, on the evening of Friday, November 14th, the speaker being Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell, president of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council. The speaker needs no introduction to a Canadian audience, being conspicuously in the public eye for many years as an eminent member of the bench. The subject to be treated and the place in which the lecture will be given will be announced further on. It will be a gratifying opportunity for our citizens to hear such an able exponent defining for us the conditions and pointing out the way we must tread to put an end to conditions detrimental to the daily lives of our people.

In addition, the local branch has the opportunity of having the services of a very gifted and admirable English woman, Mrs. Olive Neville Rolfe, O.B.E., general secretary of the British National Council for Combating Venereal Diseases. Mrs. Rolfe will be in Canada from November 22nd until December 8th, and the Peterboro branch has been fortunate enough to secure that Peterboro will be one of the several places at which she will give addresses. The date will be, we are assured, on December 4th, but that will be confirmed. Mrs. Rolfe is a distinguished woman, one of the founders of the British Eugenics Education Society with Sir Francis Galton, and has a reputation for taking a most active part in all the most important movements in Great Britain. Incidentally she has been the mainstay of the work of venereal disease control in Great Britain ever since the sitting of the Royal Commission under Lord Sydenham. It is seldom that we have an opportunity of listening to one who may speak with such authority and experience in the work, and advantage should be taken to attend the lecture. It is assured that the G.W.V.A. Hall will be secured for this event, as it has for the address to be given by Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell.

UNUSUAL CARE IS TAKEN ON C.N.R.

Robbers Who Planned Hold-Up at Callander Were Fooled.

TORONTO, October 31 (Canadian Press). — With the recent hold-up of a mail car at Moose Jaw in mind and acting upon a tip from this city, unusual precautions were take to guard the Canadian National Railways train which arrived in Toronto yesterday morning, according to information which reached the postal authorities at North Bay.

Just before the train left on Wednesday night, a hold-up had been arranged to take place at Callander, the first station this side of North Bay.

District Superintendent J. C. Ross, of North Bay, issued instructions that when the train stopped at Callander no attempt was made to handle any mail to or from this point.

Orders were given that the doors of the mail car were not to be opened under any circumstances until after this station had been passed.

The train arrived and departed from Callander and reached Toronto without anything unusual occurring.

The amount of money carried on the two trains is not known.

PREPARES FOR CHURCH UNION

Work of Organizing Committees For Vote Progressing Favorably.

LOCAL COMMITTEES.

The work of organizing committees in various local Presbyterian congregations, to prepare for the vote on Church Union, is progressing most favourably, according to members of the Peterboro Branch of the Presbyterian Church Association. Small committees have been organized in several congregations and it is intended to arrange for larger committees in due course. Similar work is to be undertaken shortly in connection with the smaller congregations of the Presbytery, several of which already have committees at work.

Representaives of the Peterboro Branch attended the recent meeting in St. Andrews Church, Lindsay, at which several congregations were represented, there being an excellent attendance and a strong feeling manifest. Rev. Mr. McGillivray and Rev. Lr. Horne of Toronto were the main speakers.

Mr. McGillivray emphasized the point that the Church Union movement has been conducted almost exclusively in the Higher Courts of the Church and that every effort has been made during the past nine years, to carry the movement through without giving the people a chance to express themselves.

In reply to the charge that General Assembly has repeatedly supported the Church Union, he showed that if all the members of the General Assembly and all the ministers of the denomination combined were included, they would represent less than 1% of the Presbyterians in Canada. He asked if it was fair that 1% of the members should try to dominate and direct a situation of such grave importance and advised those present not to let this little minority dictate to them. He stated that from the start the movement has been largely in the hands of college professors and officials of the church. Presbyterianism, he stated, stands for government by the people. The bigger the church, he said, the greater is the danger of ecclesiastical domination and of attempts at political dictation. As an indication of the manner in which coercie measures have ben used, he pointed out that at the General Assembly, when this subject was up for discussion, the Assembly refused to let a vote be taken by ballot. This meant, that some ministers who would have liked to have voted against Church Union knew that if they did so, they would immediately be spotted by the higher officials of the church and their position in various ways be made uncomfortable for them. The General Assembly refused to let the people vote on the subject and to let the courts decide its legality. The time has come, he said, when they have no more power to prevent people expressing themselves and it is for this reason the people are organizing for that purpose. In many cases they are ignoring their ministers who, hitherto, have been endeaouring to direct the situation.

The St. Andrews Church, Lindsay, with a membership of 650, 435 signed cards last summer, expressing their determination not to enter the United Church.

Word received by the Peterboro Branch of the Presbyterian Church Association from Rev. J. R. Horne, one of the provincial organizers, states that an extremely successful convocation of Presbyterians, was held in tS. Catharines, October 27, at which there was an attendance of over 400, representing sixteen different congregations. Mr. G. Tower Ferguson of Toronto and Rev. Dr. Inkster, of Knox Church, Toronto, were two of the principal speakers. A central advisory committee was appointed and before the people left, three meetings had been arranged for surrounding congregations for the conduct of which the central committee assumed full charge.

In Peterboro, requests are already being received by the local central committee for petition forms on which to secure signatures for presentation to the different sessions asking for the holding of congregational votes. These forms will be ready soon for distribution. They are being issued through the central organization in Toronto.

CHEERFULNESS.

If we noticed little pleasures
As we notice little pains;
If we quite forgot our losses,
And remembered all our gains;
If we looked for people's virtues,
And their faults refused to see,
What a comfortable, happy,
Cheerful place this world would be.

GIRLS TURN DOWN THE GAY SAILORS

Iceland Maidens Do Not Take To American Tars Who Visit Them.

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, November 1. — The girls of Iceland may be separated from the rest of the world by hundreds of miles of Arctic sea, but fashion penetrate here almost as rapidly as news of the outside world. When Paris or London decrees a new style, whether in hairdressing, gowns or the handling of a feminine cigarette, it is sure to be adopted in Reykjavik before many weeks have passed. The old national costume, unchanged for hundreds of years, is still worn almost exclusively in the rural districts, but in the cities the girl who aspires to social standing keeps abreast of the times, and sometimes even a bit ahead of them

American sailors who visited Iceland in connection with the round-the-world airplane flight, were more than surprised when they found bobbed hair and other feminine foibles usually associated with Paris, London and New York. There was the customary display of silken hose, 'slinker' gowns, unmarked waistlines and wrap-a-round skirts, with a faint aroma of black narcissus or other Parisian perfumes hovering about the dainty persons of the wearers.

One difference the American sailors found, and it caused them to grin, rather wistfully. The Iceland girls did not flirt.

AUTO MAKERS MAY BUYY WHOLE CITY

Detroit Manufacturers Asked To Purchase Virginia City.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 1. — Henry Ford has been asked to buy Williamsburg, ancient capital of Virginia, and restore to it the quaint and picturesque beauty of the Revolutionary period. It then would be preserved as a living lesson in American history for future generations.

The suggestion, which Mr. Ford is said to be considering, was advanced by Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, of William and Mary College, through William Ford, brother of the automobile manufacturer.

Under the plan Mr. Ford would purchase a large part of the present city of Williamsburg, at an estimated cost of between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. A Colonial Holding Corporation then would be formed, according to Dr. Goodwin's suggestion, to which the city would be turned over for all time. The task of re-creating the colonial seat of government would go forward under the direction of the holding corporation. All evidence of modern days would be removed. Motion picture houses, restaurants, telephone poles, and all the trade marks of the present day would exist no more.

In the place of to-day's Williamsburg, there would stand the House of Burgesses, rebuilt as it originally stood. Raleigh Tavern once more would stand with inviting door for the traveller. Main Street again wold be lined with myrtle trees and hedged by roses. Shacks would give way to copies of the colonial houses which formerly occupied their sites. It is not planned to compel present owners of old colonial houses to sell them to the corportion, but options would be requested in view of future sales.

Dr. Goodwin, who for years has been interested in the preservation of the remaining marks of Virginia colonial history, is quoted as follows:

"For some time I have cherished the hope that Mr. Ford might be and doubtless would be interested in making a contribution to the United States of the old colonial capital of Virginia.

"Williamsburg was associated with all the great debates, resolutions and actions which resulted in the establishment of our federal government. It is distinctly the most interesting colonial relic which now remains in America, and should be rescued and preserved. Unless something is done within the next few years, it will be too late."

Of the three stations, offering regular studio programs, maintained by the Westinghouse Electric, Station WBZ can lay claim to being the one offering the most diversified programs of intristic worth and which not only please all classes of radio listeners, but penetrate great distances, due to the power of its transmission.

One of the pioneers in the field of dinner music, along with KDKA, WBZ for sometime has maintained an instrumental trio which is an ensemble of professional musicians, capable of making real music, with just enough of the "chamber music" atmosphere to be ideal for dinner digestion. This organization is one of the distingushng features of WBZ and is booked for several evening concerts weekly in addition to the dinner program.

In addition to the Westinghouse studio in Springfield, WBZ has remote control stations in Bostons, where orchestras of severals hotels and theatres furnish musical programs, and where it is possible for WBZ to handle anything that happens in Boston in the shape of an outstanding remote control feature from the various Boston auditoriums.

The Springfield Conservatory is available for talent of real worth and it must be said that the programs offered, by vocal and instrumental soloists from WBZ are far from the trite ones which many, many broadcasters through the United States are content. The large French Canadian population of northeastern America and lower Canada has prompted WBZ to feature several all-French programs, exhibiting the wideawakeness of the studio directors and the versatility of the programs.

Notwithstanding the fact that WBZ purposely features music of a high order and musicians of more than average ability and intelligence the lover of modern popular music is by no means slighted and several excellent dance orchestra play regularly throughout WBZ while the latest song hits are sung generally by singers who know how to 'put across" popular music. Leo Reisman's Dance Orchestra, as well as McEnely's Orchestra, are regular contributors of the toe-tickling stuff. Reisman's Concert Ensemble also shares the dinner music period with the WBZ Philharmonic Trio.

These organizations form the nucleus of WBZ's regular features, the song and instrumental recitals, of course, featuring numerous individual artists. Church services and organ recitals occupy the Sunday program, as well as an occasional broadcasting of a special oratorio performance, such as the gala performance of "The Messiah" several months ago.

All in all, WBZ deserves a markedly high rating among the broadcasters providing air entertainment It is a purveyor of hig ideals, high class talent and good transmission. Despite the fact that it is located in a town of less than 150,000 inhabitants it can show he way to a great many broadcasters located in cities anywhere from ten to fifty times as large. WBZ should appear in the first ten of any list ranking users of the air.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand, Nov 1,—A large gold bearing reef at the foot of Mount Tarawera was discovered in a peculiar manner. It seems some hunters shot a wild pig whose body, in falling, dislodged a piece of stone at the edge of a river Thus was revealed the glitter of gold and the hunters rapidly uncovered a deposit. Further investigation disclosed the reef.

NOW IS GOOD TIME TO TRANSPLANT SHRUBS

Trim Roots and Tops and Keep All Dug Plants Well Protected.

Planting of trees and shurbs is now underway with no unfavorable conditions. Freezing temperatures have thoroughly ripened wood and stopped growth so that the plants are dormant; that is, have entered their winter's sleep.

In this condition they may be treated with violence which, in mid-summer, would likely be fatal. And the transplanting of trees and shrubs is a violent proceeding. This should be remembered. It is an experience certain to shock the plant profoundly, and it is necessary to take precautions, so that this shock is lessened as much as possible and the chances for recovery from it are increased.

Nursery grown trees and shrubs have been prepared for the experience of transplanting, by having their roots pruned once or twice. This checks their top growth, but causes them to form fibrous roots close to the trunks, so that when finally moved a relatively large proportion of their roots may be lifted with them. But all their roots are never taken up, some are always cut away.

Must Trim Top, Too.

Every plant maintains a very nice balance between its roots and tops; the roots are exactly sufficient to maintain the top; so when some of the roots are destroyed, some of the top must be, to restore balance. This is the reason trees and shrubs must always be pruned when transplanted; and in pruning it is better to cut away too much than too little. As a rule half the top may be cut off.

Pruning should be so done as to shape the top symmetrically. If pruning is neglected, probably half the top will die, and it will give a very ragged, unsightly appearance next summer; and it will be years, perhaps, before the plant assumes a desirable shape.

Keep Dug Plants Covered.

Plants which have been dug should be kept outdoors, with their roots covered to prevent drying out. Never put them in a furnace room pending planting, as warm, dry air will likely destroy them. If planting cannot be done at once, they may be heeled in, by laying their roots in a shallow trench and throwing earth over them.

It has been a dry autumn, and the ground is not moist. It is advisable to water newly planted trees and shurbs when you set them out, and to see that they do not suffer, from lack of water until the ground freezes.

ALCOHOL FROM WOOD.

SYRACUSE, N.Y.-(United Press) —Forty gallons of grain alcohol may be obtained from one ton of western larchwood. Also it is recorded that certain species of palm trees yield material from which a still larger proportion of grain alcohol may be produced. According to Dr. L. E. Wise, New York State College of Forestry, Syracuse University, who has just published a paper on "Alcohol via Wood Route," potable grain alcohol may be obtained from trees.

HALLOWE'EN IS WOMEN'S CHANCE AT LAST FORT

Men's Final Stronghold in the City Fell Last Night to Fair Maidens.

QUIET REVELLRY.

Only a Few Cases Reported to Police—Turned a Trick on Jokers.

Yesterday's celebration of Hallowe'en was, on the whole, orderly. There were a few high-flyers who persisted in repeating the pranks of their grandfathers, and calls were received at the police station on several occasions to protect fences and windows from the hands of worked-up parties.

An Imperial Oil truck started to celebrate early by bursting into flame in the afternoon, and a few minutes later an automobile stalled at the corner of King and George Streets, directly in front of a heavy-laden lumber truck. The automobile took on the disguise of a junk pile before the juggernaut of a truck had passed by.

Later in the evening the streets were given over to revelry as parties of young people in all kinds of disguises paraded in hilarious mood. Clowns, who acted their parts as naturally as may be, congregated in groups to josh the sedate pedestrians who passed; girls appeared nattily attired in their brothers' suits and boys paraded, more noticeable and awkward, in their sisters' dresses. In the latter classes there was evidence of what each respective sex thinks the finishing touch to the make-up of the opposite. Boys stopped in front of store windows to powder their noses, while girls, more daring behind their masks, puffed serenely at cigarettes.

Stronghold Fallen.

When the fair sex invaded the barber shops a short time ago the men who had been accustomed to gathering there to decide the political destinies of the nation, retired by degrees, and the pool-rooms of the city became the acknowledged meeting place.

This last stronghold fell last night. A woman penetrated the guard and shot a game of 25 ball straight, and to her credit, did it well, even under the curious and perhaps startled glances of the room.

Among the best disguised of the revellers were the young ladies from Mr. Armstrong's office, who were run into the Police Station by Inspector Reid, but released on identification by Chief Newhall.

So well were some of the young people disguised that it was difficult to tell who were and who were not. It is said that the police, in efforts to keep the crowds moving, frequently made mistakes of judgment and endeavored to move on staid citizens who wore only the disguise nature gave them.

Throughout the evening the police motor cycle and side-car patrolled the city without finding much to do. One little girl was lost early in the evening but was quickly picked up by her mother. Three complaints of broken windows and as many of broken fences, were received.

Turned the Trick.

A gentleman on Charlotte Street [illegible] who was annoyed by the pranks of boys who last year entered his back garden and released his chickens from the coop, this year took precautions which provided him with probably more amusement than the boys received. When they entered the back gate, suspiciously enough left open, they tripped over a wire and brought down showers of water from pails suspended above. The Indians and cowboys faded away into the night.

On the whole, Hallowe'en was marked by lots of harmless fun and very few incidents that can be condemned.

GEORGE STREET CHURCH JUBILEE

About Three Hundred People Gathered In Sunday School Last Evening.

SPIRIT OF 73.

An "Auld Lang Syne" evening was the feature last night of the Jubilee Inaugural Week with which George Street Methodist Church is celebrating its golden anniversary. There were about three hundred people present in the big Sunday School Hall for an entertainment that was exceedingly interesting.

Last night saw a mirror held up to the past, when "The Spirit of '73," a representation of the historic meeting of the Board at which the building of the church was undertaken, was presented.

The pen of Mr. F. H. Dobbin, the dean of letters in Peterborough, and one of the pioneer members of George Street Church, was responsible for the piece, and Mr. Dobbin's own inimitable style was apparent throughout. The cleverly-injected bits of dry humour that enlivened the dialogue brought appreciative mirth from a pleased audience, and the author himself enacted one of the most noteworthy of the characters, Thomas Harper, a "conscientious objector," to the proposed project.

"The Spirit of '73" represented the various men who made the Board of the church at the stage of its history when the building of the $60,000 present edifice was mooted. They were dignified characters, one and all, impressed evidently with the responsibility resting on their shoulders and determined to do their duty. In suits of Sunday black, with swallow-tail coats and high stocks, they came to the meeting, held by lantern light, with their pastor in the chair, and discussed the project. An unofficial member of the Board, Thomas Harper (F. H. Dobbin) arrived uninvited, and fired a broadside of objections into the midst of the gathering, and Mrs. William Coulter (Mrs. James Stubbs) also persisted, after much knocking at the door, in getting a hearing, to put before the Board the ideas of the Ladies Aid Society on the subject and to offer to cushion the pews for the new edifice.

As the opinion of the meeting was almost unanimous in favour of the project everyone agreeing to its advisability with the exception of Thomas Harper and Walter Sheridan (H. G. Walker), most of the speeches tended towards encouragement of the building. Mr. Sheridan also objected most strongly to the appearance of Mrs. Coulter, asserting that woman's place was in the home, and not at public meetings, but a few soothing words from Alexander Morrow (S. R. Armstrong) pacified the irritated gentleman, and paved the way for Mr. Coulter's timid speech.

Notable figures included in the presentation of this amusing and interesting scene, giving, as it did, a faithful presentation of the trials and difficulties and the very human outlook of thise men of half a century back, were those of Rev. Charles Fish (Rev. W. H. Young) with his spectacles and his Uncle Sam goatee, hastening to attribute to "original sin" the peccadilloes of his own sons in the Sabbath School as related by the superindendent James Stevenson (J. J. Hartley) with protruding white side burns; William John Mason (Dr. J. E. Middleton) a plump-faced somewhat petulant gentleman, whose moustache gave him considerable trouble; Alex. Morrow (S. R. Armstrong), a tall and dignified figure, with white beard; William Cluxton (E. E. Ingall); George A. Cox (Felix Brownscombe), with a business proposition that included an offer of $15,000 for the old church property and a scheme to insure the lives of six young men of the congregation and apply the amounts of their policies on the amount of the church mortgage; George Hilliard (George C. Carruthers); Walter Sheridan (H. G. Walker), opposing the project and giving a "blue ruin" talk on bad times and unemployment; Mrs. William Coulter (Mrs. James Stubbs), the figure to the life of an old-fashioned, spare lady, with best black dress and small black bonnet with tie strings under her chin.

Last, but decidedly not least, was Thomas Harper, delineated by Mr. F. H. Dobbin in characteristic fashion, the eccentric objector breaking uninvited into the meeting, with his shabby old brown hat and umbrella, and relenting finally, at the solicitation of the members to make a handsome donation to th eventure. The humour of the piece underlying the earnest deliberations of the members, made it interesting from start to finish and the audience listened with rapt attention to the final word. A brief prologue to the presentation was given by Mr. H. G. Walker, and an effective finish was given by the closing thanksgiving prayer of the chairman. Nothing more appropriate for such an anniversary week could have been presented than this entertaining piece, written by one whose whimsical outlook on life gave the necessary touches of humour to the bare bones of dry facts and whose love for and interest in his own church clothed it with a memorable atmosphere of reality. Every person taking part in persentation seemed to be as much enthused with the project as though it were a matter of present day consideration, instead of the affair of a group of long-dead men.

Part one of the "Auld Lang Syne" evening, arrangements for which were in the hands of Messrs. E. E. Ingall, George C. Carruthers, and F. H. Dobbin, was occupied with ten-minute addresses on "Auld Lang Syne in the Church," given by S. R. Armstrong, "Auld Lang Syne in the Sunday School," by Mr. F. H. Dobbin, and "Auld Lang Syne in the Women's Missionary Society," a paper read by Mrs. E. A. Stinson and prepared by Mrs. James Kendry, who was unavoidably absent from the meeting last evening.

Mr. Armstrong's interesting and concise address dealt with matters of interest in the propagation of Methodism in the district, from the first meetings of the members "held in the kitchen of Henthorn's tavern, where Kent's drug store stands now," to the building of the old church, opposite the present edifice, the incorporation of the Bible Christians and Methodist Episcopal congregations with the Methodists in 1883, down to the erection of the handsome building now occupied.

Mr. Dobbin, in entertaining style, spoke of the Sunday School of the old days, and gave a list of the various superintendents of the Sabbath school of the Methodist church in Peterborough, including such names as those of Thomas White, at one time editor of the Peterboro Review, and later in life Minister of Trade and Commerce under Sir John A. Macdonald; J. R. Benson, afterwards one of the town's mayors; Robinson Rutherford, one of the foremost temperance workers of his time; Thomas Donley, D. W. Dumble, W. John Mason, J. W. Flavelle, H. S. Griffin, J. Jeffries, now of Toronto, Wm. Might, S. R. Armstrong, T. W. Robinson, C C. Parsons, now of Oshawa, J. A.. Ferguson, Mr Middleton and George Robertson.. Mr Dobbin himself has recollections extending back fifty-eight years in the history of George Street church sabbath school.

Mrs. Kendry's paper was introduced by the exhibit by Rev. Mr. Young of a Sunday school book prize given to Mrs. Kendry then Elizabeth Rutherford, in the year 1855, from the Wesley Methodist Sunday School, and was read by Mrs. Stinson. It dealt, in brief, interesting fashion with reminiscenes of olden times in the Women's Missionary Society, from the formation of the auxiliary in George street church in 1882, just two years after the formation of the first auxiliary in Hamilton in 1880, to the work done at the present time in missionary endeavor at home and abroad.

A fact volunteered, last evening, was the information that the grandfather of Mr. T. W. Robinson was the man who introduced Methodism to Peterboro and the surrounding district.

During an interlude in the program a delightful duet, 'The Garden of My Heart," was given by Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Park, with accompaniment by Mrs. W. H. Young, who also played for a vocal solo by one of the former soloists of the church, Mrs Chambers of Montreal.

BOYS' CONFERENCE OPEN.

Gathering Last Night Elected Officers—Trevor Miller Leads.

The Older Boys' and Leaders' conference opened last night after a song service and service of worship, led by Rev. Gordon, in which he gave an excellent talk to the boys. Then followed a most hearty address of welcome by Mayor Turner.

Mr. Plewman then took charge of the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

Grand Practor—Trevor Miller, Peterboro.

Deputy Grand—Hubert Harris, of Cobourg.

Grand Scriptor—Clifford Lamis, Baltimore.

Grand Comptor—Harry Cheu, of Peterboro.

The conference was then divided into Tuxis groups, with a leader for each. Each group met and elected their officers, and decided on a name and yell. After this the conference re-assembled and had a short talk by the Grand Practor on "The Older Boys' Parliament as it relates to this District." He then called on Gordon Lapp of Brighton to say a few words about the Boys' Parliament.

Mr. C. E. Hendry gave the address of the evening. He pointed out in an excellent way what the purposes of the conference was.

G.W.V.A. MASQUERADE.

Hallowe'en Dance Drew Big Attendance—Attractive Programme.

A grand masquerade dance was held in the G. W. V. A. Hall last evening, with an attendance of about one hundred people, the majority in costume. The hall was prettily decorated with Hallowe'en novelties and streamers in black and yellow. Turner's four-piece orchestra provided excellent music for the occasion. The evening opened with the singing in unison by the guests of "O Canada," and closed with the National Anthem. A Grand March took place during an intermission in the regular programme of dances. A flashlight picture of the assemblage was taken. Floor management was under the direction of members of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A.: Mrs. W. Hughes, Mrs. A. E. Paterson, Mrs. B. M. McNeely, Mrs. J. Black, also Messrs O. Kellar, J. Abraham, C. Wiggins and C. Armstrong.

ROTARY-ANNE TEA.

Season Opens on November 6—Ball on December 5.

The Rotary-Annes are opening their season this year with an Opportunity Tea, to be held at the home of Mrs. W. R. Widdess, 288 Setwart Street, on Thursday afternoon, November 6th. Articles suitable for bridge prizes and bridge accessories will be sold, also homemade cooking may be obtained. There will be an admission charge of twenty-five cents.

The Rose Ball, the big annual dance of the Rotary-Annes, will be held this year at the G.W.V.A. Hall on December 5th.

TIFFIN TEA ROOM NICELY DECORATED

Formal Afternoon Tea Parties Accommodated in Private Room.

A little tea-room that has a very metropolitan and yet home-like atmosphere, is the Tiffin, at the corner of Bethune and Charlotte streets, conducted by Mrs. James McDonald. Recent changes and additions have enlarged its capacity to almost double its former accommodation, and it is one of the coziest places in town. A neighboring house was secured and two rooms added, a tea-room done in the soft greys and rose which are the predominating pretty tints, and a little parlor with soft rugs, a piano, comfortable chairs and the dainty pictures which are a feature of the furnishings. Opening into one another, the same soft, attractive color scheme is used throughout the four rooms, with small white tables and chairs, spotless linen and the daintiest of china.

Arrangements for special afternoon tea parties and dinners can be made, and the private rooms, reached by two steps, screened off by a large screen of gold and Oriental chints. Already, several gay little parties have been held here, the hostess receiving her guests in the home-like little reception room, a pretty separate entrance on Charlotte street giving the last touch to the privacy of the rooms, and the general air of refined simplicity.

Breakfast is served from seven o'clock, for early risers, and there is a hot meal at noon and tea in the evening, with convenience for six o'clock dinner, if desired. The service is swift and efficient, everything is of the home-made variety, and tea connoisseurs are assured of a special brand of fine tea, blended especially for the Tiffin, in Toronto.

OBITUARY.

MRS. ANN PERRY ROBERTS

APSLEY, Oct. 31.—The township of Chandos lost another highly esteemed and respected resident in the person of Mrs. Ann Perry Roberts who passed away after a painful and protracted illness early on Tuesday morning in her eighty first year.

The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon, service being conducted by the Rev. C. A. G. Spence at St. George's church, interment being made in the family plot in the church yard. A daughter, Mrs. Everett, with whom the deceased lived on the home stead is the only surviving member of the family. Mrs. Roberts was greatly loved in the community, being noted for her genile and kindly disposition, and her sympathetic assistance in cases of illness, and her removal is a distinct loss to the locality.

EGGS AT 55 CENTS ON LOCAL MARKET

Butter Dropped To 37 Cents at Close—Apples Were Prominent.

Eggs were a scarce commodity on the farmers' market this morning. For the few that might be had, 50 and 55 cents a dozen was demanded. There was plenty of butter and much fowl, butter being priced generally at 40 cents a pound, with lower closing quotations of 38 and 37 cents. Chickens were 28 cents a pound; hens at 25 cents; ducks 28 cents; geese 25 cents and turkeys 33 and 35 cents a pound. Feathers were 65 cents a pound in big bags.

In the open section, the fruitmen from Niagara, who bring in a big truck loaded with fruit had grapes and pears this morning. Red Concords were 45 cents a basket; blue and green grapes 40 cents. Their Bartlett pears were 50 and 60 cents a basket.

Apples were prominent on the open market, in good quality and variety. Baxters were selling at 40 cents a peck, Tolman Sweets at 50 cents and Snows at 35 and 40 cents. By the barrel, Ontarios and Starks, were $4.50, Gainos and Wagners and Baxters were $4, the same price asked for a barrel of fine looking dark red apples (unnamed), with the appearance of small Gravensteins. A nice-looking apple with the poetic name of the Maiden's Blush, was 30 cents a peck. Crap apples were 30 cents a basket. Green pears, "as hard as I am," as one lady expressed it, were 60 cents a peck.

Wine or jelly grapes were 75 cents for a large basket.

Honey up-stairs was selling for $1.40 and $1.25 in light and dark variety in ten-pound pails. Downstairs, one dealer asked 17 cents a pound for the light amber. The attractive five-podnd pails of the Beekist honey were selling at 90 cents.

Small beets were 25 cents a basket, larger ones 25 cents a peck, the same price as carrot. Red onions were 40 cents a peck, or $2 a bag, and peppers, the long, hot ones, were 20 cents a dozen. Potatoes were 75 and 80 cents a bag, and pumpkins 15 and 25 cents apiece.

There were a couple of used touring cars on the open market, one offered for sale at $725, the other at $300.

NEWS OF HASTINGS.

Hillian Fleming Passed Away Yesterday—Hunters Leave For the North.

HASTINGS, Nov. 1.—Ailene Lillian Fleming, one of the little twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fleming of the Cobourg Road, died on Friday morning. Ailene was four months old and had only been ill for a short time before her death.

Another carload consisting of about one thousand bushels of which was bought from the local farm through the Campbellford branch of the cereal and was shipped from the local Canadian National tracks.

A gang of workmen are sidetracked on the local tracks who have been laying heavy steel up along this and the Birdsall's section of the C.N.R. The number of the workmen are about forty and in the course of a day or so the work will be fully completed.

Mr. J. Condon who recently secured the Royal Hotel is making considerable improvement in the interior of the Hotel. New hardwood floors are being laid upstairs and down and many of the rooms are being redecorated.

A party of hunters left on Friday morning for the wild haunts of the north. This party went by rail as far as Anson Junction and from there on, go further north, first by motor and then continuing the journey with horses.

More intend going in a day or so.

C.G.E. GIRL WAS GIVEN SEND OFF

Miss Leatha Mesley Presented With Silver Set By Fellow Employees.

The members of the Punch Press Department of the C.G.E. presented Miss Leatha Mesley, a former employee of this department, with a beautiful silver set, as a token of the esteem and respect in which Miss Mesley, who is about to leave the firm and be married, was held. The following address was read:

Miss Leatha Mesley.—We, the foreman and employees of the Punch Press Department of the Canadian General Electric Co., extend to you our most earnest felicitations and congratulations, upon your entering the sea of matrimony.

Your service and acquaintance with us has been for a longer period than any other lady employee, through which time you have always proved yourself a friend to all with whom you came in contact; and in the discharge of your duties, in this department, during that time you have been most exemplary, a fact which makes all of us sorry to see you sever your connection with us. Nevertheless, we sincerely hope and trust that the step you are now taking is one in the direction of happiness and prosperity, and our heartiest wishes are extended to you and your "hubby" for a long life of happiness, good health and success.

We now ask you to accept this set of silver—not for its monetary value but as a token of the esteem and respect in which you are held by all in this department.

(Signed) Lucelle Simmonds.

Pasteurization is a Public Health Safeguard

The simplest, cheapest, easiest and best method of making raw milk safe is to pasteurize it.

For family use, it is advisable to obtain milk already pasteurized by a trustworthy dairy. It is cheaper, safer and better to heat milk by wholesale in a large plant with competent supervision than to depend upon each household heating its daily supply. If drinking water needs purification, it is filtered at a central station, and not left for each individual kitchen.

In the home, milk should be kept cold, clean and covered. If part of the milk in a bottle is used, do not replace the paper stopper, but invert a clean tumbler over the neck of the bottle and at once replace in the ice-chest.

Milk is one of the BEST and CHEAPEST foods.

FRED JOHNSTON WAS RE-ELECTED

Meeting of Amateur Athletic Union of Canada Held Last Night.

TORONTO, Nov. 1. —(Canadian Press).—Fred Johnston was re-elected by acclamation as president of the Ontario branch of the Amateur Athletic union of Canada at its annual meeting last night. Year's report was not crowned with financial success and considerable unrest was noted among different branches of sport governed by provincial body. A motion was passed to appoint committee to invite back Ontario Lacrosse Association, which broke its affiliation and also a committee to bring about peace among the rival swimming associations. Following are officers for coming year: President, Fred Johnson; Vice-President, W. W. Davidson, re-elected by acclamation, First Vice President H. P. Rutherford, London, elected by vote, Hon. Treasurer C. Higginbottom, re-elected by acclamation. Hon. Secretary H. Roxborough, elected by vote. Supervisors of various committees were left to be appointed by executive committee.

POSTMASTER CORKERY RECEIVED PRESENTATION AND GOOD WISHES WHEN RETIRING AFTER 35 YEARS

"Admirable Officer; Good Citizen; Perfect Gentleman," His Associates Say.

MANY TRIBUTES.

Assistant Postmaster Charles Lacheur Succeeds as Chief Executive Here.

John Corkery, postmaster in Peterboro, yesterday retired from active service in the Post Office, with which he has been associated since 1889, and is succeeded by Charles Lacheur, who has served twenty-one years in the City Post Office.

At an informal reception in the sorting room of the Post Office last night, the sixty employees, including postal clerks, letter carriers, rural route men and office staff, gathered to extend their best wishes to the retiring postmaster, and to express their appreciation of the kindly relations always existing between them. Mrs. Corkery was also present, and the principal speaker was G. N. Gordon, K.C., Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons.

It was the first occasion, Mr. Gordon said, of this character in Peterboro, where a citizen for thirty-five years had carried on the work that brought him to the end of his course of duty where he retired under the Civil Service Act. Mr. Corkery has given splendid service to the city and county, and retires with the knowledge and honor of having carried out his duties without complaint or criticism.

The speaker had known the Postmaster for twenty years, and during that time he had given splendid and enduring service in his important sphere in Government service.

Mr. Gordon referred to the benefits of the Civil Service Act, and remarked that he believed it would work more smoothly as time goes on.

Returning to the occasion in hand the speaker pointed to the excellent discipline in the Peterboro Post Office maintained under Mr. Corkery without friction. The city and county have reason to be proud of having had the services of Mr. Corkery, because he had given time and attention to his work; he had spared no effort to give the best he was capable of, and he was always there to do his duty faithfuliy and well.

"Mr. Corkery's consideration of his staff was splendid, and I wish other men in public positions could work as harmoniously as he has, and gain the co-operation of their staffs as whole-heartedly as he."

The system of merit promotion will be continued, Mr. Gordon hopes, and in accordance with it the Assistant Postmaster will step into Mr. Corkery's place. "I believe Mr. Lacheur will be able to carry on the work on the thorough and faithful standard set by his predecessor."

In conclusion, Mr. Gordon spoke his appreciation of the presence of Post Office Inspector J. C. Strange and Mrs. Strange, who joined with the local staff in the good wishes tendered the retiring postmaster.

"Every man with any dealings whatever with Mr. Corkery has found him kind and efficient, and he has given a lasting example to every public servant of what a public servant should be."

Made Presentation.

When Mr. Lacheur had read a letter from His Worship Mayor Turner, expressing regret in his inability to attend, and conveying the regrets of the citizens in losing Mr. Corkery, the Assistant Postmaster read a beautifully illuminated address, and a richly upholstered lounge chair was brought forward for presentation to the Postmaster, while Mrs. Corkery received a bouquet of roses.

The address was as follows:

Dear Mr. Corkery,—We the employees of the Peterboro Post Office, have gathered together on this occasion to do honor to you, sir, whom we have grown to admire for your zealous administration of the office devolved upon you.

It was with great regret that we learned of your intention to retire into private life from a work that has been part and parcel of your life for the past 35 years, and cannot permit you to retire without a direct expression of our esteem and regard: the desire to present you with the accompanying chair as a very slight token of our appreciation of so admirable an officer, so good a citizen and so perfect a gentleman. Also this bouquet of roses for Mrs. Corkery, and trust that both you and she will long be spared to enjoy the rest you have so rightfully earned.

Signed on behalf of the Employees of the Peterboro Post Office.

CHARLES LACHEUR,
Assistant Postmaster.
C. H. STUART,
Senior Postal Clerk.
CHARLES A. STENTON,
Senior Letter Carrier.

Appreciated Co-operation.

Mr. Corkery, deeply touched by the tributes paid to him, thanked the staff for the tokens of regard they had presented, and spoke in highest terms of the co-operation that had always been accorded him in his work. An outstanding feature in the Peterboro office, he said, is the willingness of every man to do his share of the work without complaint.

Inspector Strange said he was sorry to hear of his friend's retirement. He had known Mr. Corkery a great many years, and had always known him to be a kind, courteous, and good public servant every way.

At the close of the ceremony the rafters of the Post Office echoed back the unusual sound, in a place of hard work and silence, of three hearty cheers for the retiring Postmaster, and the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

PRESENTATION WAS MADE FRED PANTER

Postal Clerks and Executives at Post Office Honor Former Associate.

Following the presentation to Mr. Corkery, retiring postmaster, last night, members of the staff made another presentation to one of their number who has left the post office service. Fred Panter was the recipient of a pipe and a tobacco pouch, with many expressions of good wishes for his success.

Albert White, President of the Postal Clerks' Association, said the gift showed appreciation of Mr. Panter's efficient duties in the office, and regret that he had severed his pleasant connection with the postal clerks and executive officers.

Cecil Richardson, secretary of the association, remarked that Mr. Panter had worked well with the other men in the office, and Joseph Lynch joined in expressing the good will and good wishes of the clerks to the retiring postmaster and clerk.

Mr. Corkery said Mr. Panter, like all the other members of the staff, had rendered faithful service in his department.

FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS CASH.

How would you like to wake up some morning and find you were the winner of $5,000? Some person is going to get it. Why not you? The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal are offering ten thousand dollars in cash prizes to those who make the best estimates of the total number of votes to be polled at the next Federal election. There were 3,119,306 polled out of a total of 4,435,310 in 1921. The next election is not far away. How many will vote? It costs nothing to make an estimate if you are a subscriber to that great weekly for 1925. The Family Herald has a wonderful programme this season. It is admitted to be the best family and farm paper on this Continent. A very handsome art calendar is also given to each subscriber. It is the biggest two dollars worth ever offered in Canada. Write for a sample copy or leave your subscription at this office. You will never regret it.

EUGENE FITZGERALD

The death took place this morning in a Toronto hospital of Eugene Fitzgerald after an illness of three months. Deceased was thirty-four years of age, and resided with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fitzgerald, 180 Perry street. The body will arrive in Peterboro this evening on the C.P.R. train at 8.15. Funeral on Monday morning at nine-thirty o'clock from the Sacred Heart church to St. Peter's cemetery. Four brothers and four sisters also survive. Deceased was a member of St. Peter's Court C.O.F.

REV. A. J. H. STRIKE.

The Toronto Globe carries the following account of the death in Perth of Rev. A. J. H. Strike, who was about thirty years ago a resident of Peterborough, a principal of Ashburnham Public school, and a keen lover of the sport of cricket. A brother, W. S. Strike, resides in the city:

Perth, Oct. 31.— Rev. A. J. H. Strike, pastor of Ottawa South Methodist church, passed away here to-night at the residence of his son, W. Ross Strike, after a period of failing health following an operation in Toronto a few weeks ago. The late Mr. Strike was pastor of Ashbury Methodist church here from June, 1920, until June, 1922, coming here from Granby, Que. At the termination of his pastorate here he went to Ottawa South. He held pastorates also at Lindsay, Deseronto, Campbellford, Morrisburg, and Bowmanville. Possessed of a cheery smile and genial disposition, Mr. Strike made many warm and enduring friendships as he mingled among all classes of citizens during his pastorate in Perth.

LONDON SLAYER BEEN ARRESTED

Frank Barnard Charged With Slaying Smylie Muirhead, Arrested in New Orleans.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 1. —(Canadian Press)—Frank Barned, of London, Ont., wanted on a charge of slaying Smylie Muirhead with an automobile some weeks ago has been arrested in New Orleans, Police Chief Welsh was informed this morning by telephone. A local officer will go south to bring Barned back. A murder charge will be laid against him. It is understood he will fight extradition.

It is alleged that when Muirhead and his wife and Mrs. Barned, who was separated from her husband, were walking along the street here, Barned drove up in a car and asked his wife to accompany him. On her refusal, it is alleged, Barned drove upon the sidewalk, striking and killing Muirhead and injuring Mrs. Barned. A coroner's jury held Barned, who disappeared immediately, criminally responsible for the unfortunate man's death.

THREE WERE KILLED.

Two Others Fatally Injured When Train Struck Car.

LONG BEACH, California, Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Three persons were killed and two others probably fatally injured to day when a Long Island railroad train struck a motor car at a crossing in Ocean Side, near here. After hurling the machine eighty feet, the train jumped the track and tore up fifty feet of the third rail.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Schmandt and Robert Kline, all of Oceanside, were instantly killed, and Mrs. Matilda Kline and Miss Helen Kingsstry, the other occupants of the machine, also of Oceanside, both suffered skull fractures and probable internal injuries. Their condition is serious.

VIOLENT TEMPEST.

PARIS, Nov. 1. — (Canadian Press).—Several days of unseasonably mild and rainy weather culminated yesterday in a tempest of unusual violence, which did much damage along the Channel and Atlantic coasts. Fishing boats were obliged to remain in port, and many coast-wise services were suspended. A cargo steamer and a pilot boat were driven ashore in the Boulogne roadstead.

MID-WESTERN WINTERS SHORTER BUT NEARLY AS COLD AS ARCTIC

Millions Can Live on So-Called Northern Deserts, Says Stefansson.

MOSQUITOES THERE.

Restless Explorer Sails in March To Penetrate African Wilds.

BY A. H. FREDERICK

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—And now considered desert and arctic waste will support millions. The world need not worry about overpopulation so long as most of the world's surface still awaits the pioneer.

So declares Vilhajlmur Stefansson explorer. He said today he would devote the rest of his life to demonstrating the usefulness of the arctic, of the interior of Australia, Africa and parts of America now considered worthless.

In March he sails for Africa for a four-month trip across the desert.

Room for Expansion

"I want to demonstrate the practicability of living in new lands," he says, "then try to educate our people out of their almost superstitious errors concerning those parts of the world they never have seen.

"We must find places for expansion if we would escape serious internal complications. It is necessary to keep alive the virile pioneer spirit by providing new lands for pioneers to conquer.

Seven out of 10 of the "desert dangers" on reads about are not met, Steffansson insists.

"If you had been a schoolboy or girl in 1800," he explains, "you would have recited glibly to your teacher, 'All our nation west of the Mississippi River is a desert.'

"So it is with out 'deserts' today.

"Most folks think the Arctic is an unbroken range of ice and snow, with atmosphere too freezing for comfortable life. Popular conception, yes, but far from the truth!

"The winters in the Dakotas, Montana and Manitoba, while shorter, are almost as cold.

750 Arctic Flowers

"The wheat belt of Siberia contains many portions colder than most of the arctic. The minimum temperature at the north pole is 60 degrees below zero, while in some habitable regions of Siberia we find relative temperatures of around 85 degrees below.

"There are 750 varities of flowering plants in the polar region, engendered by the moderate and warm temperatures. In some localities the thermometer often shows 90 to 100 degrees in the shade.

"Flies and mosquitoes abound through these regions. Butterflies and bumblebees are found on the northern coast.

"The only snow in the summer is in the mountains. At Point Barrow, the most northerly tip of Alaska, you'd have to travel 300 miles south and climb a mountainside before you found any."

Similar superstitions surround the Australian dry deserts, the explorer asserts.

"Australia," he points out, "is generally pictured as a vast desert surrounded by a narrow seaboard strip of fertile country.

"That's another misconception. There is no part of the continent where there is not food for stock, though drinking water often does present quite a problem.

"But even the dryness is exaggerated. It usually can be found if one will just go to the trouble of digging for it."

Stefansson dreams of an Australia with a population of from 75,000,000 to 100,000,000, instead of the 5,000,000 it has today. And the Alaskan desert has the same possibilities, he contends.

THREE BROKE JAIL.

Two Men Recaptured Will Face Charge of Attempted Murder.

MONTREAL, Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Waiving extradition on the appearance in court yesterday, Edward St. Aubin, of this city, and Arthur Stately, of New York, were taken last evening to Burlington, Vt., where they will face the charge of having assaulted Jed P. Tillotson, Chittenden County Jail guard, with intent to commit murder.

The pair are alleged to have escaped from the jail on October 27, when three men escaped from their cells after attacking a turnkey and locking him behind the bars. Burlington officers traced St. Aubin and Stately to Montreal, and the alleged fugitives were arrested on Thursday in an east end house by the United States sheriffs, accompanied by local detectives.

ORANGEMEN BEAT BELMONTS AND TEACHERS LOSE TO THE KIWANIS

L.O.L. 50 Hit Tommy Holyman Freely—Game Broken Up By Dispute.

KAY CALLED IT.

Abby Rose, For Tool Room, Held C.N.R. to Only Four Hits.

The most interesting game last evening at the Arena came to a close at the end of the first half of the seventh, when the Belmonts argued over a decision Umpire Kay had made. Kay immediately called the game. At the end of the game the score was 20 to 8 in favor of the L.O.L. 50, but the score reverted back to the end of the sixth giving the Orangemen a win by 14 to 8.

Nicholls who did the heaving for the winners turned in a nice game. He had plenty of speed and control, holding the slugging Belmonts to 17 hits, which he kept well scattered, no more than 3 hits being bunched in the one inning.

Tommy Holyman pitched for the Belmonts, but didn't get by as well as Nicholls, being felt for 19 safeties.

Teachers Defeated

The teachers met their defeat at the hands of the Kiwanis last evening when the Kiwanis scored 7 runs to the teachers 3. McLean was on the mound for the winners and pitched a steady game, getting 9 strikes out to his credit. Dunkerley did the twirling for the Teachers, but was wild as a hawk, issuing 6 passes.

TOOL ROOM WIN.

C.N.R. were outclassed last evening when the Tool Room handed them a 10 to 1 beating. A. Delahaye did the pitching for the C.N.R., and everything he had to offer was slammed all over the arena. Abby Rose did the hurling for the winners and held the C.N.R. to 4 scratchy hits.

CITY LEAGUE TO MEET ON MONDAY

Election of Officers For Next Year Will Take Place—Meeting at Chamber of Commerce

AT 7.30 SHARP.

The City League Baseball Association will meet in the Chamber of Commerce Hall on Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock sharp. All teams that took part in the league during the past season are requested to have a representative present. Anything left undone from the past season will be cleaned up and the election of officers for next year will take place. The meeting is expects to have everything ready for held in this city, and the league expect to have everything ready for the boys next spring when the playing season opens. The Exhibition diamond which was made this year by the league, will likely be improved on next year. City League baseball in this city is going to boom next year, and if everything runs smooth the city of Peterboro is going to be put on the map by its baseball players.

"Now, now, Mr. Kent, how do you know that? You, yourself, were down on the bridge, a good three hundred yards away, and you know nothing of the situation except by hearsay——"

"Well, there's no truth in the statethat my sister shot——"

"Oh, shut up, Kent," said Ezra Goddard, impatiently. "We know your love and loyalty for your sister prompts all this defence of her, but it doesn't get us anywhere."

"Well, we're going to get somewhere," declared Dobbins, "and mighty quick, too. I'll take up the poisoning business first. We have everything to prove that—except Mrs. Raynor's own confession—which we can hardly expect."

"What's your proof?" demanded Kent.

"We have found four different people who saw Mrs. Raynor furtively slip something into her husband's tea or coffee cups, we have found a book on poisons concealed in her bookcase, and we have found tablets hidden in a vase in her bedroom which, when analyzed, were found to be arsenic. Add to this the symptoms of arsenical poisoning observed in Mr. Raynor for some time before he died, and state if you can, any flaw in my reasoning from these facts that Mrs. Raynor poisoned her husband."

"Granting all that," Malcolm Finley said, "you've no real case against Mrs. Raynor. Douglas Raynor was not killed by poison—he was shot; and your connection of Mrs. Raynor with that shooting is a figment of your imagination. I was on the spot within a minute after the shot was fired—I know Mrs. Raynor was out on the west terrace—I will swear——"

"Save your perjury until you are called for it, Mr. Finley," and Dobdins looked at him gravely.

"I haven't perjured myself yet—save your advice until I do. But here's another thing, Mr. Dobbins. All you say regarding Mrs. Raynor might apply equally to somebody else. As to the shooting, it would be just as logical to suspect Miss Turner, say, for she was nearer the spot where Mr. Raynor fell than his wife was. You say I wiped finger-prints from that weapon. May they not have been those of the nurse?"

"She had no motive—Mrs. Raynor had."

"Motive is a good deal, but it isn't everything," Finley persisted. "Again, as to the tablets. Suppose Mrs. Raynor was giving her husband simple tablets—soda or something—and suppose some one else, say a disgruntled servant, was administering the poison. Then wouldn't the most likely thing be for the poisoner to 'plant' the poison in a vase in Mrs. Raynor's room——"

"Look here, Mr. Finley, you're romancing altogether too much. I have not time for such balderdash. If you, or anybody else, has any facts to communicate to me, go ahead, but otherwise, I must go on with my proceedings against Mrs. Raynor. If she is really innocent, it must come out—if she is guilty, it must be shown. Justice must be done."

In the meantime, Nan Raynor, at her wits' end as to what course to pursue, was walking in the Italian garden. As she paced the flower-bordered walks, she marvelled at the desolate position in which she found herself.

Her brother loved her; but, after all, Orry seemed to her more like a child than a source of help or strength. Malcolm Finley loved her—but just now he was the last one to apply to.

Miss Raynor was a weather vane. Now she seemed fond of Nan and resented her suspicions of her, and the next minute she would be voicing the same suspicions herself.

As Nan walked along, her hands clasped behind her, her eyes cast down, she was joined by Grimshaw Gannon.

She had never liked the old man, but at her husband's especial command she had always been courteous to him. She had never understood the link that bound these two illy assorted natures, but she couldn't help seeing there was one. For, occasionally, Gannon would come up to the house and be closeted an hour or so with Raynor, after which episode Raynor would be unusually harsh to Nan. By this she knew that the relations between the two men were not amicable; for it was always after Raynor had had an unpleasant interview with somebody else that he vented his irritability on his wife.

And so, in accordance with her usual habit, Nan nodded a greeting to Gannon and said a pleasant good morning.

"You know, Mrs. Raynor," he began, abruptly, "I know a lot about your husband."

"I suppose so, Mr. Gannon."

"He was a hard man, ma'am, a very hard man."

Nan's big, mournful eyes lifted for a moment to the rugged face of the man beside her.

"If you have anything to tell me, Mr. Gannon, please do so. If not, I prefer not to have my solitude intruded on."

"Lay off the hoity-toity language, ma'am; I'm plain-spoken myself, and I've a plain word to say."

"Say it, then, please," Nan said, wearily.

"Well, it's just this. Young Raynor has come here to make trouble for you, ma'am."

"Has he?"

"Yes, he has, and I know it. You know he's going to take all his father's property, and you don't get any. See?"

"What do you know about that will, Mr. Gannon?" Nan turned suddenly and fired the question at him so quickly that he was decidedly taken aback.

"Me? Me?—" he stammered. "Why, I don't know nothing, ma'am."

"You wouldn't be so flustered if you had a clear conscience! Now, what do you know about that will—that you witnessed—and that you said you didn't witness? I am sure you know something——"

"What's it worth to you, ma'am, for me to tell you what I know?"

"It isn't worth one dollar—in money—if that is your meaning; but I can tell you, it will be worth all your peace of mind for you to tell me about that will."

"Peace of mind—now, I dunno, ma'am—that's a large order—peace of mind. Does any of us have that, I wonder."

RETAIL TRADE HOLDS STEADY

Montreal Reports Weather Unfavorable For Fall Business—Collections Fair.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press.) — The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Association Limited states:

Halifax —Wholesale and retail trade sales continue satisfactory with collections fair.

St. John— Wholesale trade reported to be continuing satisfactory and retail trade very good. Collections fair.

Montreal—Boots and shoes fairly steady with collections fair. Dry goods show very little increase in volume as climatic conditions not favorable to fall and winter wear. Collections not very good. Groceries show a little more favorable trade than previous reports, with a slight increase. Collections fair. In hardware conditions just about the same as last reported. Collections fair.

Toronto—Industry, textile, iron and steel shows increase and general business shows a slight improvement. Wholesale, a fair volume of business being transacted, but no particular expansions, most firms being content to maintain last year's figures. Retail, little change reported and winter goods not moving yet on account of continued fine weather.

Winnipeg — Wholesale trade steady, no material change expected until advent of cold weather. Retail business fair. Collections picking up as crop proceeds available.

Regina—Wholesale trade holding good compared with the same period last year. Retail trade improving gradually. Collections fair to good.

Saskatoon—Wholesale and retail trade report not much change over last week's report. Collections fair.

Calgary—Both wholesale and retail conditions generally continue to be saisfactory and a slight improvement is being felt, particularly by the retail trade.

Edmonton— Returns from crop reported fairly good in Edmonton district, and business expected to pick up considerably as the season advances.

Vancouver— Wholesale grocery trade reported normal with dry goods, hardware and boots and shoes good. Collections good. Improvement in the retail trade.

ODESSA BOY SHOT ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Percy Clark Is in a Dangerous Condition as a Result of Punctured Lung.

KINGSTON, Nov. 1.—(Special). —Percy Clark, aged 15 years, a son of Mr. S. W. Clark, Odessa, was shot through the lung about 8 o'clock on Friday night while dressed up to celebrate Hallowe'en. He was rushed to Dr. Munro's surgery, where a hemorrhage was checked and first aid rendered until the arrival of an ambulance, when the patient was rushed to the Kingston General Hospital. Dr. Munro called in Dr. R. J. Gardiner, and they succeeded in extracting the bullet, but the lad is in a serious condition.

The case was investigated by Chief of Police Barrett, of Napanee. From information received here, it appears that young Clark, with some companions, were in Urban Snyder's backyard in Odessa when it is alleged that Snyder fired a shot at Clark from a revolver. Snyder, who is about 36 years of age, and unmarried, was placed under arrest by Chief Barrett, on a charge of "shooting with intent to do bodily harm," and was remanded. At the hospital here this morning it was stated that Clark's condition is very serious and that it is doubtful if he will recover. If Clark does not recover it was stated that a more serious charge will be laid against Snyder.

It is stated that Clark and his companions had not even rapped on Snyder's door, but were in his backyard when Snyder suddenly appeared at his back door and fired the shot. The shooting caused a big sensation in the village, which is twelve miles from Kingston. Snyder, the man accused of the shooting, keeps a general store in Odessa, and is well-known in this district.

PICTURE PUZZLE GAME.

Elsewhere in to-day's issue will be found a large advertisement announcing a Picture Puzzle Game arranged by The Mail and Empire which will no doubt prove very interesting for our readers, and especially for the little folks. The Contest consists of ascertaining how many objects or articles in the picture start with the letter "B," and cash prizes are awarded to those finding the largest number. Our readers have already won liberal prizes as a result of competing in similar Contests, and there is no reason why some of the awards should not come to residents of this vicinity. Anyhow, there is nothing like trying.

THRESHING NEARLY DONE.

Peterborough Occupies Ninth Position

Interesting statistics for 1922, secured by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, and published in the October Labour Gazette, places Peterborough in ninth position among the Ontario cities for value of manufactured products, as compared with tenth position in population, clearly proving that this city is one of the leading industrial centres in Ontario. It will be noticed that Oshawa, Ford, and Walkerville are well forward in value of manufactured products, due to the automobile industry, which showed a marked increase in production during 1922, on which figures the statistics are based. It is also recalled that, outside of the automobile industry, 1922 was a year of marked industrial depression, occasioned by post-war conditions, proving the value of diversified industries in any one centre.

SCOTT WITH MONTREAL.

Former Youthful Toronto Pro Will Play In National League.

MONTREAL, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Ganton Scott, former youthful pro. hockey player of Toronto St. Patricks, has been signed for the new Montreal club, to play in the National Hockey League this winter.

The latest addition to the new club was a promising young junior player in Toronto back in 1922.

KITCHENER TEAM.

Only One Senior Hockey Team Will Be Entered in O.H.A. This Season.

KITCHENER, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Kitchener will have only one senior hockey team in the Ontario Hockey Association this season, and that team, for the first time in years, will not be in the Toronto group.

It is the intention of the local management to apply for admittance to the Big Four which will probably be enlarged by taking in the new London club.

TO ENTER TWO TEAMS.

Guelph Has Enough Hockey Material for Two Teams.

GUELPH, Nov. 1. — (Canadian Press).—An innovation in Guelph hockey circles this winter will be the placing of two Intermediate teams in the O.H.A. series. Owing to the amount of hockey talent available, two separate clubs have been organized, and an effort will be made to have the teams in different groups, one along with Stratford, Kitchener and New Hamburg, and the other with Brampton, Georgetown and Elora.

PLAYERS INJURED.

Two La Salle Rugby Players Suffering From Concussion of the Brain.

TORONTO, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Two De Lasalle players, Sheredin and Burns, were taken to St. Michael's Hospital last evening, following the Interscholastic O.R.F.U. game with the University of Toronto Schools.

Both are suffering from concussion of the brain and Burns is reported to be in a serious condition.

Both were reported resting comfortably early this morning.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

DE FEO OPERA STARS IN TOWN.

Gala Performance To-night.

Mr. De Feo and his stars have arrived here this morning in a special Pullman car, bringing with them a carload of scenery and an orchestra.

According to the press of Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto it is the best theatrical organisation of its kind that has ever visited Canada, and to-night a cordial reception worthy of such a distinguished artistic company will be given them by the people of our city.

The advance sale of the seats has been quite active, but it is advisable that those who have not yet made reservations for to-night should be at the theatre early, as the performance starts at 8.15 p.m.

The De Feo Opera Company will appear to-night in a popular presentation of the two best known operas — "Rigoletto" and "Aida"—which most of the people have been made familiar with by gramophone records and radio broadcasting.

To-night all these beautiful melodies will be sung by artistes possessing voices of great beauty, and having the freshness of youth.

As this is the only appearance of the De Feo Opera stars in our city, it is to be hoped that the Grand Opera House will be filled to capacity.

Canadian soldiers who served with the C.E.F. during the great war all knew of Captain Hurley, the Australian motion picture daredevil just as well as they knew our famous Dumbells. It was Hurley who left France to go with General Allenby into Egypt and Palestine. It is this same daring soldier-photographer who, returning from fifteen months with Shackleton and his expedition to the South Pole arrived a few months ago in New York with a picture story of life in New Guinea in a place never before trodden by white man. His photographs created the biggest excitement in American newspaper and magazine offices. And then he showed his motion pictures at Carnegie Hall and blase New York was thrilled as never before. He had found a tribe of head hunters whose facial and other peculiarities were so much Semetic that scientists at once pronounced them the "lost tribe of Israel."

Captain Hurley decided that his picture of thrills should be called "The Lost Tribe" and under that title it will come to the Grand Opera House for three days, starting Monday, Nov. 3, with daily matinees at 2.15. It is not a travelogue picture but a wonder picture, filled with romance and thrills, taken where no white man ever dared to travel.

"Three weeks ago "The Lost Tribe" was used as a big feature (together with the famous Lopez Pennsylvania Hotel orchestra) at the opening of New York's latest supurb motion picture palace, "The Piccadilly." It will be presented upon this first Canadian tour at popular prices and will prove just as great a sensation here as in New York.

Captain Hurley came into this unknown land of New Guinea by boat and sea-plane and the head hunters thought he was a strange God brought to them throught the agency of a monster bird. That was why he secured their confidence and was able to make these remarkable pictures.

AT THE CAPITOL.

BIG LILLIAN GISH FILM, "THE WHITE SISTER," AT CAPITOL

Favorite of many Big Successes said to reach New Heights—Was Filmed Italy.

"The White Sister," the greatest triumph of Lillian Gish's career, will have its premiere at the Capitol Theatre on Monday.

"The White Sister," which is an Inspiration production released by Metro., has been acclaimed one of the most significant films ever made The story was taken from the famous novel by F. Marion Crawford, and screened entirely in Italy and northern Africa.

Rome, Naples, Sorrento, Tivoli and even Mount Vesuvius, were some of the locations used, and the result according to critics in the larger cities, where the picture has played as a two dollar attraction, is the most beautiful production yet made.

Besides Miss Gish to interpret the thrilling story, the cast includes Ronald Colman, a newcomer to the screen, who has scored a sensational success; J. Barney Sherry, a motion picture pioneer; Gail Kane, heroine of many Broadway successes, and a thousand others drawn from the ranks of European players.

"The White Sister" tells the story of Angela Chiarmonte, daughter of an Italian prince, who is made penniless because of an intrigue of her older sister. The only thing left to sustain her is her love for Captain Giovanni Severi, of the Italian army.

For a time she is happy, but he is called to Africa on a military expedition and Angela is left to take up the life of a governess. Then she receives word that he has been killed by the Arabs. Stunned by the blow, Angela is driven frantic and in order to find some peace of mind and a definite place in life she takes the vows as a nun.

Shortly after this Giovanni, who has merely been held prisoner by Arabs, escapes, and returns to Rome. How Sister Angela solves the problem of choosing between her great earthly love and her heavenly vows, supplies the dramatic situation that leads up to the powerful climax.

"The White Sister" has been called the artistic triumph of the present film season. Miss Gish has never appeared to better advantage and her restrained conception of the difficult role of Sister Angela stands at the top of her many famous characterizations. Those who recall her in "The Birth of a Nation," "Way Down East," "Hearts of the World," and "Orphans of the Storm," will, it is promised, be delighted still further by her versatility, and the depth of her playing in her latest effort.

There is plenty of fun and entertainment in the Capitol programme for the week-end. The feature picture, with Reginald Denny in "The Reckless Age," abounds with laughs accompanies it is one of those affairs and comedy, and the comedy that that induce a giggle from start to finish. Good humour was the note of the good-sized audience that patronised the Capitol last evening.

Reginald Denny, erstwhile hero of fighting pictures, and more recently a sensational automobile racer in "Sporting Youth," is also a great comedian, even if he does persist in injecting thrills into his comedy. Any who doubt this need only see him in "The Reckless Age."

Denny does a little of everything he ever did before, from staging a sensational fight to riding a mad race in an automobile. But this time he does it in an atmosphere of laughs; the laughs of Earl Derr Bigger's Saturday Evening Post story, "Love Insurance," from which the play was made; a hilarious series of complications surrounding a nobleman who took insurance against failure to marry an heiress. Denny is the insurance expert, sent to protect the policy who has to protect the scion of nobility from a breach of promise suit, blackmailers, diamond thieves, and other troubles galore.

Denny plays the insurance man; he kidnaps a bogus earl and finally falls in love with the insured heiress —and then smashes through a startling and screamingly funny climax.

The cast is specially good. Ruth Dwyer is charming as the heiress in the case, and William Austin convincing as the perturbed nobleman. Hayden Stevenson plays an advertising specialist with a penchant for cooking up sensations, and May Wallace and John Steppling play the parents of the heroine. Tom McGuire, as a sportive millionaire, has a part he handles with eleverness, and Fred Malatesta as a fiery Latin seeking trouble to brew, adds a comic touch with some very good acting.

Harry Pollard, who guided Denny's destinies in "The Leather Pushers," and "Sporting Youth," directed.

AT THE ROYAL.

BETTY BALFOUR AT ROYAL ON THURSDAY.

Betty Balfour, better known locally as "Spuibs," will be at the Royal again on Thursday of next week in "Life, Love and Happiness," her newest production to arrive in this country. Betty is now the reigning queen of the movies in Britain.

In this production patrons will see a different Betty.. Just as much at home in Parisian gowns as she was in the flower girl costume that made her famous.

JAMES BROWNE IN IRISH SONGS AT ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

To-night is the last opportunity of seeing "April Showers," the Irish picture now playing to capacity crowds at the Royal.

James Browne accompanies the production with the lovable old Irish songs.

SHOULD WOMEN PROPOSE?

Did you know that it used to be a criminal offence in the Middle Ages to refuse the marriage of a woman?

Have girls the same right to flirt as men Shall women boldly tell men of their love? Should a woman propose marriage to a man?

And if not, why not? What is the basis of all the reticence on the part of the gentler sex? They do not hesitate to turn a man down coldly when they do not want him. Why then, shouldn't they make an open declaration to a man they do want?

Of course some immortal heroine haven't hesitated in this regard, but even with their example and with the examples of a growing number of modern women, the rank and file of girls and young women still play the same old game of putting it up to the man.

Perhaps this is all traceable to the days of the more or less well-known caveman. The caveman certainly did not like to be talked to. It is a matter of Biblical history that, beginning thousands of years ago, fathers took their sons aside and advised them to beware of her who lay in wait with honeyed words and perfumed with myrrh. Perhaps the denatured caveman of to-day is just as shy of the girl who talks out of her turn as the original of the species in pre-historic times.

Whatever the cause of the general dislike of women to propose and men to be proposed to, there comes a time in the lives of most women when they meet a man to whom they convey—sometimes subtly and sometimes less so—extremely direct messages of love. This is all right for the man if he is willing, but what should a poor fellow do who has six women propose to him at once, that is, in the course of a couple of weeks? This never happend, you say. Well, if you don't believe it, go to see "Second Youth," a motion picture drama based on Allan Updegraff's famous novel, which will appear at the Royal Theatre, next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

SCOTT WITH MONTREAL.

Former Youthful Toronto Pro Will Play In National League.

MONTREAL, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Gaston Scott, former youthful pro. hockey player of Toronto St. Patricks, has been signed for the new Montreal club, to play in the National Hockey League this winter.

The latest addition to the new club was a promising young junior player in Toronto back in 1922.

KITCHENER TEAM.

Only One Senior Hockey Team Will Be Entered in O.H.A. This Season.

KITCHENER, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Kitchener will have only one senior hockey team in the Ontario Hockey Association this season, and that team, for the first time in years, will not be in the Toronto group.

It is the intention of the local management to apply for admittance to the Big Four which will probably be enlarged by taking in the new London club.

TO ENTER TWO TEAMS.

Guelph Has Enough Hockey Material for Two Teams.

GUELPH, Nov. 1. — (Canadian Press).—An innovation in Guelph hockey circles this winter will be the placing of two Intermediate teams in the O.H.A. series. Owing to the amount of hockey talent available, two separate clubs have been organized, and an effort will be made to have the teams in different groups, one along with Stratford, Kitchener and New Hamburg, and the other with Brampton, Georgetown and Elora.

PLAYERS INJURED.

Two La Salle Rugby Players Suffering From Concussion of the Brain.

TORONTO, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Two De Lasalle players, Sheredin and Burns, were taken to St. Michael's Hospital last evening, following the Interscholastic O.R.F.U. game with the University of Toronto Schools.

Both are suffering from concussion of the brain and Burns is reported to be in a serious condition.

Both were reported resting comfortably early this morning.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

DE FEO OPERA STARS IN TOWN.

Gala Performance To-night.

Mr. De Feo and his stars have arrived here this morning in a special Pullman car, bringing with them a carload of scenery and an orchestra.

According to the press of Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto it is the best theatrical organisation of its kind that has ever visited Canada, and to-night a cordial reception worthy of such a distinguished artistic company will be given them by the people of our city.

The advance sale of the seats has been quite active, but it is advisable that those who have not yet made reservations for to-night should be at the theatre early, as the performance starts at 8.15 p.m.

The De Feo Opera Company will appear to-night in a popular presentation of the two best known operas — "Rigoletto" and "Aida"—which most of the people have been made familiar with by gramophone records and radio broadcasting.

To-night all these beautiful melodies will be sung by artistes possessing voices of great beauty, and having the freshness of youth.

As this is the only appearance of the De Feo Opera stars in our city, it is to be hoped that the Grand Opera House will be filled to capacity.

Canadian soldiers who served with the C.E.F. during the great war all knew of Captain Hurley, the Australian motion picture daredevil just as well as they knew our famous Dumbells. It was Hurley who left France to go with General Allenby into Egypt and Palestine. It is this same daring soldier-photographer who, returning from fifteen months with Shackleton and his expedition to the South Pole arrived a few months ago in New York with a picture story of life in New Guinea in a place never before trodden by white man. His photographs created the biggest excitement in American newspaper and magazine offices. And then he showed his motion pictures at Carnegie Hall and blase New York was thrilled as never before. He had found a tribe of head hunters whose facial and other peculiarities were so much Semetic that scientists at once pronounced them the "lost tribe of Israel."

IN MEMORIAM.
FOY.—In ever loving memory of Ernest Charles Foy, who passed away at Hamilton Sanitorium on November 2nd, 1922:

Cry not farewell, oh anguish stricken heart,
When cruel death, tears loving hearts apart,
Be not disconsolate, though hope has fled,
And all worth cherishing on earth seems dead.

Death is not death to man's immortal soul,
'Tis but the passing to the Heavenly goal;
The consumation of God's wondrous plan.
Fulfillment of the promise made to man.

Our heroes live, though death's funeral pall
Shrouds their noble dust beyond recall.
They rise transcendant victors o'er the strife
To love supernal and eternal life.

Mourn not the brave whose peerless souls are sped,
Though flesh may die their spirits are not dead.
Freed from the earth, by Him who died to save
They vanquish death, and triumph o'er the grave.

God gave not life that life should pass away,
Nor love to fade and perish in a day,
Life is eternal, love shall e'er remain,
And we in His good time shall meet again.

Yes, we shall meet, and heart to heart be known
Clothed in a raiment nobler than our own;
When this corruptible shall corruption free;
At last puts on its immortality.

DALTON BAKER WILL GIVE RECITAL HERE

Noted Singer Will Be Heard in the Conservatory of Music.

Mr. Dalton Baker, famous English baritone, will give a song recital in the Conservatory Hall on Monday evening, November 17th, assisted by his well-known pupil, Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, soprano.

At the early age of ten he joined the famous resident choir school of All Saints, Margaret Street, London, as leading soprano. At the age of fourteen he was appointed organist and choirmaster of His Majesty's Guards' Chapel, Chelsea, leaving there at the age of sixteen to assume the responsible position of organist and choirmaster of St. Mary Magdalene's Church, London, where his daily duties for seven years laid the foundation of musical knowledge such as few singers possess.

While continuing his study and work as an organist, he won the Mence Smith scholarship for singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London, and within one year (in 1902) he made his debut at St. James' Hall, and was launched on a career as a singer which is without parallel in the history of British sigers.

He was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy of Music in 1903, and was engaged for his first great appearance as Elijah, in the Royal Albert Hall at the record age of twenty-four years. He was commanded by King Edward to sing at the State Concert, Windsor Castle, in November, 1905, in honour of the King of Greece, singing with Melba, Mary Garden and Zenatello. He made repeated appearances at all the great English festivals, and with every important musical organization in London and throughout Great Britain and Ireland.

His position in the musical world is perhaps best indicated by the following excerpt from the press:

Britain's Greatest Baritone.

Mr. Dalton Bakes is one of the few recognized baritones who appear with such unfailing regularity at the London concertts and the great oratorio productions, that their positions as leaders are unassailable. His voice, a rich luxuriant baritone, is of exceptional quality and power, and it is a recognized fact that he is considered to be the most cultured, musicianly baritone of the day. He has sung for the Royal Choral Society since 1904, in practically all the great provincial festivals, and there is no season of London concerts in which he does not appear.

It was felt that with the illustrious name of Santley as representing the greatetst baritone of his time, nothing would be more fitting than to secure the greatetst British baritone of our time, with the result that this month are announced the first records of Mr. Dalton Baker.— World of Records, April, 1913.

On this continent he has made many appearances in recital and concert in New York, and many other cities in the United States. He was the star at the Cincinnati Festival, 1908, singing with Schumann-Heink and Gadski. His appearances on both continents have been with Melba, Albani, Mary Garden, Gadski, Fremstad, Schumann-Heink, Caruso, McCormack, Zenatello, Paderewski, Godowsky, Pachmann, Kreisler, Ysaye, Elman, and others as fellow artists.

Tickets $1.00, are now obtainable at the Conservatory of Music, Kent's Drug Store, and all pupils of Mrs. Park.

of our dear son, and brother, Earnest Foy, who died Nov. 2nd., 1922
"Quickly and suddenly came the call,
His sudden death surprised us all,
But only those who loved can tell
The sorrow of not saying a last farewell."
Though surrounded by friends, we are lonesome,
In the midst of our joys we are blue,
With a smile on our face, we've a heartache,
Longing, dear Ernest for you.
In your home you are always remembered,
Fond memories cling to your name,
We who loved you in life very dearly,
Still love you in death, just the same.

FREIGHT TRAIN KILLS TEN AND INJURES FORTY

Backed Into Street Car Crowded With Hallowe'en Party in Their Costumes.

WATCHMAN HELD

Gates Were Up and Empty Whiskey Bottle Found in Tower.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Ten passengers were killed and two score injured some seriously early Sunday morning when a Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad freight train, backing into the yards here, and wrecked a crowded street car crossing the tracks. Most of the victims were neighbors returning from a Hallowe'en party and many wore masquerade costumes.

The dead are: Catherine Ruedhausen, 21, Mrs. Mary Garrity, 35, and four year old daughter, Anna May, Mrs. Elizabeth Burns, 40, unidentified women 20; Patrick O'Malley, 57; Bennie Cadalieri, 30; William Welch, 45. Dr. M. Shenkin, 70; Elmer Balanfleth, no age.

Crushed in Panic

Mrs. Garrity and her daughter were suffocated and trampled in the panic which ensued when the street car was shunted across the street and crashed into a watchman's tower coroner's physicians said. Police squads and firemen who rushed to the scene, found the passengers screaming and fighting in the darkness for the exits. Rescuers used saws, axes and crowbars to break away the wreckage and extricate the victims.

Joseph Brahe, 59, crossing watchman, was ordered held for the coroner's inquest today after policemen found the gates which protect the crossing intact after the accident, indicating, they said, that they had ont been lowered to warn the car crew. Two physicians who examined him shortly after the wreck said he had been drinking, and detectives said an empty bottle, smelling of whiskey, had been found in the tower.

The crews of the street car and freight train also questioned, were released after railroad and car company officials promised Coroner Oscar Wolff they would have them present at the inquest. Carl Olson, conductor, and Robert Glenn, motor man of the car, said the crossing gates were up as the car started across the railroad right-of-way.

Six More May Die

Physicians expressed doubt of the recovery of six of the injured, among them two small children and several women. The unidentified woman wore a masquerade costume and had only an initialed ring as a clue to her identity.

Coroner Wolff and Morgan A. Collins, chief of police, took personal charge of the investigation. John Gaskett a railroad switchman, told questioners the crossing gates had been lowered while some cars were switched on another track, but had been raised when the freight train was about fifteen feet from the crossing. He said he shouted to the tower man to lower the gates and signalled to the engineers of the freight train to stop, but the collision occurred before he made himself heard.

Did not See Train

Olson, the conductor, said he saw the tower man raise the gates and ran to the crossing. He looked in both direction,s he stated, but did not see the approaching train and signalled the motorman to proceed.

The first two cars of the train were gondolas and bore no lights, investigators found.

Walter Vinzent and Nicholas Wiedel, engineers of the two locomotives of the train, said Gaskett had signalled for an immediate stop but momentum carried the train forward.

Most of the passengers were relatives and friends, who had attended a party in the neighborhood of the accident.

BALDWIN CROWD NEEDS BENCHES OF OPPOSITION

Jubilant Conservatives Still Celebrating Great Political Victory—Have 410 Seats.

FAVORED BY LUCK

Polled Eight Million Votes Against Opponents' Eight and Half Million.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—(Canadian Press).—The jubilant Conservatives with 410 seats in parliament, as compared with Labor's 152 and the Liberals' 40, have not yet ceased celebratin gtheir victory. In contrast, Former Premiers Asquith and Lloyd George conferred together at the formers' London home Saturday on how best to retrieve the fallen fortunes of the Liberals, while the members of the Labor Government were engaged in the equally doleful busines of preparing to quit their official residences in Downing Street and the other attractions of office holding.

Under British law ministers qualify for pensions only when they have served four years in office, and even then they are expected to plead that their financial resources are unequal to the strain of living in the manner to which they have been accustomed as ministers. Hence the loss of their official salaries, which they enjoyed for a brief eight months, will in many cases hardly be recouped by their ordinary vocation on their retirement to private life, except in those rather numerous cases where they will resume office as president or secretary of the big trade unions, which positions have been kept open for them during their period in the ministry.

The Turn of Luck.

It will be long before discussion ceases over the surprising luck of the elections which has given the Conservatives, who suffered an electoral defeat less than a year ago, so many seats that they will be unable to find accomodations on the government side of commons and will perforce overflow into the opposition benches.

The usual explanation is that many thousands of ordinarily apathetic voters were induced to avert the supposed danger of Socialism. Many people argue that it was the Russian business caused the Conservative flood tide but this ignores the patent fact that the Liberals, who were perfectly sound in their opposition to Labor's Russian policy, suffered a much greater electoral disaster than did Labor.

Polling Was Heavy

The completed returns show that in round numbers the Conservatives polled eight million votes, Labor five and a half million votes and the Liberals three milion. Although the electoral register was increased by only 775,000 since the last elections, two million more persons voted than on that occasion. Labour lost seats, but polled one million votes more than at the previous election while the Liberal poll was reduced by one million.

Given these figures, it is claimed

AGED MAN PREFERRED DEATH TO POOR HOUSE

Slashed His Thoat With Jackknife in Sarnia Jail.

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 3.—Unable to face the prospects of spending his declining years a ward of the county in the Chatham House of Refuge, George W. Bertram, aged 70, attempted suicide in a cell in the city police station Saturday evening. Bertram had a jacknife in his possession and with this he cut himself severely on both sides of the throat. Police officers heard the old man groaning and he was rushed to the City Hospital. It is believed that he will recover.

PRINCE CLOSES WEMBLEY'S SHOW

British Empire Exhibition Was Attended by Eighteen Millions.

MAY OPEN AGAIN

LONDON, Nov. 3.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—In the speech which he delivered at the closing of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley Saturday afternoon, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, president of the big fair, dropped a hint that it may be re-opened soon, probably next spring.

"Though I have made many visits to the exhibition," said the prince, "I feel that I have not been here often enough to exhaust all of its wonderful attractions, and although I fully appreciate the many difficulties to be surmounted I understand that negotiations are taking place in connection with the proposal to re-open the exhibition."

Although the weather was execrable the Prince's popularity was as manifest as ever.

A fine military display had been planned for the afternoon, with marching and counter-marching by massed bands of gaurds and a ceremonial hauling down of the British and Dominion flags, but the stadium was so thoroughly rain-soaked that even the guards had to play under cover. Large sections of unprotected seats were left unfilled and the actual striking of the standards was almost invisible through the mist.

Still, as the Prince's automobile was seen striking the stadium on its way to the grandstand, 50,000 people who were in the covered seats or were braving the weather under umbrellas in others sent up great cheers. He was received by the exhibition officials and Commissioners from the Dominions and colonies, but it was noticeable that not one member of the Labor Government attended. The prince was in a tail hat and morning dress and was hailed once more with great enthusiasm as he stepped out on to what should have been turf in the pouring rain to inspect the guard of honor mounted by Welsh Guards.

Then he read his speech which was broadcast. He spoke particularly of how the exhibition had helped the different parts of the British Empire to realize not only their potentialities and reciprocal wants and aspirations, but also their problems and difficulties. He pointed out that 18,000,000 had passed the turnstiles since the exhibition was opened, of whom 5,000,000 were children.

BILLY SUNDAY'S SERMON SOLVED MANY LOOTINGS

Woman Moved by His "Wages of Sin" Reveals All to Police.

14 ARE ARRESTED

Goods Stolen From Express and Post Office Are Recovered.

ELMIRA, Nov. 3. — When this city's Protestant ministers invited the Rev. W. A. ("Billy") Sunday to conduct a six weeks' evangelistic campaign here it was expected that hundreds would "hit the famous "sawdust trail," but it was not anticipated that his bitter denunciation of sin would result in solving American Railway Express Company and Government parcel post robberies which had practically baffled the country's best detectives for two years. However, by one simple statement in the course of a sermon on "The Wages of Sin Is Death," "Billy" Sunday unlocked the mystery and brought the guilty into court.

Before an audience of 7,000 in the Sunday tabernacle, the famous evangelist declared that "no person in whose heart reposes guilty knowledge need expect to make peace with God until confession is first made," and the statement struck terror to one woman's heart, for she had been concealing the knowledge of extensive robberies for nearly ten years and yet devoutly wished to make her peace with her Creator. Leaving the tabernacle she sought the seclusion of her room and remained upon her knees in agonized prayer until the first blush of dawn, when her decision was made.

Confesses to Police.

Going to Police Headquarters she told the astonished night Captain that she wished to confess her knowledge of robberies in which she had no part and by which she had not profited, but which she had permitted to continue to shield those near and dear to her. Express company detectives and post office inspectors were sent for and to them she revealed the details of organized thefts extending over a period of ten years, which they supposed had all been perpetrated within two years.

During the ensuing three days arrests were made in every section of Elmira and in nearby towns, express company and Lackawanna railroad employees being taken into custody as well as their alleged accomplices. Goods valued at nearly $5,000 were recovered from various homes, while one of the prisoners admitted that additional goods, worth at least $5,000, had either been disposed of or burned, in the latter case to escape expected detection.

It is charged that the defendants, who are now under bail to await the action of the next Federal Grand

PNEUMONIC PLAGUE IN LOS ANGELES KILLS 17

All Who Attended Funeral of First Victim Are Dead.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 3.—(Canadian Press). — Pneumonia plague Sunday claimed three more victims in Los Angeles, raising to seventeen the total of those who have perished since the outbreak of the disease in the Mexican quarter about two weeks ago. Any doubt as to the nature of the malady which carried off Mrs. Luciano Samarano on October 19 last, and then killed, one by one, practically all who attended her funeral, was dispelled yesterday by Dr. W. H. Kellogg, director of the State Hygienic Laboratory, on his arrival here to take charge of the situation.

Bodies of the dead are being burned. Eight bodies already have been cremated, it was said. It is understood, guards will be thrown around the whole portion of the Mexican settlement which is affected to prevent all entrance from the outside.

The pneumonic plague is the same disease that struck London in the fifteenth century.

State and Federal Health authorities to-day were moving to the aid of Los Angeles, in its fight to block the spread of pneumonic plague, which at the latest reports to-day to-day had claimed 21 victims in the city's Mexican quarters. Ten cases under treatment at the general hospital were said to be critical.

State health department officials announce that the prospects for bringing the epidemic under control are good. Squads of policemen guard the Mexican quarter.

The mortality rate of the disease, which is alleged to be bubonic plague has approached one hundred per cent.

DOZEN WOUNDED IN KLAN CLASH

National Guard Patrolling Niles, Ohio, After Saturday's Rioting.

TWO MAY DIE

NILES, Ohio, November 3 (Canadian Press). — With Ohio National Guardsmen still patrolling the city yesterday Niles was quiet following Saturday's rioting between Ku Klux Klan forces and anti Klansmen in connection with a scheduled parade which did not take place.

The list of wounded still stood at about a dozen with four men in Warren City Hospital, two of whom may die from bullets.

No one was killed.

More than 600 troops were on duty yesterday, and others arrived during the day as parts of the various units of the 145th Infantry, ordered out by Governor Donahey.

Major-General Benson W. Hough, of the Ohio National Guard, arrived early yesterday and took charge, relieving Colonel L. S. Connelly.

General Hough was in conference yesterday with County Prosecutor Harvey A. Burgess Sheriff John E. Thomas, and Mayor Harvey C. Kistler, discussing the possibility of bringing about criminal prosecutions of those responsible for the rioting.

An investigation with this proposal in view will be conducted by the county and city officials with the military co-operating, it was said.

Military authorities said that more stringent military control would be in effect and orders would be strictly enforced to keep the streets clear.

During the day automobiles were stopped and searched before entering the city, and were not allowed within 150 feet of each other.

Business houses were open as usual with the exception of pool rooms and picture shows, which were kept closed by the military authorities.

OTONABEE TAKES ANOTHER LIFE; FRIENDS SAVED

Russell Thompson Drowned Yesterday From Punt at Nassau.

BODY RECOVERED

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Blodgett Narrowly Escaped Same Fate.

Russell Thompson, 38, of 184 London street, was drowned yesterday evening near Nassau dam and his companions, George H. Blodgett, 39, and his wife Margaret, 37, of 213 Antrim street narrowly escaped the same fate.

Thompsons' body was recovered and County Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young decided last night not to hold an inquest.

The tragedy occurred at 4.30 when the party of three was spending an hour in a flat bottomed punt between the railroad bridge and the canal bridge above Nassau dam. How it occurred is not known.

Thompson, known to his associates as 'Bunny" may have been fishing, as hooks were found in his clothing. The punt having turned completely over, al lits contents were lost. The body was recovered about 5 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett were rescued by Mr. Nugent and taken to a nearby house where dry clothing was given them. Mr. Blodgett was delirious and no connected account of the affair could be obtained. Dr. J. A. Morgan attended the rescued couple.

City detective W. Carey and Provincial Constable N. H. Maker joined in the search and investigation.

TOWNSHIP BOARDS FOR MANAGEMENT OF SCHOOLS

CHATHAM, Ont., November 3. — The elimination of rural school sections with country schools governed by one board elected for the entire township is a scheme not outside the realm of probability, according to S. R. Montgomery, Dover, a member of the Petitions and Legislation Committee of the Ontario Trustees and Ratepayers Association.

The matter is to be discussed at the conference of the association next year.

It is thought that rural school matters can be administered more efficiently by the township school board elected in like manner to a township council than by the present system.

WHOLE FAMILY HURLED TO DEATH AT CROSSING ON WAY TO CHURCH

Father, Mother and Two Children Instantly Killed by Train Near Kingston.

JUST LEFT HOME

Father Driving Hesitated Near Track, Then Tried To Cross.

KINGSTON, Nov. 3.—(Canadian Press)—Joseph Roberts, well known farmer of Findlay, his wife and two children, Lenwood, aged 11 years, and Lavina, aged 10 years, were instantly killed Sunday morning when their automobile was struck by an engine a mile east of Findlay station, about twelve miles east of this city.

Their car was struck by a light C.N.R. engine and caboose when Roberts attempted to cross the track in front of it, only a few rods from his home, and as he and his family were setting out at 10.30 a.m. to attend Sababth school at Woodburn church. He had to cross two tracks to reach the main road.

Hesitated First.

Coming up on to the tracks, he hesitated, and then apparently tried to get across before the approaching engine, which was travelling from Brockville drawing a caboose, and one car. The sengine hit the automobile almost in the centre with terrific force, driving it up the track about fifty feet, and throwing it to the side. All four occupants were instantly killed, Mrs. Roberts being carried along on the cow catcher of the engine.

Immediately the train was stopped, and first aid was rendered, but it was found that the whole family had been killed. Mr. Roberts was badly cut about the head, while the others, though not bearing many outward marks, were so internally injured that they died at once. The automobile was totally wrecked, the greater part of it being smashed almost to matchwood. Even the gasoline tank was twisted to pieces.

Thrown On Engine.

Mrs. Roberts was thrown on the front of the engine and carried there until the engine was stopped, almost in front of the Campbell and Latimore granite quarry at Findlay. She was still alive when taken from the engine, but only breathed a few times. The other three were instantly killed. No one saw the accident except the train men.

The engine was not travelling fast at the time and the engineer stated that he did not realize that Roberts would attempt to cross the track until it was too late for him to stop the locomotive. The car had been stopped to allow the little boy to open and close the gate through which they came. Roberts started the car in his attempt to cross the track in front of the train.

Coroner R. J. Gardiner, of Kingston, was immediately called and he decided on an inqeust to-night in Kingston.

FINDS WATER CASED IN ROCK.

Scientist Puts Its Age in Crystal Prison at 10,000,000 Years.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Drops of water more than 10,000,000 years old, preserved in quartz since an age before life began to appear on earth, will be exhibited in the Field Museum here.

The water was obtained in South America by O. C. Farrington, head of the museum's department of geology, who found it imprisoned in crystal quartz taken from rock formations at Bon Jesus—dos Meiras, Bahia, Brazil. The estimate of its age was based on the fact that the rock formations were of the archean age, asserted by some scientists to have existed 550,000,000 years ago. The water is clear and sparkling in its crystal container.

WHEN THE CHILL SHOOK P. W.

This is a most unusual photograph of the Prince of Wales. It was taken at Montreal where he became chilled while riding ,and was ordered to remain indoors a day, all engagements being cancelled. The wear and tear of his present tour seemed to be telling on the Prince when this photograph was made.

SKELETON FOUND.

Jagged Hole in Skull—Buried In Old Cemetery.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., November 3. — While digging in a ditch on Buller street on Saturday, Thomas Brebyn, a laborer of this city, unearthed a human skeleton.

The excavation is being made on the site of the old Methodist cemetery and the skeleton is believed to be that of a Methodist parishioner of Woodstock's early days. A jagged hole suggestive of the mark of a bullet, was noted in the skull but this cannot be identified with any incident in the known history of the city.

The owner of the property on which the remains were discovered, states that he will see that the bones will be given decent burial.

BALDWIN'S TASK AN EXTREMELY DIFFICULT ONE

Lady Nancy Astor May Be Included In Baldwin's Cabinet.

LIBERALS ALIVE.

Ramsay MacDonald Will Present His Resignation To-morrow.

(By Lloyd Allen, United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Lady Nancy Astor, former Virginia beauty, may be included in the cabinet which Stanley Baldwin prepared to-day in anticipation of an invitation sometime to-morrow to form a government.

Strong political influences are at work to have either the American-born peeress who was elected to Parliament at Plymouth, for the fourth time, in the next ministry. Lady Astor has had the greater political experience.

It was confirmed to-day that Ramsay MacDonald would present the resignation of his government to morrow. The Prime Minister put in a busy day winding up his affairs at No 10 Downing street. King George arrived at Buckingham Palace to receive MacDonald's resignation and commission Baldwin to succeed him.

Baldwin's task is an extremely difficult one. He must decide within the next few days how to allot 52 ministerships and undersecretaryships among 77 persons.

Advocates of Lady Astor in the cabinet point to the fact that Labor had Margaret Bondfield in its cabinet and that the women's vote was a considerable factor in the Conservative landslide.

The Daily Herald to-day indignant ly denies that Ramsay MacDonald intends to relinquish his much discussed motor car, given him by Sir Alexander Grant.

"The Prime Minister has said nothing about the matter and does not intend to. It is a private matter and not one for public discussion," the newspaper said. The Liberals have started a press campaign, insisting their party is still "intensely alive", although it has but 41 seats.

Women are for progress but at the same time they want this progress to be along constitutional lines, Lady Astor, re-elected for parliament in last Wednesday's elections, to-day told newspaper correspondents.

"That is the reason, in my opinion," she said, "why they voted so solidly Conservative. They are instinctively anti-Socialistic."

Lady Astor pointed out that all the Conservative women members of the last parliament—the Duchess of Atholl Mrs. Hilton Philipson and herself—had been returned, while other Conservative women candidates had polled heavily but had failed owing to the large majorities they had to break down.

Liberals and Labor women candidates were swept away in the landslide which befell their parties, she explained. She insisted that the women electorate had not voted against women, but against parties. Lady Astor particularly regretted the defeat of Mrs. Margaret Wintringham, Liberal, which she attributed to misrepresentation and the suggestion that Mrs. Wintringham was a Socialist.

Mrs. Mabel Lynn, 19, of Chicago, is going to give up her husband to "the other woman." William Lynn did not bother to divorce his 19-year-old wife when he "married" Mrs. Nellie May Smith, 45. Now Mabel is willing to give up Lynn. "Because," she says, "love is a treasure. I have years yet for love. I am young. But she is growing old."

U. S. ELECTION IS NEARING AN END

Coolidge and Davis Will Address By Radio On Eve of Election.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—(Canadian Press).—The United States election campaign of 1924 is passing through its final hours in a swirl of activity, destined to make political history. For the first time two Presidential candidates, President Coolidge and John W. Davis, are preparing to address an election eve message to radio audiences that will extend the country over.

Two Vice-Presidential candidates, Governor Bryan and Senator Wheeler, are unholding precedent by continuing through to-day their speaking campaigns in Nebraska and Maryland respectively.

Senator La Follette awaits the results of the election at his home in Madison, Wis., and Charles G. Dawes has returned to his residence in Evanston.

Fair weather is forecast for the election day, and a record vote is probable.

GAMEKEEPER FACES CHARGE AT COBOURG ASSIZES TODAY OF MURDERING B. M'CRODAN

William John Crossen is Said to Have Shot Two Men.

ROWE RECOVERED

Case Has Attracted Wide Attention as Parties Were Well Known.

COBOURG, Nov. 3.—Wilful murder is charged against William John Crossen, whose case comes before the Grand Jury here in the Fall Assizes which open today under Hon. Mr. Justice Wright. Crossen is charged with slaying Bryon A. McCrodan, 175 Donvegan Road, Toronto, by shooting him on May 18.

The hearing of the case aroused widespread interest in the district, as the parties are well known along the lake shore.

The prosecution will be conducted by W. F. Kerr, K.C. and if a true bill is returned the accused will be defended by R. H. Greer, K.C., Toronto, asisted by A. R. Willmott of Cobourg.

Story of the Tragedy.

The shooting, as a result of which McCrodan died, took place on Sunday morning at Baltimore on the estate of William James Crossen, who is not related to his gamekeeper, William John Crossen, the accused. McCrodan, who was factory superintendent and chemist of the Pure Gold Manufacturing Co. in Toronto, came from Toronto and set out on a fishing trip accompanied by Edward Rowe. The men are said to have driven past the fishing pond on the Crossen estate, and then walked back. According to their story, they were accosted in the bush by the game-keeper, who ordered them to halt.

Conflicting stories are told as to the shooting. One claims that the men were shot while going in the direction ordered, while another says they were shot when attempting to escape.

Dr. Gordon Armstrong of Roseneath was summoned by telephone about 5 o'clock in the morning and found his friend McCrodan in the game keeper's cottage. Following a trail of blood, the doctor found Rowe unconscious in a ditch by the roadside. He had crawled a mile through the bush in search of help.

McCrodan was removed to Wellsley Hospital in Toronto, where he was operated on by Dr. Herbert Bruce and Dr. Armstrong. After rallying the injured man died a few days later.

Rowe was treated in the General Hospital at Cobourg and will be one of the principal witnesses before the Grand Jury and, if a true bill is found, at the trial.

Many Poachers.

It is said that the game warden had suffered through the depredations of poachers who had visited the fish pond and escaped. He is said to have fatally wounded McCrodan and slightly injured Rowe by firing two shots at practically point blank range from a 12 guage shot gun.

In view of the unusual nature of the case, it attracted the attention of the higher officials in the province, and Attorney General Hon. W. F. Nickle, K.C., assigned Inspector Hammond of the Criminal Investigation Department to make an investigation. Others who took part in the affair at different stages were Deputy Attorney General Bayley; Assistant Crown Attorney James W. McFadden; and Provincial Constable T. W. Cousans.

The accused was charged before Police Magistrate Floyd on May 26.

DOZEN WOUNDED

Crowds were not permitted to gather. All Klansmen had left the field early yesterday, where they assembled for Saturday's parade.

Grave trouble started at 12.30 o'clock on Saturday afternoon. Klansmen had been gathering all the morning. They had established a camp in a field a mile from the centre of the city on Main Street.

The anti-Klan faction had also been busy. They established a camp in a vacant lot on a side street not far from the centre of the town.

The parade was to have started at 3 o'clock. The anti-Klan faction posted guards at all the entrances to the town. Street cars, interurban buses, automobiles, and all other conveyances were stopped by armed forces The vehicles and their occupants were searched for weapons and Klan regalia.

When either was found it was confiscated ,and the owners refused entrance to the city. Any one who showed resistance to the search and seizure were beaten.

Men in Car Shoot Into Crowd.

The streets were lined on both sides with busloads of people waiting to watch the parade, or events consequent upon attempts to hold it.

An automobile passed along the main stret. In it were four men. Bullets were fired point blank into the crowd. Three of the men now in the hospital at Warren fell under the fire. That was the beginning of the actual fighting. The mobs surged back and forth through the streets.

An automobile containing four deputy sheriffs was stopped at Federal and Main Streets. The men were forced to leave their machine at the point of guns. Their badges and firearms were taken from them. The mob then set upon them and beat them before letting them go.

One of the men lying in the hospital was alone in an automobile when thirty men stopped him. The machine was riddled with bullets, the tires shot off, and the whole machine made useless.

By 2 o'clock the County Jail at arren was jammed with "gun toters." City police and militiamen were going through the crowds searching the men for weapons. The police stations in Niles also were filled to capacity.

As soon as word of the trouble was flashed to Governor Donahey he issued a proclamation placing Niles and the surrounding country under martial law, and Colonel Connelly took charge.

Colonel Connelly called Dr. C. B. Hart, head of the Klan in Warren, to the City Hall. He ordered that the parade be called off and then issued orders closing up the city.

Among other things, all tourists were barred from the vicinity.

Mayor Harvey C. Kistler issued a statement in which he asked the citizens of the town to cause no trouble because of the parade. He said that the Flaming Circle, an anti-Klan organisation, had not asked for a permit to parade, although they had talked of having one. The Mayor said that had the request been made he would have granted the permit.

The Mayor said the Klansmen would parade without masks, and there would be no cause for stirring the passions of men because of the parade.

The men opposed to the Klan, it is said, had no intention of parading, but formed their forces to prevent the Klan from marching.

Frank McDermott ,one of the men dying in the hospital, is the man who went to Mayor Kistler and demanded that he rescind the permit for the parade.

KLANSMEN MAROONED.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., November 3 (Canadian Press). — One hundred members of the Ku Klux Klan were mtrooned in their meetisg place in Henrietta yesterday aftersoon when 1,000 anti-Klansmen gathered about the hall and dared them to come out, it was reported here last night.

The Klansmen met to discuss the plans for the election on Tuesday, it was stated.

KLAN SHOWERED STONES.

TROY, N.Y., November 3. — County officials yesterday were investigating reports that a Democratic rally at Boyntonville, near here, was broken up on Saturday night by persons in the uniform of the Ku Klux Klan.

Speakers at the rally are said to have been accosted at the door by the alleged Klansmen and warned not to conduct the meeting.

When they persisted and began their addresses, shots were fired through the widows, followed by a shower of stones.

BRITAIN BUILDS AIR TRANSPORTS BIG ENOUGH TO MOVE ITS ARMIES

THEY CAN BRING RESERVES IN A HURRY

By MILTON BRONNER.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Aerial transportation of troops loaded with machine guns and accomplished safely, swiftly and comfortably!

It's no longer a theory. It's an accomplished fact. England has done it.

The war and air ministries don't beat the big drum about it. They don't advertise it. But the feat has been pulled off so many times now that the war-making powers of Britain no longer look upon it as an unusual thing.

As soon as airplanes were built which flew safely to Paris from London and vice versa, carrying six or eight passengers, the airplane men and the army got busy with pencil and paper and began planning troop-carriers.

Theoretically there was nothing to prevent the dream being carried into execution. But paper theories are often hard to carry into actual fact. In this case, however, it was done easily.

The great Vickers company constructed airplanes that could carry 12 passengers and two pilots. And the army bought them so promptly that England was able to give wild tribes in Mesopotamia the surprise of their lives.

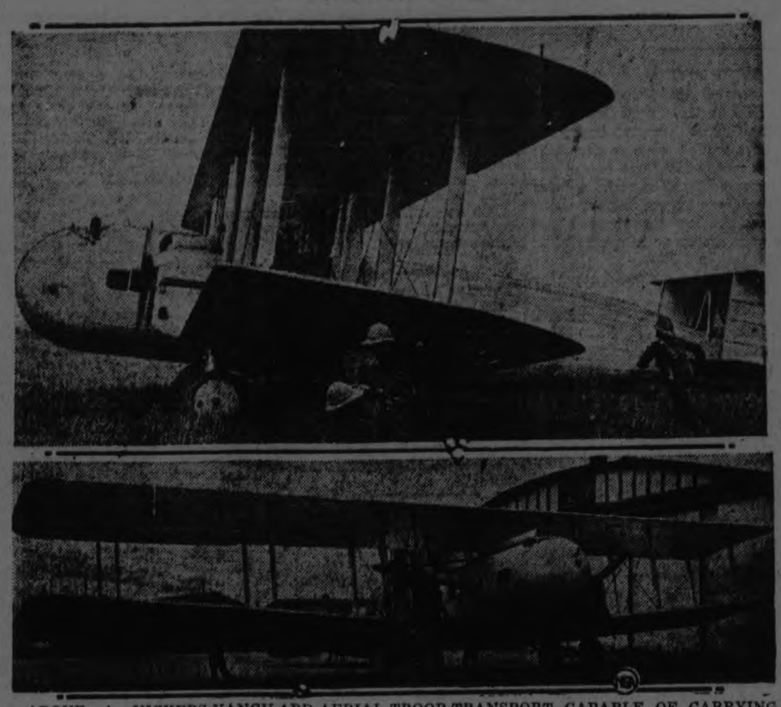
Revolt Was Short.

Natives were rebelling against British authority and were making themselves very troublesome. They felt safe because there were no railways in the territory where they were on the rampage and motor transport was difficult if not all but impossible.

But one fine morning two big squadrons of troop-carriers came roaring down into the desert country with a company or so of veteran British troops. And they had plenty of machine guns with them. That particular rebellion died in about 30 minutes.

For army authorities all over the world it opened a new vista.

The troop-carriers are not only useful in deserts and plains where there are no railways, but likewise are of enormous potential value in a war such as the last great one. There were many instances where the allied line was thinly held by troops and where it was next to impossible to reinforce them quickly on account of congestion on the railways and the roadways. An ample supply of troop-carrying airplanes would have made the difference between victory and defeat.



ABOVE—A VICKERS-VANGUARD AERIAL TROOP TRANSPORT CAPABLE OF CARRYING 22 MEN AND TWO PILOTS.

BELOW—A VICKERS-VERNON TROOP TRANSPORT CAPABLE OF CARRYING 12 MEN AND TWO PILOTS. A SQUADRON OF THESE CARRIED A BRITISH FORCE INTO MESOPOTAMIA, BREAKING UP A NATIVE REBELLION IN HALF AN HOUR.

Encouraged by success of the Vernons the Vickers interests have turned out the biggest troop-carrier ever manufactured and operated successfully. It is known as the Vickers-Vanguard. It carries 22 troopers and two air pilots.

Its power is supplied by two Rolls-Royce Condor engines, each of 675 horsepower. Its type is that of a twin tractor biplane-landplane. It has an enclosed cabin for its passengers, which looks very much like the inside of a London bus, with the addition of a washroom for the travellers.

Carries 24 Men.

The over-all length is 53 feet and the height 17 feet 3 inches. The machine itself, plus the water she carries, weighs 10,910 pounds. It carries a load of 260 gallons of petrol and 18 gallons of oil.

In addition to the weight of two pilots and 22 troopers, it carries 660 pounds of baggage and 103 pounds of sundries. So that in all, when loaded, the weight is nearly nine tons.

The machine is made in the main of spruce and elm. The full maximum speed is about 100 miles an hour. The minimum is 47. It can cruise a total of 470 miles. This big type of machine has not yet been used by the army. One of them is shortly to be tested in the passenger service by the Imperial Airways Company.

Thoretically there is nothing to prevent the building of airplanes carrying 200 to 300 troops, but aeronautical authorities here don't think it will ever be attempted.

To begin with one huge machine of this kind would cost as much as 10 of the Vickers-Vanguard type. If anything gets out of whack with such a huge machine, it is a serious loss. If anything goes wrong with one or two of the smaller machines, there are still the other eight or nine to give active service to the army.

PEARLS SEASON'S RAGE

(By Hedda Hoyt.)

NEW YORK, November 1 (United Press). — If pearls mean tears, Milady is in for a weeping spell this winter.

Huge imitation pearls are chosen in preference to real pearls of smaller sizes by the fashionables. Pearls as large as robin's eggs are fashioned into chokers, long necklaces, earrings, bracelets, hairpins, and whatnot.

For day wear the choker seems to be the important item. Choker pearls may be as large as one wishes and ranging in colour from natural tones to greenish, silver, gunmetal. Chokers of pendant type are quite becoming to the woman with a slender throat as the pendant of pearls fills in the natural hollow of the throat.

Another choker type is chosen for evening wear with the low-cut gown. This is also made of large beads in natural pearl shades and clasps in the rear, with one long strand of pearls hanging down the back, like a Chinaman's queue. Coloured beads are usually added to the pearl chain to give newness. Emeralds are the usual contrast. Of course, neither the pearls or emeralds are real stones, but in spite of their imitation, they are worn by smartly gowned persons.

Double Necklaces.

Double necklaces of pearls with one chain shorter than the other are also worn for evening wear, the longest chain hanging below the waistline and set with three huge emerald beads in the centre.

Pearl earrings are worn mostly for evening occasions and they are generally composed of three graduated pearls set in pendant style. Bracelets of large pearls with pendants corresponding with the pendants of the earrings are also popular.

Those who care for more costly types of pearls are choosing tiny seed pearls, which are woven into chains, forming necklaces, earrings, and bracelets.

One of the newest jewellery notes is the wearing of two chokers of different colours, such as one old gold bead choker and one silver bead choker. In this case, one choker is just a bit longer than the other, as each must fit rather snugly about the throat.

Rings set with three huge cultivated Japanese pearls are shown in many shops and cheaper imitations of the same may be found in department stores.

There is a decided rage in New

Oriental Rings.

York for costume rings of Oriental type. Many art students are paying their tuitions by making these rings after school hours. Usually they are made of oxidised silver and set with several semi-precious stones of contrasting colours. The mounting is usually one of silver leaves and the sets combined together are jade, turmaline, aquamarine and imitation pearl.

These rings are very large and but one ring can be worn on the hand. They are also made in silver gilt, which is silver dipped in gold, and whether silver or silver gilt their price is about the same. Some of them sell as cheaply as $5.00, while more ornate types sell for $25.00.

Fashion Notes.

Bronze patent leather is a shoe wrinkle. Several times in previous season's bronze patent has been brought out, but with little success. This year, however, with the rage for brown shoes, it will undoubtedly be worn. From experience, one can say that this brown patent leather wears quite as well as black patent, and it is decidedly good looking.

Blonde satin is the newest thing for the evening slippers. It is made up in sandal effect with small strap buckles of topaz sets. Blonde coloured hosiery matches the shade of the slipper.

Suede purses of envelope style match the shade of the shoe, gloves and hosiery this season. Suede has never been so popular as it is now. Hand bags and purses of suede may be cleaned with the same powder that is used to clean suede shoes, and thus they are always kept in unsoiled condition.

BRITISH MEDICAL ASSOCIATION CONDEMNS CERTAIN FOODS.

At the meeting of the British Medical Association at Bradford in July, 1924, the refining of flour and cereal foods was severely and unanimously condemned as a danger to civilization and as a cause of cancer, tuberculosis, goitre and other of the terrifying diseases of civilized peoples but from which savage peoples do not suffer at all.

Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane, of London, one of the most noted surgeons in the world, has sent a letter to the London Daily Mail, condemning these foods and advocating a return to old fashioned whole grain, home cooked cereals.

Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is a combination of whole wheat, whole rye, flaxin and bran, proportioned to make a balanced human food. It is taking Britain by storm, aided by the doctor's propaganda. It is surely the very best cereal food sold and quite delicious in either porridge or baked products.

It is especially valuable as a food for children and for nursing and expectant mothers, because of its growth promoting properties. Prevents indigestion, positively relieves constipation. At grocers.

TAFFETAS

Washable taffeta in striped and plaid patterns is very much liked for afternoon gowns.

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL IS APSLEY'S AMBITION

Meeting To Be Held Tuesday To Consider the Proposal.

APSLEY, Nov. 3.—A consolidated school for Apsley is the next step contemplated for the improvement of the north county. A public meeting to consider the question will be held in St. George's Institute on Tuesday evening, Nov. 4, when the subject will be presented by Mr. Spence, who has been in communication with the Minister of Education. He will be supported by the Revs Mr. Ogden and Reeve Duncan Brown, both of whom are strongly in favor of the movement.

A slight epidemic of measles has broken out at Purdeyville and Lasswade, and to lessen the danger of infection the committee of the Lasswade Community Social Club, which is proving a great success, has decided to discontinue the meetings for a couple of weeks.

Four new islands were "born" last year, two off the coast of Cochin China, another off the Japanese coast and the fourth in the Bay of Bengal.

O.T.A. MAJORITY ONLY 423 HERE BY FINAL COUNT

City Voted Dry by Small Margin — Riding Had Majority of 942.

CHAPTER IS CLOSED.

Biggest Correction in Early Figures Shows Poll 24 Went Wet.

That the O.T.A. was only sustained in the city of Peterborough by a majority of 423 votes is indicated by the official figures compiled by Sheriff F. J. A. Hall. In the West Peterborought riding, the final figures show, the O.T.A. had a majority of 942.

The biggest correction made in the city was at poll 24, Guiry's store, 465 Park street Here the drys were given credit for a victory whereas the wets were triumphant by 52 of a majority. The correct figures as checked by Mr. Hall are O.T.A. 107; Government Control 159. At Lockie's store, poll 3, the drys had 73 instead of 37. Only a scant dozen votes were involved in other corrections made in the figures supplied by excited scrutineers.

The total vote in West Peterborough was 11,402, divided 6172 for O.T.A. and 5230 for Government Control.

In the city, there were 8833 votes cast 4628, of them being for the O.T.A. and 4205 for Government Control.

Sheriff Hall's returns to the Government mark the official end of the plebiscite activities in Peterborough.

PRESIDENCY OF CHINA VACANT

Tsao Kun Surrenders Seals of Office—General Wu May Flee.

SEEKS SAFETY

PEKING, November 3. — President Tsao Kun, who resigned last week, surrendered the seals of office to the Cabinet, which assumed the presidential functions.

Tsao Kun remains at the palace, with a portion of his personal bodyguard. He is being accorded entire freedom of action.

In a message to Parliament Tsao Kun said that he had been unable to fulfill the wishes of the people, and that consequently it was necessary for him to resign in favor of a more capable person.

Tuan Chi Jui, former premier and Minister of War, has been invited to come to the capital, presumably in connection with accepting the post of president,

WU IS NERVOUS.

TIENTSIN, November 3. — General Wu Pei-Fu, the ousted Field Marshal of the Peking Government armies, is apparently preparing to relinquish his effort to regain control of the capital wrested from him by his former subordinate Feng Yu Hsiang, "the Christian general," and evidences are seen that he is considering abandoning the scene of conflict.

Defeated Chihli troops are coming into Tientsin.

Wu has ordered the railway cleared to Tangku on the Gulf of Chihli, about 80 miles from Tientsin. He asked whether it was possible to charter a British steamer to take him and 1500 armed troops to Shanghai under a British naval escort,This being impossible it is assumed that he will risk passage south in a Chinese steamer, but he seems to be apprehensive over the attitude of the cruiser Haichi, now at Taku, adjoining Tangku.

Tangshan, 82 miles northeast of Tientsin is reported quiet. Shensi troops, unfreindly to Wu, have been withdrawn by arrangement and the town is occupied by Manchurians.

The naval commanders held a conference to-day and decided not to allow further military transports to land. They determined to remove those already in position.

There is a tremendous influx of Chinese refugees into the foreign concessions, 25,000 in the British concession alone, and thousands pouring into the Japanese concession, which adjoins the city.

Japanese are guarding the approaches with machine guns, searching in-comers.

The problem of dealing with Wu Pei-Fu's forces between Tangshan and Tientsin may present difficulties, but it is hoped that the situation may be relieved quickly, if Wu leaves for Tangku as he plans. The original plan to remove women and children from Tangshan has been abandoned.

HOMES

Last year there was more building in America than ever before. The record will be smashed again in 1924, predicts the Copper and Brass Research Association. It bases its estimate on what's already erected or contracted for.

But, even at that, the end of 1924 will find 5000 million dollars behind our building needs, according to William J. Moore. He's president of the American Bond and Mortgage Co.

Labor shortage is the main problem in building. Thirty-five thousand skilled men in the trades die or retire each year. Their places are taken by apprentices, of whom there are too few in many communities.

THE FLOWER OF REMEMBRANCE.

The annual sale of poppies will be held in connection with the Armistice Day celebration, and the Examiner is sure that Peterborough people will respond to the appeal as readily and as generously as usual.

In view of the fact that ex-service men are unfortunately affected by the unemployment situation, the poppy sale should carry an even more potent appeal than ever, as the proceeds will go toward assisting former soldiers and their families, while veterans will be helped in another way inasmuch as the artificial poppies that are to be sold have been made by ex-service men.

No Peterborough citizen should be without a poppy for the Armistice Day celebration, and, in addition to wearing the flower of remembrance, many people are planning to use the poppies to decorate their windows as the service maple leaf was employed during the war.

Keep in mind Poppy Day, what it means and the significance of its being observed in connection with the celebration of the end of the war.

MR. CORKERY'S RETIREMENT.

The tributes paid by his associates to Mr. John Corkery, who on Friday retired from the position of Postmaster after thirty-five years of service in the Peterborough Post Office, will be echoed by the citizens generally who appreciate the splendid qualities of Mr. Corkery himself and recognize the efficient manner in which his duties have been carried out.

The former Postmaster has indeed been an admirable public servant.

In his long connection with the local Post Office he has invariably been courteous and kindly not only in his relationship with his staff but in his associations with the public.

As Assistant Postmaster and in later years in full command, Mr. Corkery always succeeded in holding the esteem and affection of the postal staff in a remarkable degree.

He retires now with a consistent record of good service, and his fellow-citizens will wish him years of happiness.

The promotion of Mr. Charles Lacheur to the postmastership will be popularly received.

He has been a member of the local staff for twenty-one years, and after the appointment of Mr. Corkery to be Postmaster was made Assistant, a position that he has most efficiently filled.

THE KINGSTON RESOLUTIONS.

The resolutions passed by the Kingston branch of the Moderation League in reference to the plebiscite results sound like an attempt to make new rules after the game is over.

The Kingston organization declares that the cities which voted against the Ontario Temperance Act should be given local option, and that the result of the vote generally calls for some relaxation in the enforcement of the Act, rather than for more rigid enforcement.

The facts, however, are plain.

The conditions under which the plebiscite was held were known to everybody.

Representatives of both sides of the question conferred with the Government, and there was a definite understanding arrived at and accepted.

The two alternatives were, briefly, that if the majority of ballots favoured the retention of the Ontario Temperance Act the Government would correct any weaknesses in that measure that developed and would give it effective and vigorous enforcement, or if the verdict was given to Government control the Government would institute a system of sale in sealed packages by Government vendors.

Everybody in Ontario knew what the issue was. There was no question of local option, the size of the majority or anything else, except the conditions as outlined above.

It is no time now to talk about relaxation in the enforcement of the Act.

The Government has been given a mandate in the only way a democracy can give a mandate—by the vote of the majority of the electors marking their ballots—to strengthen the O. T. A. and enforce it.

THE UNITED STATES SYSTEM.

The clumsiness of the political machinery which the people of the United States have to use to select their President is increased in the present election by the fact that there are three parties in the field.

It is difficult to prophesy the result of a political yet—yet there is a possibility that such a diversity of opinion may be shown tomorrow that when the ballots are counted neither Coolidge or Davis or LaFollette would be able to muster a majority in the electoral college.

If that situation happened to arise the House of Representatives for the third time in the history of the Republic would be called upon to select a chief executive.

The Constitution of the United States calls for the House to make its selection from the candidates receiving the three highest votes in the college, and that the Senate choose a Vice-President from the two having the highest number of votes in the college.

If the selection of a President should be forced upon the House of Representatives the representation in that branch of Congress would make it possible for the vice-presidential choice of the Senate to become President.

The present Congress, of course, would be the Congress to decide the election if one should become necessary as a result of a deadlock following tomorrow's vote.

In the balloting for President in the House each State is entitled to one vote, to be cast according to the will of the majority of representatives in each State.

The vote of at least 25 States is necessary for the choice of a President, and it is being argued across the line that if the representatives should have to face this responsibility and voted according to party affiliations, there would be another deadlock.

In the Senate in balloting for Vice-President a majority of the whole number of Senators is necessary for a choice.

Of course, this contingency is not likely to arise, but that there is even the possibility of such a situation illustrates the complicated nature of the cumbersome political system that our neighbors regard as necessary.

THE UNEMPLOYED.

Some figures on unemployment throughout the world have been published by the United States Bureau of Statistics. These figures show that during the last six months some five million wage earners have been out of work. This means that these men, trained, accustomed and hence required to make a living for themselves and dependents by working for wages in industrial occupations have been thrown out of use by the failure of the wage system to take care of its own people.

The figures as given for some fifteen countries are as follows:

Country	Unemployed
United States	2,500,000
Great Britain	1,180,000
Germany	214,486
France	7,837
Belgium	21,148
Netherlands	68,990
Switzerland	10,938
Italy	155,935
Denmark, Norway and Sweden	34,204
Poland and Esthonia	114,659
Austria	68,475
Czecho-Slovakia	140.001
Canada	44,000
Australia	100,000
Total	4,660,673

Most men who are comfortably circumstanced in life refuse to regard the wage system as being at fault or capable of improvement, says the Toronto Star Weekly. They feel that if one man gives employment to another man at the current rate of wages he naturally continues to do so only as long as he requires the services of this other man. When he needs men he hires them, and when he doesn't need them he lets them go. That is the way the system works. But if in one city twenty thousand married men with families are "let go" just as winter approaches, anyone must see that while possibly no individual employer can be blamed for his part in the matter, yet the wage system fails to yield support to the army of workers that it calls for and requires to be in readiness for its needs.

This sort of thing happening year after year—this sort of thing multiplied as industrial centres grow larger and as whole nations become industrialized, must produce occasional unemployment in ruinous proportions. The municipality, the state, is called upon to provide either doles or institute public improvements in order to provide temporary employment to fill in the gaps when private industries slow down or close down. Can the wage system pay wages fifty-two weeks a year? If not, it fails to meet the human need of those who have fifty-two weeks a year to live. This whole question is an awkward and troublesome one, but whether one likes it or not, it has to be thought out and some remedy found.

FRANCE BOWS TO RUSSIA.

In according de jure recognition to the Moscow Government, France has stepped in where Great Britain, apparently, wishes she hadn't, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Ramsay MacDonald had committed himself to a policy of shaking hands first and talking things over afterward before he had seen the inside of the British Foreign Office. The result of his policy, as shown in the Anglo-Russian agreements, is somewhere on the shady side of success.

Premier Herriot also had pledged himself to recognition of the Moscow Government. He did not, at first, contemplate taking the British line of action, but the Bolshevist realists soon convinced him that they would stand for no other. No bargaining, no compromise, no preliminary conference to settle on the terms, were permitted. Herriot had to accord unconditional recognition or hold his peace.

Faced by this predicament and inview of MacDonald's difficulties, he might have decided to throw the whole scheme overboard. The position of France vis-a-vis Russia is vastly more complicated than that of Great Britain. A much larger amount of old Russian bonds is held in France, and they are widely spread among the people. France also has a difficult emigre problem.

But the Herriot Government, never a strong one, has of late been in danger of defections. The French Socialists, who support Herriot in the Chamber of Deputies much as the Liberals supported MacDonald in the last Parliament, have been bringing increasing pressure to bear upon him to carry out this Russian pledge.

Political expediency demanded that Herriot shake hands with Moscow upon Moscow's terms, and shake hands he did. Now it is up to the Herriot Government to straighten out the tangle as best it can, and it will be no surprise if Moscow presents to France a blank check such as the British Government finally had to sign. Neither will there be any great surprise if Herriot takes a tumble before the tangle is smoothed out.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

October they say was the sunniest month on record. And yet the New York Giants, the Moderation League and the British Labour party found it gloomy enough.

Cooler weather will be appreciated by the deer hunters, if not by the job hunters.

That only twenty people turned out to see the White Sox and Giants play ball in Dublin may have been due to the fact that nobody knew that the admission price entitled one to take a crack at the umpire.

Just when the world was beginning to show signs of getting back to normalcy along came the crossword puzzle.

H. H. Asquith announces that he will stand again. Evidently there is no such word as "quit" in his lexicon.

"Looney gas" is not a new thing, judging by the manner in which many drivers have been handling their cars.

STOKOWSKI SIGNS

Will Remain With Philadelphia Orchestra Ten Years.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—Leopold Stokowski will continue to conduct the Philadelphia Orchestra seven more years following the expiration of his contract in 1927.

Recently it was said that Dr. Stokowski had been offered $75,000 a year to conduct a New York symphony orchestra. The amount he receives here never has been officially announced, but it is understood to be $40,000 a year.

The conductor was in Washington yesterday. Arthur Judson, assistant manager of the orchestra, said:

"The new contract is merely an extension of the old one with Dr. Stokowski. The arrangement has three years more to run. The new contract will extend that by seven years, so that Dr. Stokowski will continue as conductor for the next ten years.

"I am not at liberty to discuss salary figures, but everything is accomplished, the papers signed, sealed and delivered and all concerned are satisfied fully with the new plan."

BALDWIN CROWD

that the mere question of luck in the triangular fights had a good deal to do with the results. At the last elections luck favored the Laborites; this time it favored the Conservatives.

As the results stand the Conservatives have a seat for every 20,000 votes. Labor one for every 76,000. Had the recokning been by proportional representation Labor would have run the Conservatives very closely.

Demand for P.R.

This disparity in the allocation of seats accounts for the demands heard after every election for drastic electoral reform. But as the demands come from the defeated party they make little impression on the party in power, which naturally is quite satisfied. Thus after the last elections the Labor government made no attempt to introduce legislation in favor of proportional representation because it had benefitted greatly by triangular contests. The same now will probably hold good with the new Conservative government.

The cabinet making is the busy occupation of newspaper writers and the latest name mentioned for the Foreign Selretaryship is that of the Earl of Crawford, who was chief Unionist whip in the house in 1911-13, and latter held many government offices.

A THOUGHT.

PRETTY SENSIBLE LOT

The best primary schools for thrift are the Savings Banks.

The most practical plans for building up this country with a citizenship of home owners is the building-and-loan idea.

The education that educates the individual in business and in credit, is a commercial bank account.

The agency that has helped to avoid more misery and want, plus the true idea of thrift, is life insurance.

The sock stuffed with ready money is an invitation to the robber or an incentive to speculate.

Speculation is the sure road to ruin

The loan shark is the Shylock of this century.

And now they are organizing what they call "Credit Unions." Fifteen states have organizations that are called the poor-mans' bank, or the industrious man's pawnbroker.

When we consider that the total savings in the United States is eighteen and a half billion dollars, the question comes up: Are we spenders or are we savers?

I'm inclined to believe that we are as a people, much better than advertised—that we are pretty sensible lot after all.

A HORSEMAN DEAD.

GANANOQUE, November 3 (Canadian Press). — Mr. John Thomas Ellis, 83 years old, and a well-known horsemtn of this town, owner of Minnie E., the fast pacing mare known to all horsemen in Eastern Ontario, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank Wright, South Street, on Saturday morning.

One son, Mr. Fred Ellis, and one daughter, Mrs. Wright, survive.

INADEQUATE

Traffic experts say that within 10 years the railroads will be handling a third or more freight and a fourth more passengers than now.

The most gigantic achievement proves inadequate before it is completed. Our transportation system, for instance, has advanced to the point where the railroads in a year move 38 billion passengers one mile and haul 457 billion tons of freight one mile. To do all this requires tremendous power and organization. Yet the railroads increasingly become more of a problem.

Industry in general is growing faster than man can control it. Hence it has many evils.

QUEBEC BUTTER AUCTION

MONTREAL, Nov. 2.— The offerings of creamery butter at the Quebec Agricultural Co-Operative Society auction sales held here last week amounted to 1,625 packages as against 1,610 packages for the previous week, and 1,370 packages for the same week last year.

Of the above quantity 850 packages were sold under the hammer, which consisted of 700 packages of No. 1 creamery at 35 1-4 cents and 35 cents per lb., and 150 packages No. 2 creamery at 34 cents per lb., the balance being pasteurized cream ery which did not seem to be wanted at the prices asked.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Selling preparatory to the election holiday together with dearth of export business, led to price downturns in wheat and other cereals today. Rye showed at one time five cents decline. Wheat closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1 1-2 cents lower, December 140 3-8 and 140 1-2 and May 146 1-2 to 146 3-8 with corn 5-8 to 1 1-8 cents off, oats half cent at 5-8 cent to 1 cent down and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a setback of 12 cents.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Nov. 2.— Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday at: Sterling demand $4.54 1-2; Sterling cables $4.54 7-8.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND

MONTREAL, Nov. 2.—The export trade in Canadian grain here was reported quiet on Saturday, there being few firm bids received owing to the steady downward tendency in prices at Winnipeg of late. The demand in the domestic market for cash grain was also of a very limited character. Ontario No., 3 extra malting barley was quoted at 1.08; No. 3 grade at $1.07; Ontario No., 2 white oats at 63 cents; No. 3 white oats at 59; and No. 4 grade at 57 1-2 cents per bushel, ex-track.

Owing to the steady decline in the production of eggs at producting centres and the fact that supplies of strictly fresh are becoming scarce a much stronger feeling has developed in the situation and local jobbing prices were advanced 3 to 5 cents per dozen. In sympathy with the strength that has prevailed in the principal United States markets for fancy storage eggs of late and the continued excellent demand for supplies here for immediate consumption, the prices for this class of stock were moved up 1 to 3 cents a dozen.

BILLY SUNDAY'S SERMON

Jury, meeting in Buffalo, used the very simple system of lifting express and parcel post packages while loaded on trucks awaiting shipment, at the Erie, Pennsylvania the parcel post. Donovan was baggage master and Morgan extra baggage master on the Lackawanna, between Elmira and Buffalo.

Ralph A. Bennett of this city was also arrested in connection with the robberies. He promptly admitted his guilt, refused to retain a lawyer and offered to return the stolen goods in his possession, which included a case of shoes belonging to the Endicott-Johnson Shoe Company of Johnson City, N.Y.; a radio outfit and numerous small articles. Upon his expressing willingness to appear as a witness against his associates a suspended sentence was given him, conditional upon the payment of $150 in monthly instalments to the city probation officer.

Special Agents Kordenbrock and Hinz and Travelling Auditor W. Patchen of the express company placed all of the goods stolen from their company and recovered, in a room in the Hotel Langwell, which was the headquarters for "Billy" Sunday and his party, and when the display was complete the evangelist was invited to inspect the contents of the room as the result of his sermon on sin was outlined to him.

Gingerly fingering each article, Sunday's eyes filled with tears and with an expression of good-will for the detectives he started from the room, but not until every employee of the express company present had promised to hear him preach that night. And they made good.

TRIFLED HIS TIME.

A clergyman was examining a boy in a Sunday school class with regard to John the Baptist. The boy's knowledge of the prophet was very scant.

At last the clergyman said, 'Surely you can tell me what he did?'

"He didn't do nothin'," said the boy. "He was a preacher." —Tit-Bits.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

An Elegy written in the Driest of Cities:

Poor Old Ontario's sun is set,
And we, who thought we would be wet
Are parched and dry as desert sands.
Provincial Parliament commands,
"It shall not pass." John Barleycorn
Rose much refreshed on Thursday morn,
To join in battle with the foe;
And lay Ontario Temperance low.
He fought to assuage our thirst.
Himself, was carried out, feet first.
Our doom is sealed. Our city's streets
Are dry and cracking with the heat.
The asphalt melts and clouds of dust
Roll on before the fiery gusts
Of red hot air, from off the lakes
Where our vacation we would take
In better day.
Where are they now
Those lakes that now are naught but sand,
Once stretched two thousand miles inland;
Almost half way from sea to sea,
Are now a hazy memory.
Superior, Huron, St. Clair, too,
Lake Erie and Ontario blue;
To say nothing of streams and rills
Which flowed through old Ontario's hills,
Where are they gone? The O.T.A.
Can tell you. Ask them. Where are they?
I stood on the suspension bridge,
That spans from rocky ledge to ledge;
And gazed into the rock-strewn gorge
Where once the whirlpool rapids roared.
I raised my eyes to where the Falls
Had been. A ridge of rock was all
That now remained to mark the place
Where tons of water leaped through space.
Gone all are gone. The O.T.A.
Can tell you. Ask them. Where are they?
Our tune is changed. We sing no more
Of health resorts and cooling shores.
Our National Anthem now is dead.
A new one we sing in it's stead.
"Nobody knows how dry I am,
Nobody seems to care a d--n."

F. A. R.

Sir: In reply to a letter to the Ontario Plebiscite Committee calling their attention to irregularities in the O.T.A., Mr. J. H. Burnham has received the following letter from Rev. T. Albert Moore. With local vigilance committees, and the abolition of the privilege of making home made wines and beers over 2½ per cent., and the amendment of the laws regarding doctors' prescriptions, the O.T.A. will no doubt become what its protagonists have been striving for, and the act's anomalies will be removed.

(Letter from Rev. T. A. Moore.)

Toronto, Oct. 30, 1924.

J. H. Burnham,
Peterborough, Ont.:

Dear Sir: Yours of the 27th ultimo, has come du'y to hand and contents noted. We shall certainly urge upon the Government the continued fulfilment of its promises of active and vigorous enforcement of the act and when the time comes to secure amendments to that act by legislation. At the next session you will find that we are pressing every possible argument for the removal of clauses which permit the manufacture of native wines in this province.

There are other amendments to the act in contemplation and many other activities for Prohibition under consideration.

We know that you are always seeking the very best for the Province, and for the Dominion, and will always be glad to hear from you in any constructive way.

Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) T. ALBERT MOORE.
Campaign Director for the Ontario Plebiscite Committee.

NEWS OF ORLAND.

Farm Properties Change Hands in the District—Honor Certificates.

ORLAND, Nov. 1.—Mr. Andrew German has sold his farm to Mr. Joseph Horsley of Smithfield and will be moving away.

Mr. German's father was one of the earliest settlers in these parts and now that he has disposed of the old homestead it will remove a name long familiar in this community.

Mr. George Rogers, who has rented Mr. Pat Cowan's farm for the last year, is having a sale on Nov. 5th, and says he is going to try his luck in the United States.

Mr. M. J. Moran has rented the north half of Mr. James Herrington's farm. Mr. Thomas Gilbride, who has had the farm for the last three years, is giving it up.

Mr. Vin Gilbride and Mr. Lisle Way have gone to Toronto to try their luck in securing a job for the winter.

W. J. Latimer is the possessor of two boys who each got a certificate of honor from the School Fair for the largest number of prizes from each school. Master Hugh is attending S. S. No. 15 and Master James is attending S. S. No. 20. In all probability this has not occurred in the whole province where two of one family secure each a certificate of honor.

SEARCHING CHINESE FOR WEAPONS

The tong war starting in New York has broken out in Chinese quarters in a dozen different cities. Police are patrolling the "Chinatowns" in all of them. Here a Chicago police man is seen searching a Chinese for weapons. Similar scenes are being enacted in practically every large city where there is any consider able number of orientals living.

GET ACQUAINTED WITH W.F.A.A.

(DALLAS, TEXAS— 476 METERS)

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN.

"Working For All Alike" is the slogan of WFAA, taken from their call letters, and The Dallas Journal && News stands sponsor. Although another prominent Texas station closed down during the summer months, WFAA stuck to its guns and courageously faced radio's worst season, believing that "all the time is radio time." This is one feather in WFAA's cap and enabled fans in the southwest to enjoy the programs at a time when the static wall to distant points is difficult to penetrate.

Dallas is a rather musical city and has several very good choral societies which are generous enough to give non-residents the opportunity to hear them. Then, too, Texas towns have a penchant for organizing municipal bands and these have been broadcast on an average of three a month. Texas municipal bands may not strike a magic chord in the hearts of blase city dwellers, accustomed to the euphonies of a symphony orchestra or a first rank military band, but to those within listening range of WFAA, the cornets and trombones with an occasional clarinet or two, which make music in park bandstands of Texas cities, undoubtedly bring as much charm as the strains the Chicago Symphony Orchestra brings to residents of that city.

WFAA, as is the practise at many stations throughout the country, on many occasions turns its concert period over to music teachers who bring forth their budding pupils in recital. This is occasionally productive of fruitful results, but most frequently, decidedly amateurish performances evolve. However, WFAA is not alone in this fault, and it is one of the difficulties of broadcasting that all artists cannot be Class "A" or, at least, Class "B."

Popular music and the classics vie on about even terms. The Adolphur Hotel Orchestra offers semi-weekly programs of dance music, while miscellaneous dance organizations contrive to keep the dancers busy. Occasionally, one soloist will occupy the entire concert period, but usually, a choral club or some civic society will provide a variety of entertainment, or some Texas city will turn loose a band or a variety of "home talent."

In conclusion, WFAA is doing its bit in Texas and surrounding territory in a manner that is difficult to improve upon. It is by no means a weak station, having a distance record of 500 miles off the coast of Australia, and while the big city "slickers" may snicker at the quality of some of the entertainment, it must be remembered that music conservatories do not grow on every bush in Texas, and that WFAA and its contemporaries are bringing enjoyment to thousands of people in the wide stretches of the Lone Star State who might otherwise never hear a song recital or orchestral concert. Radio needs more broadcasters like WFAA.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon

The scarf, the apron tunic and the use of lace belong to the very simple but decidedly elegant type of frock that pretty girls wear when they dance with the prince—England's or their own.

Lace is one of the most elegant of the new evening materials—metal lace for the very formal type of dress, Chantilly and dyed lace for less important frocks. Mauve, lilac, salmon and blonde are favorite colors for dyed lace and are used with crêpe de Chine, Georgette, light-weight silk crêpe and satin crêpe of exactly the same color. For a less formal dinner or dancing dress the printed Georgettes, crêpes de Chine and silk crêpes are charming for a frock with the draped apron front and scarf collar.

THOUSANDS ARE GOING HOME FOR THANKSGIVING.

Thanksgiving this year falling on Monday, November 10th, allows an unusually long week-end, and permits travelling distances which would be impossible in a shorter period. Thousands are arranging to visit the home folks or out-of-town friends.

The Passenger Department of the Canadian National Railways are making special arrangements on all routes to provide the public with every travelling comfort. Nevertheless, as it is impossible to estimate the number who will be travelling, it would be wise for all those who anticipate taking advantage of this occasion to make their reservations as soon as possible.

For full information, apply Canadian National Ticket Agent.

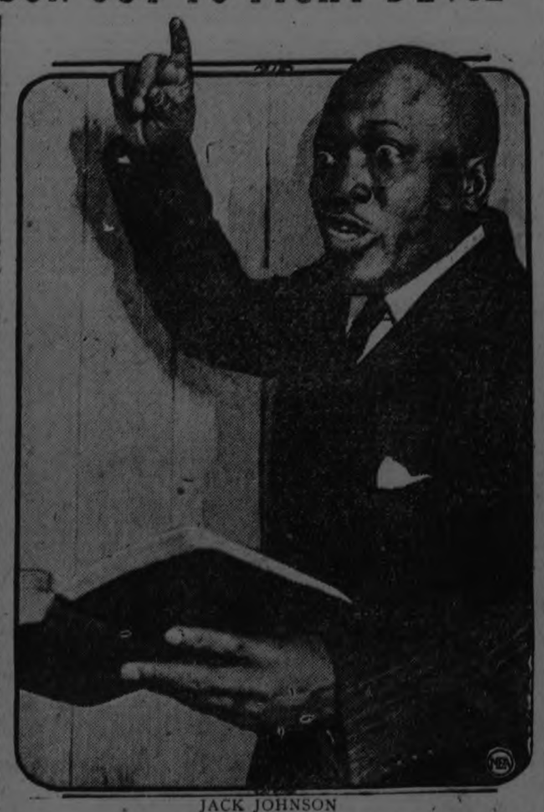
EXTRAORDINARY

The axolotl, described as a fish with four legs, the legs equipped with fingers, excites Boston. It was sent from Montana to the Hub's natural history museum. A little imagination suggests that the queer creature is a link demonstrating the workings of evolution. That is, presumably correct—even though the axolotl is a salamander or refined lizard, instead of a fish.

JACK JOHNSON OUT TO FIGHT DEVIL



JACK JOHNSON

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Jack Johnson is ready for another fight—a little "go" against the devil.

The former heavyweight champion is out to slam religion into an unreligious world.

Into the highways and byways, he will carry a gospel of brotherly love.

Jack Johnson, saloon porter, barkeeper, cabaret entertainer, prize fighter, ex-convict, general all-round sport and idol of Chicago's "black-belt."

Alas, he is no more! Today it is the Rev. Jack Johnson, if you please!

For the big, hard hitting, dusky conqueror of Jim Jeffries has got religion now. And he intends passing a little of it on to others, who, like himself, have waited rather late in life to try it out.

No Billy Sunday Stuff for Him

But there'll be none of the old camp meeting type of exhorting for Rev. Johnson. He isn't going to pattern after Billy Sunday with an appeal for a return to the old-time Christinaity. He thinks there are good ideas in the teachings of Buddha and Confucious, too.

"What I believe is, 'do to others what you want them to do to you,' says Evangelist Johnson. "And I believe in trying to do your best in whatever line you're in.

"If it's selling shoes, be the best salesman. If it's fighting, be the champion.

"I don't think much of Samson, even if he was the strong man of the Bible," Jack declares, "because he let a woman get him in wrong. A lot of men pile up debt which they have to pay off to society because of women.

"I think old Job was one of the best men in the Bible, the way he took his troubles. And I like the story of Jacob and Esau.

He's Willing to Fight, Too

"I've had experience and been around. I think I can tell people things that will do them some good. That's why I'm taking this up."

Jack has the indisputable gift of a commanding personality. His audience in churches of his race no doubt will give him the respect that fluent eloquence provokes. Besides that, he lists among his evangelistic qualifications a knowledge of the Bible, "forwards and backwards."

Johnson plans to star his preaching career in a negro church in Hamilton, O. Right now, though, there's quite a division in the congregation as to whether he shall be accorded the privilege of its pulpit.

The pastor's wife, leading the opposition, insists only the "sporty element" wants him. But there are several of the deacons and elders, who deny they might be classed in that category, clamoring for him to conduct a revival in their midst.

Evangelism, however, will not be his exclusive vocation. He is training daily at the Arcade gymnasium here, keeping in trim for possible ring encounters. And occasionally on a Sunday, he takes his big automobile out and enters it in a race.

The Affair at Flower Acres

"You'll have none from now on, unless you tell the truth."

"Oh, I haven't any truth to tell that I haven't told. I was just sounding you—just trying you out."

"Well, don't ever try it again!" Nan frowned at him severely. "I refuse to submit to your blackmailing scheme—for that is what it is. But I shall repeat your conversation to the detective and he will make further inquiries. I know, Grimshawe Gannon, I know that you witnessed that will, and that you now know where it is. And you'll be made to give it up! Here comes Mr. Dobbins now!"

Sure enough, the detective was coming toward them, evidently in search of Mrs. Raynor.

"I give this man over to you, Mr. Dobbins," she said, excitedly; "he witnessed the will my husband made in my favor, and he has it now—concealed somewhere. He stole it—I don't know why—but I want you to find out all about it."

"Now, now, Mr. Detective," the old man said, "this lady's all storred up over nothin'. I don't know a thing about what she's speaking of."

"I've settled that will business to my own satisfaction," said Dobbins, sternly. "I believe, Mrs. Raynor, that the day your husband was killed you had a very unusually severe quarrel, had you not?"

"Not a quarrel, Mr. Dobbins, but my husband had been unusually angry at me."

"But on that day he was so angry that he threatened to destroy the will he had made in your favor."

"How did you know that?" and Nan looked truly astounded.

"Ah, you thought your little tiffs were not overheard, did you? But Miss Raynor happened to be passing your door—and as you had both raised your voices—or at anyrate, Mr. Raynor had—she heard him say——"

"Passing the door! She was eavesdropping, as usual. Very well, he did say that."

"And—you thought the crisis had come, and so, Mrs. Raynor, that afternoon you shot him so that he couldn't destroy that will. But—he had already done so!"

"How do you know?"

"Because it cannot be found. And who else would make away with it? Surely you wouldn't—nor his sister—nor could any one want that will destroyed.

"Except Lionel Raynor——" Nan began.

"He wasn't here," said Dobbins, sternly. "You can't drag him in. The case is clear. You feared the destruction of that will, you had become newly interested in your returned suitor, you had reached the point of desperation with your husband's cruelty—you concluded to end it all. The pistol, your husband's own, was convenient in the drawer of the table. Everyone else had left the tea table and gone to dress for dinner. Perhaps, acting impulsively, because of such a good chance, you stepped into the sun parlor, shot your victim, dropped the weapon and ran out again just as Mr. Finley, arriving at once from the east side, saw your disappearing figure hurrying through the door opposite. Miss Turner, snapping on the lights, also saw you going out, and a few moments later, Mr. Kent, coming on the scene, saw you returning—but apparently appearing for the first time upon the scene. It's all explained, Mrs. Raynor—I'm telling you what I know, in order to prepare you a little for the trial you must face."

"Good lord, man," cried old Gannon, "the lady's fainting. How could you blurt out all that Get out of my way!"

And fairley brushing the detective aside, the great, gaunt man lifted the drooping figure before him, and carried Nan swiftly into the house and placed her on a couch in the living room.

"Look after her!" he said curtly to Miss Raynor, who bustled in, and then Gannon strode into the library where the men now were.

"You want to check up that Dobbins person," he said; "he's a brute, and if Mrs. Raynor is guilty, that's no reason she should be tortured by him.

"No wonder the lady fainted," he said, "no wonder she is ill and nervously upset. She is a drug addict!"

"What!" shouted Kent, jumping up and glaring at Dobbins.

"Yes—I've proof right here," and Dobbins produced a damp-looking paper parcel. "Mrs. Raynor, accompanied by the little Fay girl, went down to the brook—along the Falls road, and she threw this package into the falls. I waded in and fished it out—and here it is."

He opened the parcel and showed four phials, two empty; one full and one partly full of a white powder. And all were labelled morphine.

"What have you to say?" demanded Dobbs.

But no one had anything to say.

CHAPTER X.

Dolly Fay.

"You see," Dobbins said, "it explains a good deal to know that Mrs. Raynor was a victim of the drug habit. Why, it may go far toward getting her off easy——"

"It may do nothing of the sort!" Malcolm Finley exploded. "How dare you accuse Mrs. Raynor of that?"

"I don't blame you for getting wrathy, Mr. Finley," Dobbins said, looking at him almost benignly, "and I'm mighty sorry myself to say anything against the lady, but here's the proof——"

"Proof nothing! You pick up a measly parcel of rubbish and you jump to a conclusion! Has anyone ever seen Mrs. Raynor ever so slightly under the influence of a drug?"

"Never!" said Orville Kent.

"Where's that nurse person?" asked Dobbins, suddenly. "She'd know about Mrs. Raynor's habits."

"She's gone," Kent informed him. "Went off last night, bag and baggage. And, by the way, she took with her a nifty bunch of stocks and bonds."

"Raynor's?" asked the detective.

"Well, they had been—but they were all transferred to her, and were in a big packet, marked with her name, in the safe. Of course, I gave them to her as she asked."

"Queer doings," muttered Dobbins. "Why should Raynor give them to her? Was he sweet on her?"

"Not a bit of it!" Kent said: "Douglas wasn't that sort—and, too, I think he positively disliked Miss Turner. But he was trying her out as a diet nurse. He was a faddist about his food."

"How'd she come to go off in such a hurry?" asked Dobbins, looking amazed. "We hadn't finished questioning her. Where is she?"

"She left a New York address, which she said would always reach her. But you don't suspect she had anything to do with the shooting, do you?"

"Why, look here," Dobbins said. "There are three—no, four doors to that room where Mr. Raynor was killed. Now, there is a possibility that the criminal was at any one of the four. If east or west, it must have been Mrs. Raynor or Mr. Finley. If south, it was some outsider, who got away, Kent, before you came on the scene. But there's the north door, at which was Miss Turner, and later, Miss Raynor. We can't suspect Miss Raynor of her brother's death, but I've always rather had my mind on Miss Turner. I don't at all like the idea of her going away."

"She never shot Raynor," said Ezra Goddard. "Why in the world would she? Especially if he was kind enough to give her a bundle of valuable securities."

"She didn't shoot him to get those," Kent added, "for they were all properly endorsed over to her, and the parcel, all ready for her, was in the safe with her name on it."

"Maybe he was holding out on her for some reason," mused the detective. "There must have been some secret alliance or some important interest between the two for a man like Raynor to give a transient nurse such a gift."

"We don't know that it was a gift," Kent said; "perhaps it represented her accumulation of savings which Raynor had invested for her."

"I never saw a case with so many angles to it," Dobbins sighed. "Here's Lionel Raynor impatient to take possession of his inheritance, and, as nobody can find a later will, he'll have to have it, for all I can see; and what is Mrs. Raynor going to do for a home? Not only that, but she'll be arrested soon now, unless something turns up in some other direction."

"No!" Orville Kent gave a start. "You won't arrest my sister! Why, man, you haven't a shred of real evidence!"

"Oh, haven't we? I hate to do it, Mr. Kent, but justice demands action—and I haven't an idea any jury would ever convict her—"

"But arrested! Nan! In jail! Never——"

"I wish we could hear of some outsider," Dobbins said; "if now, Mr. Kent, as you came up the hill, you had seen anyone skulking off——"

"I didn't," Kent said, tersely; "I wish to goodness I had—but I can't invent such a person! Yet, there may have been one——"

A BAND OF LACE A FEATURE

A wide band of real lace encircles the hips of this velvet gown and makes it very distinctive. There is also a corsage of red flowers. The gown is cut with the surplice line in back and in front and has a tunic effect with one long panel to break the line. This would be a difficult model for any but a very slender figure.

AFTER A MONTH IN JAIL

This is Mrs. Elsie Sweetin's latest p icture. It was taken when she was arraigned in the circuit court at Mo unt Vernon, Ill., for the murder of her husband, Byford Sweetin. She pleaded not guilty. Date of her trial and that of Rev. Lawrence M. Hight, accused of poisoning his wife and the other figure in the Hight-Sweetin love pact, has not been set.

COBOURG LAW NOT APPROVED

Owners of Gasoline Pumps Ignore Order to Remove Pumps From Street—Cobourg News.

COBOURG, November 3. — The recent by-law passed by the town council requiring all gasoline pumps to be moved off the streets, is meeting with much opposition from the garage men. The new order went into effect November 1st and as yet no pumps have been moved from the streets. The next move must now come from the town council.

Construction work on the new Salvation Army Temple is proceeding rapidly and the contractors hope to have it completed by the end of the year. When completed it will make a fine headquarters for the local corps of the Salvation Army as it will be modern in every respect.

Construction work on the east pier of the local harbor has terminated for the year and 1925 will see the completion of the same.

The Department of Marine and Fisheries are erecting a new foghorn in the harbour here. This action is being taken by the Department as a result of the stranding of Steamer Ontario No. 2 on the night of August 4, as Captain Forrest, in charge of the vessel, in giving evidence before the commissioners that under certain conditions the present fog horn could not be heard and distance out in the lake.

The apple crop in the district is reported by D. W. Coyle, a prominent apple buyer, as being generally light with orchards that receive proper care and attention giving excellent yields.

Spys, McIntosh Reds and Tolman Sweets in boxes, extra quality, are quoted $3 per box and No. 1 quality Spys at $7 per barrel. Other winter varieties from $3 to $7 per barrel.

The anniversary services of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church yesterday were largely attended. Rev. R. B. Cochrane of Toronto, occupied the pulpit at both morning and evening services.

Wild ducks are reported as being very plentiful at Rice Lake and a number of good bags are being obtained. Fishing is reported as being poor and unless steps are taken to enforce the game laws Rice Lake will soon be fished out as every spring large quantities of fish are taken during the spawning season

BAD FOREST FIRE AT CARGILL ONT.

15,000 Acre Tract of Timber Land Desroyed at Loss of $500,000.

CARGILL, Nov. 3. — (Canadian Press)—Forest fires in the Greenock swamp, a 15,000-acre tract, spread rapidly with the high winds Saturday night and yesterday, and acres of fine timber have been destroyed with loss estimated approximately at $500,000. The location of the worst blaze is on the 8th Concession of Greenock, five and a half miles west of Cargill, where 500 men volunteers are engaged in fighting through heat and smoke the worst forest fire in the history of Bruce County, while many others are protecting farm buildings in the vicinity of the fire. Rain is urgently needed to help the situation. Families in the fire region spent an anxious night, women and children remaining up all night, ready to leave their homes in case of danger.

Fanned by a wind, the flames illuminated the sky so much last night that it could be seen at a distance of 40 miles. Fire fighters were greatly hampered yesterday by the dense smoke, which, driven by the wind, almost suffocated them.

TOWN OF FORTY HOUSES TO BE BLOWN TO PIECES

Coal Company To Destroy Model Town Rather Than Pay Ttaxes.

WILKES-BARRE, Nov. 1. — An entire community, Concrete City, will disappear within a month as a result of the decision of the Glen Alden Coal Company to destroy its forty homes rather than meet tax demands of Hanover Township.

Notices have been served on the families to vacate the properties by November 30. It is likely that the houses, worth approximately $150,000, will be dynamited.

Decision to destroy the properties was reached after officials of the State Department of Health had served notice that the homes must be connected with the township sewer system. To do this work would cost at least $250,000.

Concrete City, a model town, built along lines suggested by Thomas Edison fifteen years ago when concrete first was advocated for homes, attracted national attention because of its novelty.

TRAIN STRUCK AUTO.

Two Killed When Auto Stalled on Track in Front of Train.

MONTREAL, November 3 (Canadian Press). — Mrs. E. Dupont, 60 years old, of Farnham, Quebec, and her son, E. Dupont, 30, of Montreal, were instantly killed, and two other persons were injured, one of them seriously, at a level crossing accident on the Canadian National track opposite St. Hubert Station, a village three miles from Montreal, yesterday.

The accident occurred when the automobile in which they were driving stalled on the tracks, and was crashed into by a train and by another automobile from the rear simultaneously.

FACES MURDER CHARGE.

VANCOUVER, November 3 (Canadian Press). — Following a conference of police officials on Saturday, a charge of murder has been laid against John O'Grady in connection with the death of Mrs. Violet Carr.

O'Grady operates a private detective agency, and was formerly a member of the city police force.

Mrs. Carr died from the effects of poison taken at O'Grady's apartments, and the coroner's jury which proved the death on Friday added a rider that O'Grady's evidence which constituted a straight denial of any knowledge of the poison was unsatisfactory

TARIFF VIRTUALLY BARS CANADIAN WHEAT CROP FROM THE UNITED STATES

Exports Last Seven Weeks Only 300,000 Bushels — Fall Grain Made Republic Home Market For Western Provinces.

OTTAWA, Nov. 3.—That the Fordney-McCumber tariff has had a marked effect on exports of wheat to the United States is to be seen in recent trade figures. For the seven weeks ended October 1, wheat exports were only about 300,000 bushels. Only forty-eight bushels were shipped to the United States in August.

In the fiscal year ended March 31, 1921, Canada exported to the United States 42,000,000 bushels of wheat. To some extent she was then favored by the exchange situation, but the undoubted fact is that exports to the republic have fallen off because of the high tariff.

It was a fine thing for the prairie farmer in the pre-Fordney tariff days to be able to market his grain quickly right across the line. For one thing, the rail haul to Minneapolis and other milling centres was short, and the price was not subject to as many uncertainties as that attending shipment to Europe or other parts of the world. As a matter of fact, free wheat made the United States a home market for the farmer of Western Canada almost to the same extent that Eastern Canada is a home market.

It is true that today the exportable surplus of American wheat has to meet Canadian competition abroad, and for this portion of the American farmers' crop prices tend to a common level. But this relates to only a comparatively small part of the total wheat crop of the United States.

Under free wheat, the grower of Western Canada, when he marketed his product in the United States, was not subjected to anything like the keen competition in prices that he must meet today in Liverpool. All that he had to meet was his American competitor, over whom, in the majority of cases, he had the advantage of superior soil for the growing of wheat, and any advantage that resulted through the depreciation of Canadian currency.

NEWS OF COLBORNE.

Warkworth and Colborne Students Meet In Baseball Contests—Crop News.

COLBORNE, Nov. 3.—The Colborne High School grounds was the scene of keen excitement on Saturday, when Warkworth and Colborne students played ball.

An exciting softball game was played between the girls from both schools. The game was very interesting, and good sportsmanship was shown on both sides. The game finished in favor of Colborne.

The boys also played a game of softball, and Colborne again came out successful. The boys then played a game of regular baseball, in which Colborne lost. The afternoon ended in a successful basketball game among the girls.

After the games the visiting school was entertained in the basement of Colborne's new school. Lunch was served and a joyous hour was spent among the students.

The farmers in this section are progressing splendidly in their fall ploughing and sowing.

The threshing season is almost over, and a good crop of grain has been harvested. The farmers seem to be well satisfied.

The potato crop has also been a great success.

The apple crop in this district was not as great a success as it has been previous years. Mr. B. H. Coyle has purchased most of the orchards in this district, and hires over eighty men to pick the apples.

The Presbyterian congregation has received their pastor, the Rev. Mr. McCullough. Since the Rev. Dr. McKenzie resigned in May last the pulpit has been vacant.

One day last week Motor Speed Officer Jackson had the misfortune to collide with Mr. W. Morrow's truck. Mr. Morrow turned into the roadway leading to his house and failed to put out his arm. The accident might have proved fatal, but no serious damage was done.

The funeral took place in Colborne of Mrs. Teasdale. Mrs. Teasdale was a former resident of Colborne, and was in her 93rd year. She was the mother of Mr. G. M. Teasdale, who was formerly proprietor of the Alexandra Hotel in Colborne.

Mrs. Teasdale died at Collins' Bay, and the funeral was conducted at the C.N.R. Station. The Rev. Thos. McKim officiated. Interment took place at the Union Cemetery.

SHED CAUGHT FIRE.

Spark From Threshing Engine Believed to be Responsible For Manvers Fire.

BETHANY, Nov. 3.—What might have developed into a very serious fire occurred on the farm of Mr. H. Hutchinson on Saturday afternoon. Threshing was in progress, and it is supposed that a spark from the engine ignited a fire in one of the outsheds, which was situated in the vicinity of the barns, and as a heavy wind was blowing all afternoon, only the prompt work on the part of those engaged in threshing operations and the quick response from a number in the village answering the urgent call for assistance, and rushing out with pails, undoubtedly saved Mr. Hutchinson a heavy loss. The damage to the shed is slight and the loss will be light.

The Girls' Club held a very enjoyable evening at the home of Miss Mabel Challice on Friday evening. Games and other forms of amusement were indulged in until a late hour, when the hostess served a dainty lunch.

Mrs. George McCarthy and Miss Kathleen were visitors in Peterboro on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Blake of Roseneath were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Dawe a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lowes motored to Peterboro on Saturday.

Mr. P. C. Brown has returned after spending a few days with his brother, Rev. W. Brown, of Lindsay.

Mr. C. Porteous and his sister, Mrs. A. Thorndyke, were visitors in Millbrook on Sunday.

Mr. W. Bigelow was a business bisitor in Peterboro on Saturday.

Mrs. P. C. Brown spent a few days last week in Toronto with her friend, Mrs. Gray.

The Ladies' Aid in connection with the Methodist Church intend holding a fowl supper in the near future.

WEDDING BELLS.

BLEZARD—MERRIAM.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at noon on Wednesday, October 29th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Merriam, Harwood, when their daughter, Sophia, was married to Mr. William Albert Blezard, Toronto. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Thomas McCord, Presbyterian Minister, Harwood.

The bride who looked charming in a dress of white Fleurelle trimmed with seed pearls, veil of chiffon, caught up with orange blossoms and carrying a bouquet of pink bride's roses, entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengrin's bridal chorus, played by Miss Vera Taylor of Warsaw.

The bride and groom who were unattended, stood under a beautiful archway of autumn leaves and white lilies.

During the signing of the register, Miss Vera Taylor sang very sweetly "You'll not forget."

The wedding guests then repaired to the dining room where all sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner.

The groom's gift to the bride was a necklace of pearls and to the organist a gold bar pin, with onyx and pearl centre.

The bridal party motored to Toronto, the bride travelling in a gown of brown satin, striped canton crepe, cocoa brown velour coat with hat to match.

Mrs. Enoch Merriam, mother of the bride, was dressed in blue silk with overdress of black lace. Mrs. Wm. Blezard, of Cobourg, mother of the groom, was dressed in black silk, with trimmings of Radium lace.

Among the guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, Miss Vera Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Clydesdale, all of Warsaw; Mr. and Mrs. William Blezard, Mr. and Mrs. Thos Blezard, all of Cobourg.

The bride's parents were numerous and beautiful; among them were two substantial cheques, one from her father, Mr. Enoch Merriam, and one from the groom's father, Mr. William Blezard.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Blezard intend to take up their residence in Toronto.

THE GAME AND THE HUNTER

Which You Are Depends On Whether You're In Civilization or in the Jungle, Says Champion Lion Hunter —He's Going Back to the Jungle.

A. J. Klein and a lion he killed.

BY GEORGE BRITT

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—An African savage will direct you to your desination with more courtesy than an American policeman or street car conductor.

Jungle noises, such as breaking of twigs or the chirping of birds which may mean close proximity to a lion are less irritating to the nerves than a city's whirring clatter.

And eyes accustomed for 14 years to ebony belles who wear only beads —if they've got the beads—get a shock at the bare knees of a Broadway chorus girl.

These thoughts on modern civilization are expressed by A. J. Klein of Nairobi, East Africa, hunter, photographer and explorer, who is back here at home for the first time since 1910.

"I'm going back to Africa in January, and I shan't wait in Nairobi long then, but will strike into the jungle," says Klein to visitors in one of the taxidermy studios of the American Museum of Natural History.

"You've got to get back here now and then. You get an overpowering desire to hear intelligent conversation from civilized people and listen to good music. You want to see your family.

"But the jungle has everything else. A white man there is lord of everything in sight. He can take time to think and develop his life as nature dictates. He is liberated from clocks and crowds and conventionalities.

"The hunter lives with danger, but it is a stimulus and not a burden. If he meets a strange native and makes an inquiry, he receives a "dio bwana," or "yes, master," instead of being treated like a yokel as he would be if he got tangled up in your traffic.

"There is little difference between the African savage and the low-grade majority of people in 'civilization.' I'd much rather have some of my native boys for companions than many of your well-dressed, modern, city-dwelling citizens.

"But things have changed here tremendously since I went to Africa. Life has speeded up. It seems to me Central Parks looks shabby and the trees are dying. The skyline is more fairy-like than ever, but it doesn't look like a dwelling place for human beings. People jumping in and out of subways remind me of rabbits."

Klein has killed 88 lions, the largest number—with one exception —of any hunter on record. He formerly was state taxidermist of New York and has been a member of the staff of the American Museum.

He is 41 years old, short and wiry, with plenty of smooth black hair, brown eyes and a nervous manner. Big, phlegmatic men cannot withstand the jungle heat, fevers and perils from savage men and beasts.

"Adventure is at the heart of a liking for Africa," Klein says.

"Once it gets in your blood, it is hard to settle. You look out as far as you can see and wonder what lies beyond that hill. When you get there there's the urge to go somewhere else. And new things happen every day.

"I've never been mauled by a lion, but friends have killed them when they were charging straight at me. There's this difference between African beasts and city traffic—you've got a gun to help yourself in Africa, while here you yourself are the game and the automobile is the hunter.

"The closest shave I ever had was not from wild beasts or natives but from thirst. The rest of my party went ahead across a barren country to a water hole, while I waited for a food caravan. In following them, I got lost and water gave out and finally I fell off my donkey unconscious. The others had wounded an elephant, and in following its trail, they found me. They got the elephant, too."

GROVE DEFEATED SCHOOL BY 32-19

Griffiths For Lakefield Made Three Runs the Length of Field.

LAKEFIELD, November 3. — In Lakefield on Saturday the Grove School defeated Upper Canada College by the score of 32 to 19 in a game that was full of snappy plays.

The Grove have had a very successful season this year, winning every schedule game they have played.

Upper Canada College had a much heavier team than the Lakefield boys, but some wonderful runs by Griffiths helped the winners considerably.

The line-ups:

U. C. C.—Centre, Darke; flying wing, T. H. Steuart; quarter, H. F. Steuart; right half, Gillard; left half, McDonnell; outsides Jones and Seurman; middies Archibald and Magee; insides, Reid and Croft; scrimmage, Argue, Crandall, and Drew; spares, MacKerras.

Spares, Boultee, Miall, Cockburn, and Griffiths.

Referee T. W. Marling.
Judge of play, T. J. Wood.
Timekeeper, W. G. Morrison.

NEWS OF HAVELOCK.

Robert M. McQuaig Passed Away in Toronto—Garage Destroyed.

HAVELOCK, Nov. 3.—Mr. Robt. McQuaig, an old and respected respected resident of Belmont township, passed away in Toronto on Friday last. Mr. McQuaig had been in poor health for the last six months and went to Toronto see a specialist and died while in the city.

The funeral took place from his late residence in Belmont township on Sunday afternoon. Service at the house by Rev. H. B. Herrington, of Cordova. Interment at Maple Grove cemetery.

Besides his sorrowing wife he leaves a family of five, Reginald, Thompson, Donald, Teddy and Annie all at home, also one brother, and three sisters, Mrs. J. Knox of Peterborough, Mrs. Brown and Miss Eela McQuaig of Toronto, and Mr. D. McQuaig of Peterborough.

Garage Burned.

Fire broke out early Sunday morning in Mr. Harvey Cooke's stable and garage burning it to the ground. His car was saved with very little damage. The only loss being two or three cords of wood.

Hallowe'en Dinner.

The Women's Auxiliary of St. John's church held their annual Hallowe'en dinner on Friday evening in the basement of the church from five till seven o'clock.

The tables were appropriately decorated for the occasion. Miss Marjorie Post, dressed as a witch, met the guests at the door and bid them welcome and also rendered two lovely solos while supper was being served. Messrs. Post and Sanderson, dressed as an old couple, were the attraction of the evening.

Everyone reported a splendid supper and a good time.

A Hallowe'en masquerade dance was given by the I.O.F. in the town hall on Thursday night last. A large crowd was in attendance.

Mr. Eldon Pierie was awarded the prize for the men's comic costume and Miss Mary Cuthbertson for the ladies' comic dress.

After enjoying a dainty lunch the company separated in the wee sma' hours.

Master Arthur Thompson, son of Dr. A. S. Thompson, fell out of a tree while playing at school and broke his arm on Friday.

Mr. Stan Holcombe, of Oshawa, was the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Holcombe over the week end.

Messrs. G. Wilde, G. Denike, T. Hooper, G. Thompson, E. Chiles, W. Denike and O. Wilde attended the Boys' Conference in Peterborough last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Stan Barlow and Miss Winifred and Miss Elfreda Clarke motored Saturday to Lindsay.

Rev. James McIlroy of Havelock, preached anniversary sermons at Springville Presbyterian church on Sunday.

Rev. G. I. Craw, of Springville, took the services in the Presbyterian church here on Sunday.

Rev. W. P. Woodger, B.A., of Trenton, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church on Sunday both morning and evening in the absence of the pastor, Rev. E. O. Seymour.

SCHOOL HOUSE SAVED.

Woodshed With a Large Quantity of Wood Destroyed by Fire.

APSLEY, November 3. — On Wednesday afternoon, the woodshed of Burleigh school, packed with about 20 cords of wood, in some unaccountable manner was destroyed by fire. Rev. C. Spence and Roy Brown, who were returning from Peterboro in their cars, arrived just as the fire had got a firm hold, and sending for assistance to the nearest settlers, devoted their efforts to saving the school and the surrounding woods. Help was soon available, which resulted in saving both after an hour's hard work.

Luckily there was no wind otherwise no doubt a big forest fire would have resulted, the school being situated right in the woods.

Henry Wilson Chose Soundly and Well

The new North American Life "Endowment at 65" Policy was exactly the sort of insurance that Henry Wilson had been looking for.

"When I am sixty-five years old" he explained, "I shall receive $10,000 from the North American Life Assurance Company. That is about twice as much as I could handle with an ordinary Endowment Policy which would mature seventeen years earlier and therefore call for a larger premium. And the beauty of it is that when we are 65 years old, Betty and I will make much better use of $10,000 than a mere $5,000 at 48. Seventeen years would put a big hole in $5,000.

"In the meantime, I have protected my family adequately—which is after all the major consideration with me, as it is with every man.

"Paying premiums on this policy is somewhat similar to buying a stock which guarantees a 100% dividend."

The North American Life "Endowment at 65" Policy has several unique advantages for the man who is looking ahead to the day when his earning power will have waned and who wishes to provide for an independent and comfortable old age.

We will be glad to furnish you with full information. Write for full particulars.

SIDELIGHTS ON PUBLIC MEN AS TOLD ROTARIANS

Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., Gives Impressions of Members of Parliament.

INTERESTING ADDRESS.

Too Great a Tendency in the Country to Belittle its Public Men.

Most interesting word sketches of some of Canada's public men were featured in a splendid address on "Sidelights of Parliament," as given before the Peterboro Rotary Club at its luncheon at the Empress to-day, by Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P.

President J. W. McDermid was in the chair, and there was a large attendance of members and visitors, the latter including Rotarian Joe Rush, Syracuse, N.Y.; Rotarian J. Evans, Illinois; Rev. Dr. Young, and Rev. Dr. Wilson, Toronto, and Kiwanian Dr. Ray Scott.

It was announced that Rotarian Jack Primeau had been selected to fill the vacancy on the directorate of the club.

Dr. Scott briefly addressed the Club on behalf of the Peterboro branch of the Canadian Social and Hygiene Council, urging the Rotarians to attend in large numbers the address to be given on November 14 by Mr. Justice Riddell. The speaker referred to what had already been accomplished by the organization in Peterboro.

Rotarian Joe Rush told the Rotarians something of the work done in Syracuse by the Vocational Committee of the Rotary Club of which he is the chairman. Splendid results along the line of giving bright youngsters of poor families a chance to succeed in life.

Mr. Gordon's address, based upon his experience as Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, was full of interest. He touched upon outstanding characteristics of some of the well-known men in Canadian history, commencing with Sir John A. MacDonald, of whom the speaker said his speeches showed him to be a man of breadth and kindliness with a ready consideration for the rights of others. On the other hand, Alexander McKenzie was inclined to be dictational in his style.

Mr. Gordon passed on to contrast the rounded periods and fervid eloquence of Sir Wilfred Laurier's speeches with the logical reasoning soundness of the addresses of Sir Robert Borden.

The speaker gave brief sketches of some of the members of the present Parliament, touching upon Tommy Church and his fondness for speech; Lucile Cannon, whom Mr. Gordon regarded as one of the greatest orators of the day; Dr. Tolmie, former Minister of Agriculture, and about the best liked man in the House; Hon. McKenzie King and Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen who sometimes sat down together and chuckled over an amusing story, and upon other members whose names are well-known. In conclusion, he declared that there was too great an inclination in Canada to belittle our public men.

Mr. Gordon was introduced by Rotarian V. J. McElderry, who referred to the high place the speaker of the day had reached in public life.

Next week's meeting of the Rotary Club will be held on Tuesday.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon

Tier bands sewed to a slip on a bias slant fall into a cascade drapery which breaks the straight line of a blouse frock.

One of the most famous French dressmakers uses bands placed in bias tiers below a blouse on a frock which consists of a blouse and slip and has the look of a straight sheath dress. The long close sleeve is used even for afternoon frocks of silk or satin crepes. In black or sand or even very dark blue the Parisienne used this type of dress for restaurant dinners and the theater, but has it made without the sleeve. Steel ornaments hold the cascade drapery at the side. The new stockings are "nude," noisette—a darker taupe brown—occasionally gray with gray shoes and very occasionally sheer black.

MARIE'S A BRIDE AGAIN

Maria Prevost is married again. Her latest husband is Kenneth Harlan, also of the movies. Here they are leaving Wilshire Presbyterian Church, where the ceremony was performed. Kenneth is seen shaking hands with the officiating clergyman, Rev. John A. Eby. Harlan, like like Miss Prevost, has been wedded before.

VETS AND QUAKERS DIVIDED POINTS

Dyer Opened the Scoring While Mayette Equalized in Second Half.

After a full ninety minutes' play, the Quaker Oats and the G.W.V.A. finished up in a drawn game of one goal each in a league game at the Nicholls Oval on Saturday afternoon. The Quakers started the game with ten men and finished with nine after Metcalfe was injured, while Gardiner, their centre-forward, reverted back to junior ranks for the day.

Both teams introduced new faces, the Vets having Darling at inside left, who played as a junior with Dummer and a few years ago with the Machine Gunners, while the Quakers had to rely on R. Young to fill up the team, owing to players being absent. The game started in a thrilling fashion, Logan breaking away from the centre but sending past, while almost before the first minute had gone Scott transferred to the other end to compel the backs to kick to touch. Play was a peculiar character, owing to the high wind that was prevailing, but Dyer gave his teammates confidence when he scored for the Vets. The Quakers retaliated without success, and half-time arrived with the Vets still holding their lead of 1 goal to 0.

Half-Time.

After the usual interval, both teams paid a visit to the custodians that was countered with unsuccessful corners and free kicks. In a clean tackle on midfield play, Metcalfe had to retire to receive attention, which made him give up for the rest of the game. The Quakers started the game with only ten men and finished with nine. After a hard-fought battle Mayette on a clever solo run equalised for the Quakers. All the players found it difficult to hold the ball under control, thereby making it minus of real soccer in a ding-dong game. Full time, 1 goal each.

When the manager of the Quakers' team was interviewed on why he could not get his players to turn out he said: "I could not play Gardiner in our team owing to the fact that he was playing in outlaw soccer and would have to be reinstated." He was promised a better job by the president of the Junior Association if he would play for the C.P.C., but I may say he is still in the Quaker Oats and his promised job has never matured," replied the Quakers manager; "so you see," 'continued the manager, "as long as this kind of tactics exists, soccer will never go ahead. If we had had him on Saturday, we would have had the full points."

G.W.V.A. — Griffin, goal; Wasson and Maher, backs; Mann, Dyer and W. Logan, half-backs; Monks, Maher, G. Logan, Darling, and Hotston, forwards.

Quaker Oats — Bain, goal; R. Young and R. Willshaw, backs; Metcalfe, Scott, and Walker, half-backs; Mayette Baker, Williams, and Green, forwards.

OBITUARY.

GARRETT McMURRAY.

The death occurred at 2 o'clock this afternoon of Mr. Garrett McMurray, of Douro, in his 56th year.

He is survived by his wife, two sons, Gerald and Tyrun, both at home, five daughters, Mrs. Lennard of Peterboro, Irene and Helen of Peterboro, Florence and Bertha at home.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning from St. Joseph's Church, Douro.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

MARMORA MAN AT JACK MINER'S HOME

Charles Bleeker Found Wild Fowl Sanctuary Better Than Pictures.

MARMORA, Nov. 3.—When Mr. Chas. Bleecker was on a recent holiday, he, with others, visited the home of Jack Miner. No geese had then arrived, but a few ducks appeared the morning of their visit. Mr. Bleecker asserts that the pictures of the place, shown last year by Jack Miner, didn't do justice at all to the beauties of the place. The regret of the visit was that the roses were not in bloom.

Hallowe'en Social.

A Hallowe'en social was held in the Methodist Church under the auspices of the Young People's League. As the guests arrived they were met in the darkened porch by two ghosts, who gave them welcome. The devotional exercises were taken by Miss Topper, first vice-president. The Scripture lesson was 1 Cor. 12:12-27. Mr. Cotterel spoke on the lesson. He said, as the head was the guiding part of each member of the physical body, so Christ was the head of the spiritual body. There were three lessons: (1) Our need of each other; (2) others need of us; (3) Christ's need of us. This was followed by a solo, "His Way with Thee."

Miss Williams, president, then took the chair for the social programme, as follows:—Reading, "A Hallowe'en Party," by Edith Phillips; violin solo, James Mullen; "A Talk on Hallowe'en and It's Customs," by Miss Longmore. Hallowe'en was from the name Holy Eve—the evening before All Saints' Day. It goes back to before the beginning of Christianity, to the times of the Druids. The Druids were in England, Ireland and Scotland. They believed that the spirits of the dead returned to live in animals, and Hallowe'en was the night on which the spirits or ghosts appeared.

Many customs of Hallowe'en prevail, especially in the Old Land. Some are going to the attic at mignight with lighted candles to find out the name of a person's future husband, and many such. Also the customs of bobbing for apples, apples on a string, etc.

In this country, the boys sometimes do such tricks that make people think bad spirits were out. Isn't it possible to make people think good spirits are out?

This was followed by an instrumental duet by Margaret Colster and Bernice Bonter. Mr. Cotterel told a true ghost story, called the "Camp Ghost." This was told in a darkened room very effectively. Two ghosts then came forward with a hollow pumpkin, from which each person drew forth a fortune. Some of these were read. This was followed by a contest prepared by Miss L. Conner. It was "Cat" contest. The prize was won by Miss Hazel Williams. Apples and home-made candy were passed round, after which the social evening was closed by "God Save the King."

Mrs. Bert Squire, of Norwood, spent a short time on Wednesday with her sister, Miss Stevenson.

Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, of Warsaw, spent a couple of days last week the guests of Rev. and Mrs. Clare.

Miss Florence Archer, who has spent the summer in Campbellford, has returned home.

The Booster Club is putting on a benefit concert in the form of a picture show on Mouday, Nov. 3.

The proceeds are to pay the expenses of a Marmora boy, Thomas Kelly, who is undergoing treatment in the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto.

Father Trainer has been ill for the past week. He was unable to take his services on Sunday.

Miss Pearce has returned from a visit in Toronto.

Many social events are taking place now. On Tuesday night a card party was held at the home of Mrs. McFarlane. On Wednesday night there was a dance at the home of Harford Bedore; also a dance at Mr. Henry Davidson's.

One reason why a man stays young so much longer than a woman, is because a woman always insists on doing all his worrying for him.

300 AT Y.W.C.A, HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Majority of Children Were in Costume—Thirty Small Boys Present.

There were about three hundred children, including some thirty small boys, present at the big Hallowe'en party for children held at the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium on Saturday morning. The majority of the children were in costume, and presented a gay appearance in the big hall, decorated with a profusion of yellow and black cutouts, with witches and ghosts in abundance. The programme included a Grand March, dances, stunts, games and frolics, with apple bobbing that drew much laughter from the tiny tots. At the conclusion of the party, refreshments of cake, sandwiches, candy and chocolate were served in the downstairs domestic science rooms.

Judges for the costumes were: Mrs. T. Cruickshank, Mrs. H. Beal, Mrs. Stenson, Mrs. E. Morrison and Mrs. L. J. Leclair. Prizes were awarded to Shirley Pettit, as a Pumpkin; Betty Manning, as Raggedy Ann; Alex. Heron, as a Rabbit, and Maudie Heron, as Pierrette; Dorothy Dodd, as a Rose, and Lyndon Garman, as a Witch (special mention).

The Swimming Pool.

Examinations in swimming of the Royal Life Saving Society, conducted at the swimming pool of the Young Women's Christian Association on Saturday afternoon, had a good audience. The examinations conducted by Rev. J. D. Paterson, proved very interesting, and the pupils, many of them of junior years, proved their proficiency in the art of swimming, in its plainer and also more intricate phases, doing credit to themselves and the tuition of their instructress, Miss C. Littlefield, in the various tests.

The elementary examinations, with a 75-yard swim, were passed by Rhoda Collins and Doris Roger. The proficiency tests, which include a 150-yard swim and four methods of release and rescue in the water, were passed by Barbara Foster, Dorothy Foster, Mary Brooks, Margaret Dunlop, Mary MacDonald, Bertha Lobban, Sadie Levine and Betty Manning.

The bronze medallion examinations were very exacting, including a 150-yard swim, the rescue work included in the proficiency tests, towing an object for twenty yards, and diving for a five-pound iron weight. Successful contestants were Eleanor Hiland, Dorothy Goheen, Jane MacDonald and Mesdames P. Manning, G. Copping, and W. R. Hunter.

After the examinations were concluded, light refreshments were served to the girls, who are now concentrating all their efforts on the big swimming exhibition which will take place at the pool next Friday.

Hallowe'en Party.

On Friday evening, Mrs. E. Morrison, house superintendent at the Young Women's Christian Association, entertained the residents of the Boarding Home at a jolly Hallowe'en supper, served in the dining-room, which was decorated with Hallowe'en cutouts, with a witch and ghost in attendance. Members of the Board who were present were Mrs. T. Cruikshank, Mrs. W. R. Widdess, Mrs. R. W. Cormack and Miss E. MacVannel. A contest at the supper table, when the guests, numbering about seventy, took part in an effort to compose a poem from the letters of the word "Hallowe'en," aroused much mirth. At the conclusion of the entertainment, a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Morrison was moved by Miss L. Speers and seconded by Miss Agnes Stout.

VERIFIES BURIED CITY ON NEVADA PLAINS

M. R. Harrington Estimates 20,000 Pueblo Indians Lived There 3,000 Years Ago.

RENO, Nev., November 3. — The first detailed account of a buried Pueblo city, which 3000 or more years ago housed probaly 20,000 people in Southeastern Nevada, was brought to Reno yesterday by M. R. Harrington of the Museum of the American Indian, New York City, who returned from a ten day investigation.

"The ruins, covered with sand, run in a continuous line six miles and are about a half mile wide," he said.

"The outlines of houses of stone and adobe and stone pavements are clearly seen. Cornerstones jutted out of the sand and here and there the rectangular ground plan of a house could be seen. Everywhere were myriads of pieces of broken pottery.

"Some of the stone was dressed, 18 by 12 inches, and sometimes rough slabs were set on edge and the adobe joined in and over to make the walls.

"The dunes covering the dwellings are in a valley in which are located numerous water mounds. Evidently there was more moisture and water in the district in those early days than now exists.

"We found corncobs about three inches long and evidence that the people lived on the fruits of the chase and agricultural products. We found arrowheads and bones of deer."

The first clue to the existence of the buried city was from Jebediah Smith, who in a letter written in 1827 to William Clark, superintendent of Indian Affairs, and a member of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, told of visiting the district.

However, no scientist ever had viewed the site until last week.

An expedition is being organized to uncover some of the buildings.

J. A. TEDFORD.

The Crown Life Insurance Company announces the appointment of Mr. J. A. Tedford to the position of organizer and instructor of agents for the territory east of Toronto. Mr. Tedford has had a number of years' experience in this work in the same district. His appointment marks another step in the growth and advancement of the Crown Life.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor, The Examiner.

Sir,—It is thought by many that the Mayor and Council are very unfair towards Mr. Green, collector of taxes, in the manner in which it is proposed to dispense with his services. I have seldom seen anything so well calculated to do a grave injustice.

The pith of the contention is that the Collector is remiss in getting in the taxes to amounts as displayed on the roll. This in successive years, and that it is entirely and wholly his fault. It is alleged that many taxpayers are dilatory in making payment, despite the exertions of the collector. I think, and others do as well, that if the mayors and aldermen of successive years would let the Collector alone, to the extent that askings made to alde-men in private to speak to the Collector and call off his importunity be done away with that collections would be made. I found this to be the case during the years I was in the Council and until spontaneously ejected.

I have listened to statements of arrearages, by names and amounts, read to the Finance Committee by the Collector, and only perfunctory attention was paid to the disclosures. Suggestions to "let 'er stand a bit" were the rule. I have little doubt that the same leniency has prevailed during the last two years. It is only human to hesitate to push some one who has appealed for a friendly delay, and, of course, Mr. Green being decently loyal to his Council, may not retort as to this habit of aldermen wishing to oblige a friend, or any ratepayer, for that matter.

Mayor Turner is distinctly unfair in the procedure he is furthering, and I am surprised that he is not, in this case, more considerate. In all these propositions to "get rid" of some one, it is the innuendo that really counts, so far as Mr. Green is concerned. Once start a rumor, create a suspicion that things are not right and some of the innuendo will hang. Give a dog a bad name, etc. I think I have seen in print that several have offered for the position to be vacated, should Mr. Green be resigned, and in justice to his long years of service that should be done with some consideration. No use anyone protesting that he or they have only the kindest feelings toward Mr. Green, for kind feelings are not propelled forward in such way. And if the capable and most reliable and trustworthy city treasurer needs an assistant, it would be ever so much better and courteous that such request should come from the treasurer and not by the Council projecting some one into the service saying, practically, to the treasurer, that the Council has its doubts.

This business at the city of Hamilton has set municipal authorities all over the province thinking and asking, and well it may, so long as people come forward to deliberately buy up those who have been placed in office, and so lured to be dishonest. Peterboro has been, and well may we say it, free from that sort of thing. I was asked to write something for the courier leaflet of the Shriners, coming from Toronto, and wrote a page and a half of what Peterboro wasn't, and referred to the facts as stated in previous paragraph.

I believe, but am open to be shown, that it is not the poor man who is in arrears for taxes payments, but those who may be fairly able but unwilling to cough up so long as delay is granted, not by the Collector, but with connivance of the Council. Which, with friendly consideration, may not back up the Collector. Who is in arrears can be ascertained by consulting the roll. Such information may not appear in print, for it might be construed as being libellous, and I understand something of the law of libel, to my previgous inconvenience.

Respectfully,
F. H. DOBBIN.

HUNTERS SET OUT.

Ten Members of the Whistle's Marsh Hunt Club Left This Morning.

SMITH'S APPEAL WAS DISMISSED

T. H. Lennox, K.C., to Give Notice This Afternoon of Appeal.

TORONTO, Nov. 3.— (Canadian Press).—The appeal of Peter Smith former provincial treasurer from conviction of a charge of conspiring to defraud the province was dismissed by second divisional appellate court at Osgoode Hall here to-day. The prisoner was not present as the appeal was based upon the point of law only.

Following judgment dismissing appeal, T. H. Lennox, K.C. representing Smith, stated that he would give notice this afternoon of appeal from sentence which was three years imprisonment and joint responsibility with Aemilius Jarvis Sr., for six hundred thousand dollar fine.

Chief Justice Latchford presided, and with him sat Justices Magee, Middleton, Orde and Smith, W. N. Tilley, K.C., and MacGregor Young, K.C., appeared for Crown.

The appeal opened with an effort on the part of Mr. Lennox to secure the hearing at this time of an appeal from the sentence as well as on objections to the trial Judge's charge and his alleged failure to properly direct the jury.

The Appellate Court ruled that he would require leave to appeal from the sentence.

Defence counsel than asked for a postponement so that he might argue the whole case at once. This was refused.

Mr. Lennox than proceeded with his arguments on the two points open to him, and had to fight his way through his argument, comments from the bench from time to time not offering him much encouragement.

SETTELL REFUSED TO ANSWER QUESTIONS

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Statements by E. C. Settell, former private secretary to Sir Adam Beck of the Provincial Hydro Commission that he had been brought straight from jail without any opportunity to prepare his defence and his subsequent refusal to answer any questions put to him, on that ground, featured opening session of enquiry of Judge C. Snider of Hamilton into charges made by Settell in his letter to Hydro chairman, after his attempted flight from the country, after an hour of fruitless questioning Settell was released from the stand until he had consulted his counsel.

YOU ARE WORTH 98 CENTS DEAD

Actual Commercial Value Is Not Equal to Cost of Meal.

DR. C. H. MAYO TALKS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—"Speaking of operations—" Dr. Charles H. Mayo, world-celebrated surgeon, took off his eyeglasses and began slowly to wipe them with his handkerchief. He speaks with a quiet, dry humor. His answers are as quick and penetrating as his knife.

"It seems that there is nothing science can do to keep people from talking about them. Heaven knows, science has done all that it can—up to date—to make operations as painless and dangerless as possible. But operations remain a perennial subject among those that have been through them."

"And diet?" he was asked.

"Oh yes, that's the other pet subject," retorted the famed doctor whose clinics are a mecca for tens of thousands of ailing ones.

"It has been figured out that, at a single meal, man puts into his stomach more than his entire body is worth—I mean the literal commercial value in dollars and cents. Americans eat too much.

"At wartime prices a man's body, from the neck down, has an estimated value of 98 cents.

Chemical Parts.

"In other words the ingredients of the human body might be commercially figured as follows: he has enough potassium for one shot of a toy pistol; a product value of seven bars of soap; enough iron for an eight-penny nail; enough sulphur to keep fleas off a dog; enough lime to whitewash a chicken coop; enough magnesia to make a single dose for a person with sour stomach and enough phosphorus to cover 2200 matches.

"Of course, prices have gone down to some extent and man now is quite a bargain at 84 cents, or thereabouts."

He readjusts his eyeglasses to his nose and his infectious, dry smile reappears. A quite Yankee person he appears, without affectation or pose. He is a great believer in humor as a human tonic.

Dr. Mayo had just been made president of the American College of Surgeons when interviewed.

"What, in your opinion, is the outstanding contribution to surgery that has come to the attention of the surgical congress?" he was asked.

"It comes from three Australians. It involves an operation on certain sympathetic nerves and thus opens to surgery a new field of exploration," he announced. "It is a sort of North Polar excursion in surgery. I would characterize their work as nothing short of great."

Great Discovery.

The Australian doctors are Dr. N. D. Royle, Dr. John I. Hunter and Dr. H. B. Devine. All three were with the Australian troops during the war. Their experiments were the outgrowth of treatment of various forms of paralysis caused by bullets.

After the war the experiments were continued. The sympathetic nervous system was a rather mysterious field, known as the body's shock absorber a defense against the conditions man meets in life.

Explaining the work of the three Australians Dr. Mayo said:

"In cases of paralyzed limbs Drs. Royle and Hunter proceed on the theory that if sympathetic nerves communicating with the paralyzed area were severed there would be a release of the fixation muscles and many successful operations have been made. In other words, the mechanism by which a fixed position has been forced is removed.

"Dr. Devine carried this into the field of stomach conditions brought about by nervous indigestion and kindred troubles. By a severing of certain sympathetic nerves the area is freed from abnormal nerve influence and goes back to normal functionings."

VILLAGE PRODUCE IN BIG DEMAND

Colony of Small Holders, Who Work 16 Hours a Day

INTENSIVE CULTURE

Majority Started Behind the Plough at Ten Cents Day

A pair of brisk wind-mills waved strangers the jolliest of welcomes to the show at Willingham, Cambridge.

How busy this village is may be gauged from the fact that in a good season (the past was but fair) it will send to market as many as 150 tons of plums daily. One man alone has accounted for 70 tons a day for several days.

It also produces enormous quantities of apples and pears, strawberries, and other soft fruits, tomatoes, flowers and new laid eggs. Four tons of eggs a week are sent away. Laying ducks as well as fowls are run under the fruit trees in great numbers, the breeders owning from 500 to 5,000 head of birds each.

Cut flowers from pyrethrums in the spring to chrysanthemums now being gathered, range from 5 to 10 tons loaded in a single day. And all this produce finds markets in the northern towns as well as London.

SMALL HOLDERS' RISE.

The rise of this colony of smallholders is a splendid story, telling of close toil equal to that of the intensive gardeners of France. These men have always known more about a 16 than an 8-hours day.

The district has more than 2,000 acres of fruit gardens and between 800 and 1,000 growers cultivating from 1 to 5 acres each. The great majority of them have risen from the plough-tail to become their own masters.

Several of these men told of their past. One worked for 30 years for somebody else, and then, launching out with a purchase of 100 plum trees for 57s. 6d., has never looked back.

Another started work for 5d. a day, and long after that was earning 7s. 6d. a week for work which, he says, is now worth £5. He has now been busy for nearly 40 years on his own account, and at 65 is cultivating single-handed 11 profitable acres.

All round this village show was a revelation. Owen Webb, the president, a man who counts for much in the husbandry of this shire, at the public luncheon struck the note which explains all. He said: "Everything we can produce in the next few years will be wanted, and if we give the quality we shall get the price. We've got to grade everything up to the highest level."

BOY IMPALED ON NINE-INCH SPIKE

Surgeons Had to Force Ribs Apart to Remove it

Within 24 hours of having a big iron spike weighing 4 lbs. removed from between heart and lungs, both of which organs it had displaced, Edgar Heath, a Hanworth, Middlesex, boy of 15, smiled at a newspaper reporter and said: "I feel happy here, thank you." He was at the West London Hospital.

Edgar had fallen from the high porch of his home, Flower Cottage, Main Road, Hanworth, and been impaled on a garden railing spike. The head of the railing snapped and the boy fell to the ground. Half an inch of the spike protruded from his body.

The surgeons made a space through which to extract the iron by forcing two ribs apart. They were themselves amazed when they had the object before them.

It was 9¼ in. long and the tip was blunt. Its shape very roughly resembled the Prince of Wale's feathers. The side "feather" dipped over in such a way that it held as tightly as if it were a massive two-pronged fish-hook. It was 4¼ in. across at the point where the "feathers" dipped over, and the thickness of the metal was 1¼ ins.

In its course the spike had carried into the boy's chest and pressed against the lung a piece of shirt fabric as big as a fair-sized handkerchief.

The operation was one that called alike for great surgical skill and for bravery on the part of the patient.

MOSQUITO DEATH.

B. Williams, assistant master at Kateagrove Council School, Reading, while returning to his home at Sonning Common, was bitten by a mosquito.

Blood poisoning set in, and he died.

MORALS OF MEN TOPIC OF WOMEN

Between 600 and 700 women delegates attended the annual conference of the National Council of Women of Great Britain and Ireland which opened at Brighton.

Speaking about provisions in the Legitimacy Bill, one delegate said, "Nothing on earth will prevent men from being immoral except religion, and that is hardly ever mentioned in this society."

Mrs. Hartree, of Cambridge, said the woman who said it would not be safe under the Bill to leave her nice-looking niece with her husband while she went for a holiday was one who must distrust her husband.

Lady Selborne denied that clubs were drinking shops and asserted that clubs wanted to be left alone. "Of course they do," came a chorus.

"This society," she said, "is not well qualified to discuss clubs. That is almost as proper as if the War Council were to discuss the Mothers' Union."

HORSE LEAPS AT CROSSING GATES

Joseph Sprittles, a youth of 17, had a terrifying experience at a level crossing at Linsdale, Bucks, and narrowly escaped with his life.

He was driving a horse and cart under a bridge when the horse bolted and tried to leap the gates at a level crossing.

The gates broke down, and Sprittles almost succeeded in driving the horse clear when an engine crashed into the cart.

Sprittles was hurled out of his seat and fell on the line, happily, clear of the train. He was picked up unconscious. The horse escaped injury.

Cambridge Undergrad Sues College For Sending Him Down

In a case which will come before a special jury at the Law Courts in the new term, a Cambridge undergraduate who was "sent down" last February is suing the Master and Fellows of Peterhouse College.

He alleges they were not entitled to send him down, and asks that his name should be restored to the college roll.

Such an action is unprecedented in recent times.

DEAD MILLIONAIRE LED FRUGAL LIFE

Wealthy Merchant, Who Looked Like An Ordinary Working Man

Reputed to be a millionaire, John Reddihough, of Beech Mount, Baildon, Yorks, Eng., has been found dead in bed at the Sunnyside Hydro, Southport.

In spite of his wealth, Mr. Reddihough's early frugality clung to him all his life, and he was not easily distinguished from a working man.

The head of John Reddihough, Ltd., one of the leading firms of wool merchants in Bradford, he was 83 years of age. He had been spending a holiday at the hydro.

Mr. Reddihough was a tailor until he was about 25, when he went into the wool trade.

He was a wealthy man even before the war, and during the war years his riches increased by leaps and bounds.

This made no difference, however, to his mode of life. He made no display of his wealth, and was never seen dining out.

Seeing him in the street one would have judged him to be an ordinary working man earning £4 or £5 a week.

His one hobby was his business. He took all the responsibilities on his own shoulders, and would not allow anything to be done without his being consulted. Everything had to pass through his hands.

He took little interest in public affairs and was never known to give large sums away, though it is understood he was a generous contributor to the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

Mr. Reddihough was chairman (also permanent director) of John Reddihough, Ltd., woollen merchants, woolcombers and top-makers, a private limited company with an authorized capital of £1,000,000 in £1 Ordinary shares, all of which have been issued and paid up. The company was registered on September 30, 1920.

He was also chairman of S. Bottomley and Brothers, Ltd., mohair and alpaca spinners and manufacturers, of Bradford, a company registered on July 4, 1890. The authorized capital is £160,000, half of which is in 6 per cent. shares of £10 each, and the other in ordinary shares. There is also 7 per cent. debenture stock for £80,000.

GIRLS WORK 15 HOURS IN BAKERY

Heavy Fines Inflicted on Grimsby Firm for Breach of Law

Girls who worked in a bakehouse from half-past six in the morning until half-past eleven at night on week days, with two hours' interval for meals, and for six hours on Sundays, gave evidence at Grimsby Police Court when Messrs. Gleton, Ltd., confectioners, were fined £28 and £4 costs for breaches of the Factory Acts.

One of the girls stated that for the week's work she received 26s. 10d.

The managing director of the firm said that the girls did overtime owing to pressure of work and the illness of a skilled man. They did not object. He admitted, in answer to the magistrate, that it was not right to keep growing girls in a hot bakehouse for fifteen hours a day.

POKESDOWN UGLY NAME FOR TOWN

Residents of Pokesdown, Bournemouth, object to the name of their suburb. The Bournemouth Chamber of Trade received a letter suggesting that it was an ugly name, and should be wiped off the map.

F. J. Baker said that the name was derived from "Pixies' Down," or "Puck's Down" — but he hoped it would be altered.

Complaints stated that business suffered from the name, particularly among proprietors of boarding-houses, and it was urged that the name of "West Southbourne" should be substituted.

FAMOUS SURREY ESTATE IS SOLD

The price paid was £51,000.

Ashtead Park covers 800 acres, and extends from the village of Ashtead to Epsom Racecourse. It has over six miles of road frontages.

The manorial rights descend from the days of Edward I., and in centuries gone by the lands were possessed by the Howard family.

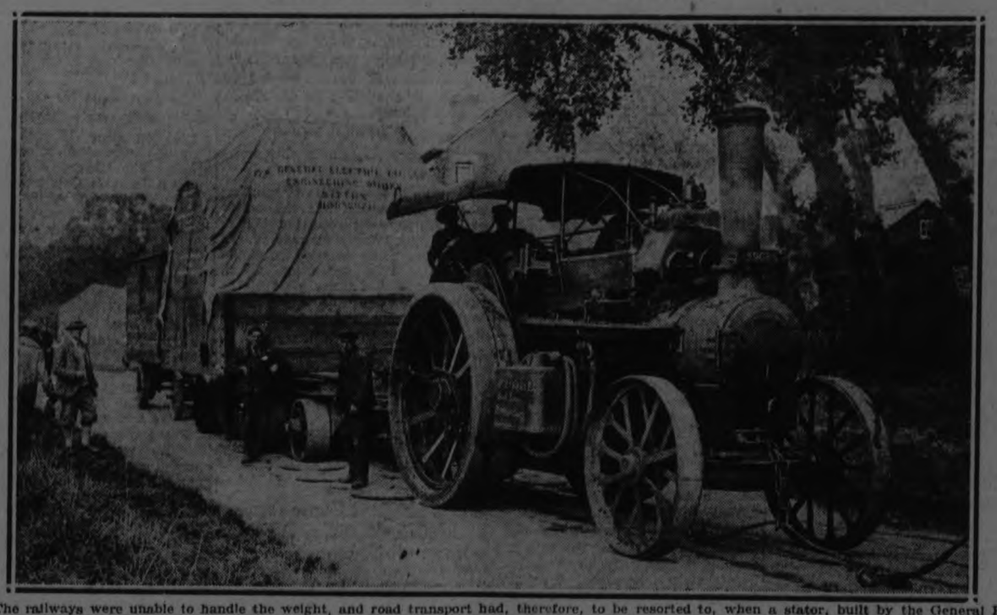
SHEFFIELD MAN LOST ON MOORS

Henry Starr, of Upperthorpe Road, Sheffield, was found dying in a hut on Howden Moors by a search party who had been scouring the moors for several days.

He lost consciousness soon after he was discovered, having a broken ankle and suffering badly from exposure, and he died later in Sheffield Infirmary.

When Mr. Starr left home he said he intended going for a walk. As he could not give any account of his wanderings it is believed he was suffering from lost memory.

UNIQUE TRANSPORT PROBLEM



The railways were unable to handle the weight, and road transport had, therefore, to be resorted to, when a stator, built by the General Electric Co., was transported from Birmingham to London. The stator measures 12 ft. square by 11 ft. 2 in. high, and was carried on two special swivel bogies, each having four wheels so arranged that the wheel track was 2 ft. wide on each side of the bogey. The total height above road level was 15 feet, and the total weight of this mammoth load was 75 tons, which, it is believed, constitutes a record. Two traction engines were used for haulage purposes, and a third was kept in attendance to help when climbing steep hills and as an additional brake on steep declines. The principal traction engine was fitted with rubber tires and the remainder with spring blocked wheels. In places where there was a risk of sinking into the road or of damaging water and gas pipes, heavy steel plates were laid on the surface to distribute the weight.

LANCASHIRE COTTON INDUSTRY LIKELY TO IMPROVE GRADUALLY

Difficulty is to Produce Goods at Prices Within Reach of Mass of Buyers

In spite of the discouraging record of the last three years Lancashire declines to be depressed or to lose faith in its great cotton industry, but it is admitted that there are several disquieting aspects of the position.

The basic fact, from which for the moment there is no escape, is that cotton exports, on which the prosperity of the whole country so largely depends are as four is to seven in volume compared with pre-war days.

Britain lives by exports, and cotton is by far the biggest exporting industry. Look at the figures of the principal exports for last August:—

Cotton	£16,800,384
Wool	6,376,505
Iron and Steel	5,824,496
Coal	5,732,629
Vehicles (including locomotives, ships and aircraft)	3,703,769
Machinery	3,404,379

On the face of it this looks pretty cheering, but it is not quite so cheering as it looks. With a population that has increased by 2,000,000 since 93 we should be exporting considerably more cotton than in pre-war days. We are not. We are exporting about 40 per cent. less.

PRICE AND VOLUME.

It is true that the total price we receive for cotton from abroad is well above the pre-war level, but this is largely balanced by our having to pay more for raw material. In the vital matter of volume—on which employment depends—cotton is only 60 per cent. of what it was before the war.

Raymond Street, secretary of Manchester Chamber of Commerce, put it: "To do as well as we were doing in 1913, as far as volume is concerned, we must export an additional three-quarters of what we are exporting today."

Only in this way can any approach be made to a solution of the unemployment problem. It is true that, taking the shorter working hours into account, rather less than the pre-war output would employ the same number of men, but, speaking broadly, the problem before the trade is how to fill up the gap between 4 and 7.

When I asked Mr. Street what prospects there were of exports reaching the pre-war level, he replied to the effect that there seemed to be no grounds for expecting any immediate recovery on that scale, but a gradual improvement could be looked for.

CUSTOMERS' POVERTY.

The whole difficulty is to produce cotton goods at a price which the great mass of buyers can afford to pay. The trade is depressed chiefly because the Indian or Chinese laborer cannot afford to pay over double the pre-war price for the same article.

With raw cotton at least double the 1913 price, and the wages of operatives about 70 per cent. higher, it is not difficult to understand that cotton goods cannot be sold at much less 150 per cent. above pre-war price.

The inevitable result is that the demand among customers whose wages have risen only about 35 per cent. is not what it was.

The chief pre-war markets were India, China, South America and Turkey. No other markets can take their place. A useful trade is now being done with the United States in the finer and more expensive goods, but this is not considered a development that can make anything but a comparatively trivial contribution towards balancing the decline of trade with the Far East.

Only cheaper production can restore that vital trade. For this the industry looks mainly to cheaper raw material from America. The price has fallen in the past few months, but is still quite double pre-war, and seems unlikely to go any lower.

If it did go down to the pre-war 6d., no one, it seems, would trouble to grow it.

How in view of all these factors, production costs are going to be lowered to a point that would make it possible for two shirts to be sold for the present price of one, no one here seems able to explain. But until this happens there seems to be no doubt that the unemployment problem will remain.

SHEEP RUNS WILD FOR THREE DAYS

A sheep which was badly wanted because it had been in a field where cattle suffering from foot and mouth disease were destroyed gave officials of the Ministry of Agriculture and keepers in Epping Forest an exciting chase. The story of the hunt is:

Friday.—Chased by colts in a field at Chigwell. Swam the River Roding.

Saturday.—Searched for in vain.

Sunday.—Hunted at Epping, but ran like a deer.

Monday.—Run to earth at Bury Farm, Epping. Eluded all efforts at capture, and was finally shot.

A post-mortem examination of the animal is being made by the Board of Agriculture. It is believed to be one of a herd of 270 Scotch sheep recently brought to Essex.

DOCTORS ON STRIKE IN CO. ANTRIM

Doctors in Ballymoney, Co. Antrim, have been on strike for better fees for the past two days.

The strike is the sequel to a dispute over the question of the amount to be paid for assisting in operations on dispensary patients at the hospital. The doctors now refuse to help at the operations and to administer anaesthetics.

An action brought by a doctor against the guardians is now pending in the High Court. An effort made by the Ministry of Home Affairs to settle the dispute by conference failed.

KEPT OUT LATE BY WICKED SPIRIT

"Why do you step out at night?" a boy of 12 was asked by the Mayor of Northampton.

"It's a wicked spirit," replied the lad, who had been found in the streets after midnight and was charged with wandering.

The boy had a good home, it was stated, but he would never go there at a reasonable hour.

His father proposed sending him to a lady of whom the boy was very fond to see if it would influence him for good, and the magistrates dismissed the charge.

NO MORE ROOM FOR LUNATICS

The accommodation for lunatics in Great Britain will be used up in another year. This will not be due to an increase in insanity, but to the mere growth of the population.

This statement was made by Sir Frederick Wills, chairman of the Board of Control, when giving evidence to the Royal Commission inquiring into the lunacy laws.

Sir Frederick also said he had never heard of a case of a sane person being detained in an asylum.

As to accommodation, he said, the position will be very serious in a short time.

The only accommodation provided in public asylums for private patients was surplus accommodation.

Mr. H. P. MacMillan, K.C., (chairman): Very soon there might be some embarrassment in dealing with the different classes through shortage of accommodation?

Sir Frederick: The accommodation today will be quite used up in a year.

CENTRAL AERIAL MADE FOR FLATS

The housing committee of the Bethnal Green Borough Council has decided to erect a central wireless aerial on its housing estates in order to do away with the numerous private aerials which disfigure the buildings. The B.B.C. has already suggested a scheme.

It is anticipated that by means of the central aerial it will be possible for the owners of the cheapest crystal aerial to listen-in to Continental and American broadcasting.

IRISH CATTLE FOR BELGIA NMARKETS

A scheme for exporting 20,000 Irish fat cattle from Dublin to Belgium will be inaugurated shortly.

The steamer General Leman has been purchased, and it is proposed to export 300 head every week before May 1. The cattle will be grazed on a farm near Brussels.

A scheme for Irish horse breeding on this farm is also in contemplation.

CLOCK RESTARTED AFTER 157 YEARS

Romance Recalled of Carpenter, Who Made the Timepiece

$100,000 REWARD

John Harrison Finally Got Money by Appeal to King

Lt.-Commander Rupert T. Gould, of the Admiralty Hydrographic Department, has succeeded in starting an ancient marine chronometer, nearly 200 years old, which had not been working since 1767—157 years. This machine, massive and intricate, is now at the Admiralty, keeping almost perfect time. Its errors, which there are hopes of reducing, amount to only a few seconds a day. Commander Gould worked for a year, chiefly in the small hours of the morning, in cleaning and repairing the clock.

It has more than 500 parts and weighs 103 pounds. The brass in the clock is of such fine quality that an ingot of it could be beaten out almost like gold lear.

Its maker, John Harrison, began life as a carpenter in a Yorkshire village. The clock bears the inscription: "Jno. Harrison Fecit. Made for his Majesty King George II. By order of a committee held the 30th of June, 1737." The committee was known as the Board of Longitude. Of four marine chronometers made by Harrison and still possessed by Greenwich Observatory this is the second. The maker was striving for the £20,000 prize which Parliament offered, following a petition of sea captains and merchants in 1714, for any method which would determine a ship's longitude within half a degree.

With is fourth chronometer Harrison won this reward, but he received his money only after a personal appeal to George III.

The clock now at the Admiralty took two years to construct, and the Board of Longitude gave Harrison £250 towards the task. It is a clock within a clock. There is a little clock which will go for 4 minutes only, and another clock which automatically rewinds the former every 3¾ minutes, and has to be wound itself once daily.

Arrest of Director Sequel to Failure Of Produce Society

Scotland Yard officers arrested in Westminster Frank Carille Mitchell, O.B.E., of Pont street, on a warrant charging him with forging a cheque for £4,000.

Mitchell is the managing director of the Agricultural Wholesale Society, of Mark-lane, London, now in liquidation. He also resides at Bodmin, and was conveyed to Bodmin by Cornwall police.

He is a prominent figure in Cornwall and a member of a number of exclusive clubs.

The society of which he was a managing director was designed to sell produce from the farmer to the consumer direct. It recently ceased operations with liabilities running into thousands of pounds.

TWO BOYS SHOT.

When Horace Parkinson, a farmer, of Misterton, was loading a breech-loading gun, the hammer fell and the gun back-fired, with the result that Charles Frederick Gagg, aged 4, and his brother, aged 6, were shot.

The boy Charles died later. Parkinson was hit in the hand by the cap of the cartridge.

WELSH FOOTBALL PLAYERS FIRED

Curran and Ferris, the Irish international players, and Garrett, of Everton, who have been playing for Pontypridd this season, have been dismissed by that club.

The three players appeared later at the local police court, when Curran and Ferris were summoned for using indecent language, and Ferris and Garrett for assaulting the police outside a Roman Catholic Church hall, where a dance was taking place.

Lester Lewis, who appeared for the men, announced the action of the club directors, and pleaded for leniency on the grounds that they had already been severely punished.

The men were bound over in £10 each.

Heroism on Duty Is Not Recognized by Royal Humane Society

Heroic conduct while on duty is its own reward, and must go otherwise unrewarded.

This was the decision of the Eastbourne Council when attention was drawn to the gallant conduct of bathing attendants, who risked their lives in rescuing visitors.

The men were recommended to the Royal Humane Society, but the society did not recognize the bravery of men on duty, says the London Chronicle.

Councillors called attention to the fact that the council always rewarded exceptional smartness on the part of the police. Then why not reward heroes of the water?

The chairman replied that these men were getting a weekly wage to do their duty.

SICKNESS CAUSE OF HEAVY LOSS

Twenty Million Weeks Work Lost in One Year

Arthur Greenwood, M.P., Parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Health, in opening the health week at Stepney, E., said that the period of sickness and disablement among insured persons for which benefit was paid last year totalled 20½ million weeks or 394,000 years, and was equal to the time of 394,000 fully employed workers.

The unemployment from this cause was a third of the unemployment from bad trade, and more than twice as much time was lost through sickness than through industrial disputes.

Two out of every five children in the elementary schools were suffering from some physical defect, and from 35 to 40 per cent. of the children entering the elementary schools at five years of age had defects which could have been prevented or cured.

The development of maternity and child welfare was one of the most powerful agencies for the eradication of disease and for preserving the health and vigor of a far larger number of people.

BAN BOBBED HAIR.

Derby Board of Guardians decided, by 20 votes to 14, not to allow the nurses in their institutions to have bobbed hair. It was stated that three nurses who had bobbed hair were objected to by the patients. Hence the Board's decision.

SENTENCE OF TEN MINUTES GIVEN

The shortest sentence of imprisonment on record—ten minutes—was passed at Tottenham Police Court on Edith Morphew, aged 27, of Nag's Head-road, Pondersend.

She had been charged with stealing sheets and blankets from a house at Edmonton, and had been on remand for two weeks' for medical examination.

As she had adready been in custody for some time the magistrate said he would order her to be kept in the cells only until the hands of the clock pointed to 12.

It was then 10 minutes to 12.

MAN OF 74 IS RUINED BY ROBBERY

At the age of 74, William Rigby entrusted a solicitor's clerk with £650 to pay off a debt which arose through him accepting a bill of exchange for a friend.

The clerk, Frederick Marshall, aged 60, stole the money, and Mr. Rigby was adjudicated bankrupt.

This story was told at the Old Bailey when Marshall was sentenced to 14 months in the second division for fraudulent conversion.

Originally a solicitor, he had been struck off the Rolls for misappropriating clients' money.

ULSTER MINISTER FOR UNDERGROUND

Sir Ernest Clark, Permanent Secretary to the Treasury under the Ulster Parliament, is to join the staff of the London Underground group of railway companies. It was stated at Electric House, Westminster, that until the return of the chairman, Lord Ashfield, from America, no decision as to Sir Ernest's position could be reached. Sir Ernest, who is 60, was secretary of the Royal Commission on Income Tax in 1919-20.

Table Delicacies By Air For Smart London Restaurant

Out-of-season delicacies, like raspberries and melons, brought from France by airplane, are a new feature of a West End restaurant in London.

The manager of this restaurant flies from London to Paris expressly to select his purchases. He went by airplane last week-end, and last year he flew to Paris and back 27 times.

He states that more than once, by flying to Paris and back, he has been able to introduce to London new "creations" of the Paris chefs before they have become fully known to the gourmets of Paris.

LEGAL FIGHT OVER MILLIONAIRE'S WILL

Captain Woolf Barnato Suit Against Joel Bros. Involves Big Sum

Two millionaires and the son of a multi-millionaire are to fight out a legal battle involving thousands of pounds when Captain Woolf Barnato, son of the famous Barney Barnato, brings an action against Messrs. S. B. and J. B. Joel.

The case—which is to decide how far Captain Barnato benefits under the wills of his father and cousin—will be heard by Mr. Justice Romer.

Sir John Simon, K.C., and Mr. Maugham, K.C., will lead for the defendants, and Mr. Upjohn, K.C., for Captain Barnato.

Five years ago the plaintiff asked for an order in the Chancery Court for an account of the business transactions of Barnato Brothers during the twenty years between his father's mysterious disappearance from the deck of a liner and the dissolution of a partnership between himself and the Joel Brothers.

HALF A MILLION.

It was pointed out at the time that by his father's will Captain Barnato was given £250,000, and he claimed a proportionate part of the profits.

By his cousin's will also Captain Barnato was left £250,000.

The deed drawn up in 1917 dissolving the partnership between plaintiff and defendants provided that the balance of the capital due was £274,000, and that he was entitled to certain stocks.

Meantime Mr. David Allan, a well-known chartered accountant, has just completed a five years' investigation of the dealings of Barnato Brothers, and his report will be available when the case comes on.

BRITAIN IN LEAD IN SHIPBUILDING

Constructing 28 Large Vessels Out of Total of 43

There are at the present time under construction in the world 35 vessels of between 10,000 and 20,000 tons each, and eight of 20,000 tons and upwards, according to Lloyd's Register shipbuilding returns for the quarter ended September 30.

Twenty out of the 35, and all the larger vessels, are building in Great Britain and Ireland.

The return show that at present there are 43 steamers and motor-ships, each of over 1,000 tons, with a total tonnage of 290,220 tons, under construction for the carriage of oil in bulk. Of these tankers 22 of 138,820 tons are under construction in Great Britain and Ireland, and 11 of 95,500 tons in Germany.

Tonnage of vessels now building which are to be fitted with internal combustion engines, amounts to 930,800 tons, while the tonnage of steam vessels under construction is 1,621,569. The total world tonnage shown in Table 6—2,581,012 tons—is 865,546 tons below the highest pre-war record reached on June 30, 1913, viz.; 3,446,558 tons.

BRIDE WIDOWED WITHIN WEEK

Stanley Robinson, the young cancer-stricken Royal Field Artillery driver, who was married at a London register office while lying on a stretcher, died at the Middlesex Hospital.

His bride is only 19, and he was so ill during the ceremony that he was unable to sign his name in the marriage register, and had to put a cross, being immediately taken back to hospital by ambulance.

Woman Stockbroker Says Finance Good Career for Girls

"I started life in the City, at the age of nineteen, as a typist at £1 a week. My income now runs well into four figures."

This statement was made by Miss Gordon Holmes, a woman stockbroker, in advocating that girls should take up finance, at a luncheon of the Soroptimist Club, at the Criterion Restaurant.

"If six suitable girls came to my office tomorrow I would take them all," she said. "I am training girls to take highly paid, responsible posts. It is the one opening for women where there is no expensive training, and in which they can earn as they learn.

"I have a girl under twenty years of age who handles the entire securities of the company."

EXCITING TRAVEL WITH WILD ZEBRA

Keeper of London Zoo Had Interesting Trip

BUFFALO ON DECK

New Consignment of Animals Now on Exhibition in London

Stirring adventures befell a Zoo keeper while bringing from East Africa a consignment of animals for the menagerie.

Mr. Blore, the keeper, who arrived at the Zoological Gardens brought with him two African buffaloes, two elands, a zebra, and an oryx.

He said that the zebra was the wildest specimen that he had ever encountered.

"I found him awaiting me in an enclosure near Nairobi," he said, "and the first business was to get a headstall on him.

"While cutting an opening to get him out the zebra jumped right through the barbed wires of the enclosure, and became thoroughly upset.

"When we went to adjust his headstall, which had got over one ear, he dashed straight for a gate. Knocking out two of the panels, he got the gate round his neck, and finished by turning a somersault, gate and all. Getting to his feet again, he broke out of the gate, leaving only the framework.

"That was the animal we had to lead for three miles across the country."

SAVAGED A BOY.

"While I was looking after the elands, which were also giving trouble, the zebra broke away from the boys, but being fleet-footed, they caught him again and tied him to a post. Though this was almost as stout as a scaffoldpole, the zebra pulled it out of the ground.

"Making another start, the zebra kicked himself free and charged one of the boys, biting him through the arm and elbow. He was prevented from doing more damage, and later was lassoed by a policeman and tied to the back of a bullock wagon.

"All went well for a mile, and then the zebra sat down. We could not drag him along, so we had to take him off.

"When we reached the train he ran wild again. He was so 'wicked' on board ship that he nearly kicked the panels out of his heavy travelling-box.

"One of the buffaloes did get on deck. An African buffalo is one of the most ferocious of beasts and, as this was a big bull the sailors made a dash for it. We got him back again before he did any harm."

The buffalo are in quarantine, but the zebra is already on exhibition.

CONVERSATIONS IN LONDON BAR-ROOM

Women, Food, Politics, and Insurance are Favorite Topics

Twenty men in groups of threes and fours were talking in an American bar in London and these are a few of the topics they discussed:—

GROUP NO. 1.

"Of course, the best-looking women on earth are to be found in Vienna. . . . . "

"Rot!"

"No rot at all! The Viennese women don't cover themselves with paint. They let their natural charms have full play, they possess gorgeous figures, they . . . "

"What about Frenchwomen?"

"They wear shoes and stockings better than any women in the world, but beyond that. . . "

GROUP NO. 2.

"Give me a good ripe gorgonzola. . . . "

"Or a Stilton . . . "

"Yes, I grant you a Stilton takes a lot of beating. I remember once. . . . "

GROUP NO. 3.

"A general election would be a crime. It's becoming an annual feast like Christmas, only much more expensive. Now if only the Socialists would take my advice they'd make a graceful gesture, shrug their shoulders and say to the Conservatives. . . . "

GROUP NO. 4.

"If I die before I'm sixty-five I get the whole of the annual payments back, plus the bonus, and if I live I receive £10,000 on my sixty-fifth birthday."

"And what good will that be to you? You can't go on buying bathchairs. After the age of forty money doesn't mean enjoyment."

"How old are you?"

"Twenty-five."

"Well, have another drink and don't talk so much."

GROUP NO. 5.

"And they say she just put on her hat, rang up for a taxicab, and left poor old George all alone in the house with five children."

"Shame!"

"And by the next morning's post came a letter threatening that she wouldn't return unless he promised to turn over a new leaf."

"And what did he do?"

"Sent her a telegram agreeing to everything."

"Well, well . . . "

BOOKHOUT'S BIG GAINS A FEATURE IN COLLEGIATE'S SECOND VICTORY

Peterboro Student's Plunging Half Scored Three Tries Against Oshawa.

P. C. I. WON BY 26-6

Visitors Played Stubborn Game, But Lacked Scoring Punch.

Playing steady, effective football the Peterborough Collegiate Institute twelve eliminated Oshawa High School from the Intersholastic O.R.F.U series at Riverside Park Saturday, beating the green and white sweatered students from the motor city 26 points to 6. P.C.I. had won in Oshawa on the previous Saturday by 16 to 2, so that their margin on the series was substantial.

Without detracting in any way from the clean cut nature of the Peterborough victory Saturday it must be said that the final score does not do justice to the stubborn fight put up by the visitors.

The sturdy Oshawa youngsters battled every foot of the journey, threatened frequently and had considerable success in line plunging and end runs in mid-field. They lacked the final punch, however, and except on one occasion failed to solve the Peterborough defence when close to the P.C.I. goal line.

On the other hand Coach Browne's team with their smooth working interference were most effective when there was an opening for a score, taking advantage of most of their opportunities in a style that showed the results of sound coaching.

Gale Went Abegging

There was a half gale blowing from the southwest during the game but neither team when playing with the wind took much advantage of it to employ an aerial attack. The breeze was a tricky one, causing the ball to cut crazy capers in the air and a kicking game might have been most successful. P.C.I. utilized the wind to much better advantage than the visitors who, playing with the first period, held P.C.I. inside their own half of the field almost continuously and yet failed to score point, although they were in position half a dozen times to boot over for at least a single.

The whole P.C.I. squad had a hand in the victory, the tackling of the local students being a conspicuous feature. Cheu, Outram, Woods, Henry and Yelland were particularly effective in this department of the game grassing their men with clean, diving tackles that were pretty to watch. Gordie Pogue at quarter back handled the plays nicely and Bookhout, although closely watched was always prominent, scoring three trys for his team. Rye contributed some useful line plunging and the wing line generally shone both offensively and defensively.

Oshawa's Best.

For Oshawa Kohen at quarterback was perhaps the star. On the defence his tackling stood out and on the attack he showed nice speed, especially in getting end runs under way. Hart and Williams were conspicuous through their fleetness of foot and Black plunged effectively.

The teams:

Oshawa.

Flying wing—McKay.
Halves—Williams, Hart, Adair.
Quarter—Kohen.
Snap—Ferguson.
Inside wings—Black, Cornwall.
Middle wings—Johnston, Henry.
Outside wings—Gummow, Hubbell.
Subs—Brown, Rowden, Smith, Baird, Clark, Hare.

Peterborough Collegiate.

Flying wings—Cheu, Outram.
Halves—Cole, Bookhout.
Quarter—Pogue.
Snap—Yelland.
Inside wings—Killaly, Craw.
Middle wings—Rye, Ebbs.
Outside wings—Henry, Wood.
Subs—Fraser, Neal, Goheen, Amys
Referee—Bobby Armstrong, Toronto.
Umpire—Joe Batten, Peterboro.

Summary of Play.

P.C.I. got their first points before the game got nicely under way. Oshawa elected to defend the south goal and the Petes kicked off. Hart punted after two line ups and P.C.I. got possession of the ball at their own 40-yard line. Oshawa line held, forcing a kick. Bookhout did the punting and following up his own kick at Oshawa's 45-yard line, romping down the field unmolested for an easy try which Pogue failed to convert. P.C.I. 5; Oshawa 0.

Oshawa pressed hard after this initial set back and for the balance of the period kept P.C.I. bottled up in their own end of the field. They failed to use the wind, however, and chance for singles were throyn away for the bigger stake, a touchdown. P.C.I. always tightened in the shadow of their own goal posts, however, and the end of the quarter found Oshawa still scoreless, although the ball was their ten yards out.

When ends were changed P.C.I. held them and got possession. Play was quickly transferred down the field and when Peterborough recovered a loose ball thiry-five yards out Bookhout boomed a long punt int touch-in-goal for a point. P.C.I. 6; Oshawa 0.

The local students almost immediately secured possession on a wild pass by the Oshawa half line. Pogue tried a goal from the field but missed and Oshawa by a couple of nice end runs, carried the ball to mid-field where play remained for some time. Finally the P.C.I. wing line opened a wide gap for Rye and the local captain broke through for a forty-yard run. Pogue carried the ball over the line on the next play, a smoothly worked fake. The try was not converted. P.C.I. 11; Oshawa 0

P.C.I. continued to press and soon after Bookhout broke through and sprinted 40 yards for a touchdown, which Pogue converted neatly. P.C.I. 17; Oshawa 0.

The Second Half.

Oshawa had the wind with them again in the third period and were on the attack throughout, although P.C.I.'s stout defence kept them from running up a score. Early in this period Hart kicked over the line for a rouge. P.C.I. 17; Oshawa 1.

The visitors continued to press but could not deliver the final punch until Bookhout went off for repairs. With the big half off Oshawa scored their only try of the series after some nice line plunging, on a neat play by Kohen. P.C.I. 17; Oshawa 6.

P.C.I. came on and had all the best of the play in the last period. Soon after the session opened Cole booted to the dead line for a point. P.C.I. 18; Oshawa 6.

Henry intercepted an Oshawa pass and once again Cole kicked for a single. P.C.I. 19; Oshawa 6.

A little later Outram broke through for a thirty-yard gain and Bookhout was sent over for the final try. Pogue converted. P.C.I. 25; Oshawa 6.

P.C.I. were pressing continuously and before the final whistle Cole again booted a single. iFnal score—P.C.I. 26; Oshawa 6.

Scored Touch in Last Few Minutes, Winning by 10-4 in Toronto.

BREEN BIG HELP

TORONTO, Nov. 3.—Argonauts, strengthened by Joe Breen at centre half and playing their very best game of the season, gave Hamilton Tigers their first defeat of the big four season at Varsity Stadium on Saturday, and kept themselves strictly in the running for the title. The score was 10 to 4. It was the scrappiest game of many a moon, but the Argo wing line stood up under the battering and outplayed Tigers' famous tanks for three periods. In the final period they weakened under the incessant pounding, and it looked as if the old ball game was gone, when a couple of fumbles in the Tiger line gave them life and turned a 4-3 score against them into a 10-4 score.

Tigers' Big Gain.

In this fourth period Tigers marched 50 yards in succession of bucks, and then Quinn dropped a field goal and changed the score from Argos 3-Tigers 1 to Tigers 4-Argos 3. Then came the breaks. On the first one Breen kicked for tying point and on the second MacKenzie put up an onside kick, which made the score 5-4 in Argos favor. Tigers came back desperately and were staking another smash up the field when Breen grabbed a Tiger onside kick and raced to Tigers' one-yard line with only a minute to go. MacKenzie sent up another onside kick, which was grabbed by Thomas for a touch—that iced the game.

Breen Starred.

Joe Breen made a wonderful difference in the Argo back field. He, Reaves and Dinsmore stood head and shoulders above the Tiger trio. Tigers' much-feared wing line strength was not in evidence in the first three periods. It was a fierce, hard game, and the better team won. Argos should have been on easy street long before the Tigers took the lead in the final period. They had enough the best of the first three periods to have had a five or six-point lead. That lady luck should smile on them in the hour of their direst need was only just. They won the game and they deserved the victory, for they played a fearless, courageous game.

SWEETS

Men are eating more candy than women, according to leading diet experts. The usual explanation is that the sugar in candy is a substitue for pre-prohibition alcohol. One authority claims excess in candy is as injurious to the digestive system as over indulgence in alcohol. Also that the candy habit is as hard to break as the liquor habit. Other experts disagree.

One advantage of having 'experts' is that there's nearly always one or more who'll back you, no matter what you think.

Ty Cobb and Jack Miner In Hudson Bay District

HEARST, Ont., November 3. By Canadian Press. —"It's great being lulled to sleep by the hoot of the owl and awakened in the morning by the howling of the wolves."

This is the message received from Tyrus Cobb, the famous United States ball player, and Jack Miner, the well known Canadian naturalist, who are spending a month of "real vacation" in the Hudson Bay district woods many miles from here.

They were last heard of going north by canoe in the general direction of James Bay.

Ty Cobb may be doing some hunting, but Jack Miner seldom carries a gun, preferring to hunt with a long range camera.

They are due back to civilization in a week or two. This is Miner's 39th consecutive season in the north country.

OTTAWA EARNED MONTREAL GAME

Senators Defeated M.A.A.A. 10-2 in Their First Win of Season.

SQUAD WORKED WELL.

MONTREAL, November 2. — By defeating Montreal 10-2 in a scheduled interprovincial Rugby Union fixture at the Westmount Grounds on Saturday afternoon, the Ottawa Senators scored their first victory of the season. The win was decisive one and well earned, as Ottawa fielded much the better team, and a squad that worked together at all times. They assumed a commanding lead early in the play and were never dangerously threatened by the local squad.

While Ottawa showed every mark of long weeks of coaching and combined in their efforts, Montreal showed a lack of plays. At times the local players became so disorganized that they made mistakes that were costly, and after being placed at a handicap when Tubman scored Ottawa's first three points by field goal, Montreal never again became settled down in their play.

Time after time Montreal plays were so apparent to their opponents that they were smothered before they got under way and counted for nothing, while Ottawa gained ground frequently on their downs.

Montreal failed on almost all occasions and were forced to adopt an aerial offensive, their punts being well taken care of by Tubman and Connell, and frequently returned for gains.

Although the game furnished thrills and excitement to the 2500 who attended it, the play was listless and at times dragged tediously. The excitement came from innumerable fistic encounters and the number of penalties imposed by Referee Hal Degruchy.

The officials enforced the rules to the limit and by doing so held the players well in hand.

Morgan of Montreal and Cote of Ottawa were ruled off for the whole game while the other penalties ranged in duration from three to five minutes. Nine penalties were imposed, which is the record number for any match played this season in the interprovincial union.

NEWS OF OMEMEE.

OMEMEE, Nov. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Moncrief, who have recently become residents of the village, suffered a serious accident to their car. While motoring to Springville, and proceeding up one of the large hills south of Mr. Samuel Connell's, Mr. Moncrief attempted to change the gear, and in so doing stalled the car. He immediately applied the brakes, but they would not hold. Mrs Moncrief jumped out and the driver, seeing the machine was getting beyond control, jumped also, leaving the car to take its own course. It soon left the road and ended in the ditch on a stone pile with two wheels smashed off and other serious damage. The occupants were motored home, thankful to have escaped with their lives.

WOOLLENS GOT GOAL NEAR END WITH THISTLES

Richmond Scored After 15 Minutes Play—Mitchell's Hard Luck.

CARMICHAEL GOOD

Woollen's Successful Raid Netted the Equalizer.

The Thistle and Canadian Woollens drew in a league game—one gaol each — before a very good attendance of spectators on Saturday afternoon at King Edward Park. There was no good football during the ninety minutes' play which was caused by the high wind that was blowing down the field. Fate dealt a severe blow to the Thistle when their opponents equalized three minutes before the finish.

Mr. Alex. McKinley handled the game in his usual manner, never faltering at any time to give his decision in an amicable style that was approved by the fan.

Mitchell's Hard Luck.

The Woollens won the toss and decided to kick with the wind. They immediately became dangerous through Mitchell's presence at centre forward who had the Thistle half-backs at sea when he rattled the ball against the upright in the first minutes of the start, until Anderson relieved. From the clearance, Carmichael trapped quickly, to force the play at the other end, where Cridland frustrated a serious attack. This enlivened matters, and the ball travelled all over the field until Blowers tested Curtis with a fast rising shot, that was followed by an unsuccessful corner-kick. The Thistle were not long in making up for the deficit in attack when Hutton and McPhail gained possession in the corner to be touched out by the Woollens' defence.

Richmond's Beautiful Goal.

Then Carmichael raised the thrill when he outwitted three opponents in rotation and steadying his forwards, slipped the ball over to his centre forward, who jumped in between the defence pair, quick as a flash, to run ahead with the ball at his foot and sending the ball far out of the reach of the goalkeeper after 15 minutes' play. After this surprise goal, the Woollens set a fast pace in which the Thistle defence was proving a stumbling block at close headquarters and compelling the opponents to shoot from far out. In this respect, Chambers was very unfortunate with his tries at goal. Just before the interval, Clark made things interesting around the Jags goal when he only gained a corner kick that brought with it the interval. Half time, Thistle 1, Woollens 0.

Half Time.

On resuming, Read was penalized for handling. Dawson sent a low ground shot for goal that was checked quickly by Chambers about a yard out, while Warde was at the other end of the goal. It was very evident that the Woollens were on the alert to gain the equalizer as the forwards hung around the Thistle's full-backs to their discomfort. Time and again, the Thistle's half-backs would tackle close and send their forwards up the field, but the Woollens' full-back returned with long, punting drives that sailed in the sky that would eventually be touched out or be followed up with an infringement one way or the other. The Thistle had slightly the superiority in mid-field play but did not get the necessary thing—goals — as the ball was shot against Warde to be cleared also go abegging as the sphere rolled right across the goal.

Woollens' Defence Good.

No matter what kind of attack was planned the defence pair of the Woollens would respond with snappy clearances as the ball hovered around Warde's goal. Everybody was taking it for granted that there would be no more scoring, but Richmond changed places with Carmichael who went up on to the forward line. This change worked favorably, for Mitchell, Hodgson and Gaskill. They noticed the opening quickly and Monkman sent Clark down the wing against Rae. The defence man held him closely but Mitchell jumped into the play as Richmond was watching for a cross. The Woollens' player dribbled the ball right into the goal area. Mitchell slipped the ball over to Hodgson, who tapped the ball into the vacant space as Curtis was standing at the other end, with only three minutes to go. The remaining minutes were full of excitement as the supporters of each team responded with encouragement for the winning goal which did not materialize in a ninety minute spasmodic tussel. Full-time, Thistle 1, Woollens 1.

Goal scorers—Richmond, Thistle and Hodgson, Woollens.

Thistle— Curtis, goal; Anderson and Rae, full-backs; Ross, Carmichael and Dawson, half-backs; McPhail, Hutton, Richmond, Williams and Burgess, forwards.

Woollens—Warde, goal; Cridland and Chambers, full-backs; Read, Monkman and Blowers, half-backs; Clark, Gaskill, Mitchell, Hodgson and Sayers, forwards.

Referee—Alex. McKinley.

WON BIKE GRIND.

CHICAGO, November 2. — Bobby Walthour and Jimmy Horan of Newark, N.J., won the six day bicycle race at the Coliseum which ended at 11 o'clock last night after 146 hours of riding.

ZBYSZKO DEFEATED.

Lost Wrestling Bout on Foul To Renato Gardini.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—Renato Gardini, Italy, Saturday night won on a foul from Wladek Zbyszko, Poland and earned the right to wrestle Jim Londos, Greece, in the final elimination match of the international mat tournament here. The winner will be acknowledged the leading contender for the crown held by Ed. "Strangler" Lewis, of Kansas City, although the titleholder will not participate in this meeting.

Zbyszko in the opinion of sporting writers at ringside, had the better of his opponent throughout the 30 minutes and twenty seconds of the match, using his favorite hold, the headlock, with punishing effect. Gardini was in distress most of the time. He finally protested to Referee Wm. Hermann that Zbyszko was using the strangle hold.

BATSTONE WAS STAR OF QUEEN'S

Plays Brilliant Game Against McGill—Leadley Also a Factor.

QUEEN'S WON 16-4

KINGSTON, Nov. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Displaying the old fighting spirit which carried them through to the Dominion championship for the past two years, Queen's on Saturday defeated McGill at the Richardson Stadium by the score of 16 to 4; in one of the best rugby battles of the year.

The game was a decided reversal of form from last week, when Queen's were not very impressive against the Montrealers. Led by Pep Leadley and Harry Batstone, Queen's tore right into McGill from the start and but for two lucky breaks for the red and white, were much superior. Batstone never played a better game for the tri-color; he caught and ran in faultless fashion, and even though subjected to a terrific gruelling, he was in the game every minute and was really one of the brightest stars on the field. Leadley and McKelvey were also largely responsible for the Queen's win.

McGill tried the tactics which proved fairly successful the previous week, that of onside kicking, but they reckoned without Batstone. A fumble gave them the ball near Queen's line at the opening of the game, but Blair's onside kick was grabbed by Batstone and only one point was yielded. Their second point came also as the result of an onside kick. Queen's on the other hand, made tremendous gains through the line and when McGill lost the ball for offside interference on their own two yard line, Red McKelvey crashed over for a try which Leadley converted. A field goal by Leadley, and long kicking to the dead line by Leadley and Batstone scored the remainder of Queen's points, while Cameron twice kicked for points in the third quarter.

Queen's were a much better team than in the games with Varsity and McGill and their supporers look for a victory over the blue and white this coming Saturday.

Diagonal lines are very cleverly manipulated. Coats frequently show this line instead of the conventional opening.

MOTORIST

Compulsory auto liability insurance now is in effect in nearly all of Switzerland. As a rule, the auto owner must carry at least $20,000 worth. The laws favor the pedestrian who gets hit. The burden of proof is on the driver. And the car owner has to pay a tenth of the big damages out of his own pocket, and all of the damages up to $25. They claim it's safe now to cross Swiss roads without running.

TURNER TROPHY WON BY PACKERS

C. P. C. Juniors Defeated Masseys in Close Soccer Game.

MAYOR PRESENT

The final game for the possession of Mayor Turner's Charity Cup was played on King Edward Park on Saturday afternoon before a good crowd The Children's Aid Society and St Joseph's Orphanage will receive a nice sum from the proceeds.

The Junior Packers won a hard-fought game from the Masseys by 3 goals to 2.

The Packers won the toss and had the advantage of the wind. Foster went away on the left and tested Edgar in the first minute. Underwood relieved and placed nicely to Laughlin, Grant just robbing him in time. The Masseys returned again, Ashmore sending in a beautiful centre, Laughlin met it and sent in a shot that Bradley was lucky to save by turning around the post.

From the corner kick which Billingsley well placed, Montgomery headed out of danger. Halliday sent out to Downer, who made a run on the wing and sent in straight for goal, but Edgar caught the ball and threw out. Montgomery met the sphere and like a flash sent it out of the reach of Edgar. Grant and Oxley were sending their forwards along, but the Masseys' defence was very safe. Edgar in goal was brilliant. At last Halliday saw an opening and sent to Mitchell, who passed to Gardiner, who scored a nice goal. The Masseys were now on their merit, and played with renewed vigour, but had very hard lines in not scoring.

Half-tie arrived with the score standing at 2 to 0 in favour of the Packers.

Second Half.

Upon resuming, the Masseys, with the wind in their favour, began to press. Montgomery who had changed places with Oxley, headed out of danger when Bradley was beaten. Foster and Buchan relieved by a nice combination. The Masseys went back again. Billingsley fastened on the ball and beat Bradley with a splendid shot.

The Masseys were now going great guns and the Packers' defence had some anxious moments. Westlake and Ashmore by some nice play on the right got into Packers' goal. Westlake shot and Bradley saved at the expense of a corner. Ashmore took the kick and sent well in for Pulley to make the game equal.

Packers went to the other end, where Mitchell robbed Billingsley, slipped the ball to James, who tested Edgar with a stinger, Downer took the kick and sent nicely into goal. Gardiner trapped the ball and gave to James, who beat Edgar with lightning shot..

Time was called and the Packers were winners of th Charity Cup by 3 goals to 2.

The Teams.

C.P.C. — Bradley; Oxley and T. Montgomery; Mitchell, Halliday and D. Grant; I. Downer, W. James, H. Gardiner, I. Buchan, and T. Foster.

Masseys — Edgar; Smith and Naish; Underwood, Hotson and Wilson; Ashmore, Westlake, Laughlin, H. Pulley and Billingsley.

Referee, J. L. Howarth.

Presenting the Cup

His Worship the Mayor, accompanied by Aldermen Stocker and Crowe and Mr. John Edgar of the Children's Aid Society, went on the band stand. They were introduced by the president to the captains of the teams, and in handing the trophy to Wally James, captain of the C. P. C., the Mayor congratulated the teams upon the splendid game they played and called for three cheers for the Masseys.

H. Pulley, captain of the Masseys, responded.

ONTARIO TO HAVE TAX ON GASOLINE

Last Year a Million United States' Motor Cars Entered Ontario.

The commendatory allusions of the Provincial Treasurer, Hon. Col. Price, to the proposed "gas" tax in the course of recent speeches, in addition to what has been said on the subject by the Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Public Highways would seem to indicate that the government of Ontario has made up its mind to bring in a bill during the coming session of the Provincial Legislature that will enable it to impose a "gas" tax.

Much is to be said in favor of a "gas" impost provided it does not increase the already heavy incubus of taxation that the motorist is required to bear, as officials of the Ontario Motor League have pointed out.

If the license tax is reduced on an average by the amount of the gas tax paid by the average motorist of this province, then the Government will derive a revenue considerably in excess of that secured from the present license system by reason of the enormous and rapidly augmenting annual incursions of motor tourists.

Last year a million United States motor cars entered this province. This year approximately two million will have done so by the end of December—a 100 per cent. gain in a year. Approximately three million (a fifty per cent increase) is not an unreasonable estimate of the number of United States motor tourists' cars that will visit the province during the coming year. This much-to-be-desired invasion through a "gas" tax will very greatly increase the Government's revenue from motor vehicles without increasing the tax on local motorists one penny. On the basis of the consumption of gasoline in Ontario last year, a one-cent-per-gallon "gas tax" would yield a revenue of a million dollars per annum. The Government, of course, is in receipt of the increment from the ever increasing number of cars in the province.

The gas tax, if not imposed as a surtax on the present license tax, is an equitable means af assessing motor vehicle owners for the use of the roads in that, approximately, the weight of vehicle and its mileage determine the extent of its road as well as its "gas" consumption.

Speaking at a meeting of the Ontario Motor Truck Owners' Association a year ago, Hon. Mr. Henry stated that a "gas" tax with a lowered license fee appealed to him "as a fair proposition".

Needless to say, the motorists of the province would be a unit in resenting the imposition of a "gas" tax as a surtax on the present license impost, and that the Motor Leagues and its seventy Affiliated Clubs would vigorously oppose it.

Forty of the states of the Union now impose a 'gas" tax, as does also Quebec.

While a direct tourist tax would prove a very effective barrier to the entrance of United States motor tourists— our third greatest source of revenue from natural resources—a "gas" tax would not prove even a deterrent. The large revenue derived from the "gas" tax on the sale of gasoline to the United States motor tourists would be "found money".

NEWS OF TWEED.

Albert Chard in Motor Car Accident—Repairing Roads.

TWEED, November 1. — A Trenton motor car upset in a ditch near West Huntingdon. Albert Chard, the owner of the car, was pinned beneath it, the weight of a portion of it resting upon his neck and shoulders.

He was taken to Belleville Hospital Mr. Stanley Lee, brakeman on the C.N.R., is again at work after a leave of absence of about two and a half years.

Jack Oulette, the popular pitcher of the Belleville Grand Trunk baseball team, was married in Belleville on Tuesday to Miss Mary E. Doran, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Doran.

The county road workers are now fixing the road at Black Creek near Sulphide.

DRUGS

The dangers and horrors of heroin and other drugs will be indelibly impressed on the 23 million young Americans in various sorts of schools. The job of warning them will be handled by the International Narcotic Education Association. It is preparing the campaign, to be a gigantic one.

More power to this movement. Education is the greatest weapon available against the drug traffic. It was so with alcohol—as we realize, now that compulsion has undone a lot of the years of educational work.

ARTICLE No. 4

Here's a hand that shows the value of clever bidding in obtaining the best bid for the combined hands. It's a perfect example of drawing quick and correct inferences from the bidding:

: Y :
: A B :
: Z :

Hearts — 4
Clubs — A, 3
Diamonds — A, K, Q, J, 4, 8
Spades — K, J, 9, 7

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one diamond, A one heart and Y and B passed. Z now bid two diamonds, A two hearts and Y and B again passed. Z was now in a position where he could safely bid three diamonds but with no chance for game as his partner Y had refused to assist his bid. He therefore decided to bid two spades, knowing that if doubled he could bid three diamonds and that his partner would not assist the spade bid unless he had good spades. It is always dangerous to assist a partner's secondary bid, that is, one made on the second or subsequent rounds of bidding, without at least four cards of that suit. After Z bid two spades, A bid three hearts and Y, with queen, 10, 8, and 6 of spades, properly bid three spades. This bid was justifiable because of Y's strong holding in the spade suit. B now bid four hearts and Z, having confidence in Y's assist, bid four spades and all passed. Needless to say, Y-Z made four spades, losing one heart, one club and one spade trick. This hand and Z's bidding are good examples of what can be done by good players in arriving at the best bid of the combined hands. Z's clever inferential bidding gave him a game not possible if he had continued to bid diamonds. It is on hands such as these that the expert has such a great advantage over the average player.

Many of the questions about auction that are submitted to the writer show conclusively that there are many points about the game that puzzle the average player. Some of these points are covered in the standard books on auction but the great majority are never even touched upon. One of the best ways to bring these facts before the readers of these articles is to publish every now and then questions of more or less general interest. Analysis of these questions will not only be interesting but also help to clear up a more or less general misunderstanding of the game.

Hearts — A, Q, 4
Clubs — J, 9, 8, 6, 3
Diamonds — None
Spades — 10, 9, 8, 6, 5

: Y :
: A B :
: Z :

No score; Z dealt and bid one no-trump and A passed. What should Y bid with the foregoing hand? This hand was submitted only last week and shows that there are still players who do not understand the necessity of overbidding their partner's no-trump with a two suit hand. Y should bid two spades and if his partner bids two no-trump, he should bid three clubs. Such a take out is obligatory and Y has no choice in the matter. A two suit hand is the strongest hand that can be held at auction and will generally average to win two more tricks at its best suit bid than at no-trump. Always overbid partner's no-trump with such a hand.

Answer to Problem No. 2

Hearts — J, 8, 4
Clubs — None
Diamonds — 10
Spades — J, 9, 2

Hearts — 10
Clubs — 9, 7, 3, 2
Diamonds — K, Q
Spades — None

: Y :
: A B :
: Z :

Hearts — A, 6, 3, 2
Clubs — A, K, 10
Diamonds — None
Spades — None

Hearts — Q, 9, 7, 5
Clubs — Q, J, 8
Diamonds — None
Spades — None

If spades are trumps and Z is in the lead, how can Y-Z win six of the seven tricks against any defense? Z should lead the eight of clubs and trump it in Y's hand with the deuce of spades. Y should now lead the jack of hearts. If B plays the ace, Z's hearts are set up so that Y-Z will win the balance of the tricks. B should, therefore, play a low heart and Z should play the queen. Z should now lead the queen of clubs and trump in Y's hand with the nine of spades. Y should now lead the eight of hearts and B must play a low heart for the same reason as before. Z should play the nine of hearts and lead the jack of clubs. Y should trump with the jack of spades and lead the four of hearts. B can now only win one trick, the ace of hearts so that Y-Z have won six of the seven tricks against the best defense.

ABOUT BARBER WHO DIDN'T GOSSIP AND THUS BECAME PAL OF KINGS

Charles Jaschke, an Austrian, Landed in England With Only Four Dollars.

LIKES ROYALTY.

Are Kindly and Best Mannered of People—Royal Family Happy.

By MILTON BRONNER.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Edward VII'—King of England, used to take off his hat to Charles Jaschke.

So up till recently did his son, King George.

Likewise the Prince of Wales.

Ditto the Duke of York.

Royalty doesn't usually doff its skypiece to anybody. But it couldn't stand on any ceremony with Jaschke. It had to take off their hats to him. And he's an Austrian by birth, too.

Fact is, Charles the Great is a barber, and one of his pleasant jobs was shearing the locks of the royal family. That gave him the right to put on his shop window:

"Hair cutter by appointment to His Majesty King Edward VII."

And naturally a lot of dukes and earls and other lords and plenty of rich men dropped in to have themselves done.

CHARLES JASCHKE.

"Who were your best customers?" I asked the vete an, now 68.

"Royalty," he replied promptly. "But not for the reasons you would suppose. You would naturally think that loyal persons being used to command, to be petted and spoiled, would boss me around, and that rich men, who came up by their own efforts, would be more considerate.

Have Finest Manners.

"Well, it was just the reverse. It was the kings and the sons of kings who had the finest manners. The never commanded. They never ordered. They requested. Their courtesy was exquisite."

Jaschke landed in England many years ago with hope in his soul, $10 in his pocket and a barber's kit in his hand. After a while he owned a little shop.

And then his big stroke of luck came. Lord Dudley took him on his yacht to be barber to his guests. This was in 1901. King Edward happened to be in Nice at the time and Dudley boasted about Jaschke's skill. The monarch sent for him and the nervous Charles trimmed the royal beard.

The king was so pleased that he at once named Jaschke court barber. After that, when the monarch was in London, Jaschke was summoned regularly to Buckingham Palace.

"I made a hit with His Majesty," said Jaschke, "by knowing how to keep my mouth shut. All barbers aren't talkative, you know. And the worst sin is not so much talking to your customers, but talking about them. One day His Majesty said to me: 'I like you, Charles, because you don't talk a lot. You see, but you do not hear.'

At Sandringham.

"One Christmas I was invited to Sandringham where the king had a big family party. His son, the present King George, and the present Queen Mary were there and also their children, including the present Prince of Wales. There was a big Christmas tree with presents for everybody. Mine was a handsome fountain pen, which the young Prince of Wales handed me. As I was stammering my thanks to him, King Edward came up and laughingly said: 'You are thanking the wrong person, Charles. It's my present and it's rather a deadly weapon, because you will make out your bills with it.'

"I cut the king's beard the day before he died. He was very quiet. He seemed to have a premonition of the end. As I was leaving he did not say he would send for me soon again as he usually did. Instead, he said:

"'Good-bye, Charles. Thank you so much, good-bye.'

"I went on the Ophir with the present King when he made his tour of the Empire in 1901, and later when he went to India in the Renown. My daughter was a little girl at that time and she was invited to dine with me on the Renown and had a topping time.

"That's characteristic of the royal family. They are a happy family circle, and they like to see others happy."

Now all this business is over. Jaschke's premises on Regent Street are being torn down and he is retiring from active barbering.

MUNRO WITH MONTREAL.

Dunc Munro Has Signed a Three Year Contract With New Montreal Team.

MONTREAL, Nov. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Dunc Munro, captain of the Canadian Olympic hockey team, champions of the world, yesterday signed a contract to play for the new Montreal team in the National Hockey League. Munro's salary is the largest ever paid to a professional player, $22,500 for three years. He will be captain of the local team.

Munro will open up a business here, and Montreal owners have guaranteed that his earnings, salary and business, will be $7,500 a year.

CINDERELLA DANCE HELD AT LAKEFIELD

Social Event Well Attended at Lakefield House.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 1.—About 75 attended the Cinderella dance in the Lakefield House on Thursday night and spent a pleasant evening "tripping the light fantastic" till 12.30, when the party broke up. Music was supplied by "The Grove" orchestra, which consisted of E. Fawcett, piano; violin, J. Flick; saxaphone, Robertson; drums, Pringle. Mrs. E. R. Tate assisted with the music. Good music and a good floor went far toward the evening's success. Cards were provided for those who took their pleasure less strenuously, but, with few exceptions, the music lured everyone to the floor at least once during the evening.

The hotel was decorated tastefully for the occasion and never looked better.

A cafeteria supper was served, which was novel and very enjoyable. Mrs. E. R. Tate was the convenor of the committee in charge and is to be congratulated on the success of the enterprise. It is not at all improbable that this is the first of a series of Cinderella dances.

Masquerade, Nov. 4.

The event of next week is the annual masquerade dance of the Lakefield Fire Brigade, which will be held on Tuesday evening, November 4, in the Memorial Hall. Discussions of costumes is a popular topic of conversation at social events, and at the telephone. A number of Peterboro' young people expect to be present.

A.Y.P.A. Party Monday.

On Monday evening, November 3, the annual Hallowe'en party of the A.Y.P.A. will be held in the Sunday school room.

Hunters' Licenses.

Next week will see a big detachment of hunters off. Mr. F. J. Moore, license inspector, has a large supply of hunting and trapping licenses to supply the demand which is greater than ever this year.

Lakefield Personals.

Mrs. Fred Walsh, of Peterboro', is visiting her mother, Mrs. P. Kennedy.

CAPTAIN HURLEY, WHO MADE THE SENSATIONAL "LOST TRIBE" PICTURE, ARRIVES AMONGST THE HEADHUNTERS BY SEA-PLANE. AT THE GRAND THREE MATINEES AND EVENINGS, STARTING TO-DAY, NOVEMBER 3RD—THE FIRST.. SHOWING IN CANADA.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

Have you ever sat before a fire reading a story of cannibals and head-hunters—and dozing off, dreamed of the most amazing experiences amongst these dreadful people, with yourself as the central figure, that upon your release from the arms of Morpheus you hardly dared to move for fear a fearsome creature would pounce upon you with a blood-curdling war cry?

If you have ever had this experience you probably cast it out of your mind the next moment, as an impossible trick of your imagination—yet you are about to be offered a series of adventurers much more thrilling and a thousand times more interesting than any you have ever imagined.

The management of the Grand Opera House offer you this thrilling experience in Captain Frank Hurley's wonder photoplay revelation, "The Lost Tribe," which comes here for three days, matinee daily, starting today, Nov. 3.

In a land practically unknown to civilization Captain Hurley found a tribe of head-hunters who are so remarkably Jewish in their face, form and customs that scientists at last believe that the Lost Tribe of Israel have been found. The explorers went into the lair of the head-hunters by boat and seaplane. The cannibals thought they were strange gods whom a big bird had brought to them. This was the one and only reason that they were not killed. The picture has more thrills to the foot than is found in ten serial pictures taken in the motion picture studio. The picture runs the gamut from deep sea pearl fishing to an attack on the seaplane by the sorcerers of the Lost Tribe. This is the first Canadian tour of "The Lost Tribe," and popular prices are to be charged which will meet the purse of all classes. The matinees start at 2.15, evening shows at 8.15.

AT THE CAPITOL.

LILLIAN GISH IN "THE WHITE SISTER" AT CAPITOL TO-DAY.

Famous Star Has Greatest Role of Long Career.

Lillian Gish, star of many of D. W. Griffith's great productions, and unrivalled as a dramatic actress, appears in "The White Sister" at the Capitol Theatre to-day, Tuesday and Wednesday. Although Miss Gish has been seen in many big productions, none have hitherto presented the wonderful dramatic possibilities of "The White Sister." Her appearance in the famous romantic story has resulted in her being acclaimed as the Duse of the Screen and her many admirers will cordially agree that the wistful little girl of "Hearts of the World," "Way Down East," "Broken Blossoms" and "Orphans of the Storm" achieves even greater emotional heights in "The White Sister." Made in Italy, with the placid beauty of the Italian countryside as settings, "The White Sister" tells one of the most pathetic, yet highly dramatic, love romances ever written. It is an adaptation of the widely read novel by F. Marion Crawford, and tells of the story of a young Italian soldier who is parted from his sweetheart by orders to proceed on active service in Algiers. Reported killed, she is heartbroken and enters a convent. His return home brings a richly dramatic situation—with his sweetheart a nun! The solution of this problem is one of the greatest climaxes in theatrical history. Among the many thrilling incidents in "The White Sister" are shown battles in Algeria with the desert tribesman; a vivid flood scene, depicting the destruction of a town, and an eruption by Mount Vesuvious. Ronald Coleman plays the young Italian officer, while the supporting caste is excellent. Eight months were required to produce this picture. After a long showing on Broadway, "The White Sister" was shown in the leading legitimate theatres throughout United States and Canada, being shown at the Royal Alexandria in Toronto late last spring at prices ranging up to $2. Peterboro theatre - goers, through a special contract arranged by Famous Players Canadian Corportion, operating the Capitol here, will have the privilege of seeing this powerful drama at but a slight advance over the usual admission prices. Loge reservations may be 'phoned to the Capitol, 1720, now. Ladies are requested to attend the matinees, if possible, and so avoid the evening crowds.

AT THE REGENT.

It seems that Dodson Mitchell and Zelda Sears had a little of the "Thomas Hardy" instinct in them when they wrote the famous stage play, "Cornered," a film version of which is coming to the Regent Theatre today. There is a prevailing element of Fate throughout the story, but it is an optimistic fatalism which leaves us pleased and hopeful.

Twin sisters who have been separated in childhood, meet when they are grown to womanhood. One is a thief, the other an heiress, and neither knows the other. The resemblance is so astonishing that their identities become mixed and the heiress is taken for the thief. It is fate which brings them together, fate which reveals who they are, and fate which straightens out a very complicated tangle for both of them.

The plot is worked out exceedingly well, and William Beaudine, who directed this production, is said to have done admirably in accomplishing such an extraordinary piece of work.

Marie Prevost takes the dual characterisation of the twin sisters. Other members of the cast are John Roche, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Raymond Hatton, and Cissy Fitzgerald.

AT THE ROYAL.

'SECOND YOUTH' ROLLICKING PHOTOPLAY OF YOUNG LOVE AT ROYAL NOW.

The subject of women's rights, dealt with in a startlingly original fashion, will be presented for the patrons of the Royal Theatre to-day and running for three days. This is "Second Youth," produced by Distinctive Pictures Corporation and heralded in all cities, large and small, where it has played, as one of the cleverest and funniest screen plays of the season. It is said to present views of modern life which will make the little flappers, shop girls, office workers and even society women believe that life is very much worth while.

"Second Youth" proves two things—first, that no man is harmless, and second, that the question, "Shall woman propose," is still highly debatable.

The story concerns a very modern young lady who is extremely annoyed by the freedom allowed the masculine sex in the matter of flirting. She objects to a condition which allows a man to play around with salesgirls, stenographers, ladies of the ensemble and so forth without arousing adverse comment, but which condemns a woman for doing similar things. She determines to rebel and starts to do a little flirting herself, picking out a super-shy silk salesman because she believes him harmless. The gentleman is not as harmless as he looks and thereby hangs an amusing tale. The young lady finds half a dozen others are hot in pursuit of the same shy young man and he, Simple Simon, accepts the proposals of two or three of them at once. Having desperately tried to escape them all, the hero decides that one of them at least, should not be escaped from, and promptly permits himself to be hooked for life.

An all star cast of comedians, headed by Alfred Lunt and Mimi Palmeri, has been assembled to bring this story to the screen. In addition to the aforementioned, the company includes Walter Catlett, comedian of "Sally," most successful of all musical comedies; Jobyna Howland, chief laughmaker of Belasco's stage version of "The Gold Diggers"; Herbert Corthell, bulwark of innumerable farce successes; Lynn Fontanne, the original Dulcy, and many others of like calibre and fame.

BETTY BALFOUR AT ROYAL THURSDAY.

CAVAN LADIES' AID LUNCHEON

Held at Home of Mrs. David Hunter — Plan Holiday Dinner.

MONDAY, NOV. 10.

CAVAN, Nov. 3.—On Thursday afternoon the Ladies' Aid of Cavan Church were entertained at the home of Mrs. David Hunter. There were fourteen members and two visitors present.

The chief business of the meeting, after the devotional exercises, was planning for the fowl dinner, which will be given in the Cavan Community Hall on Thanksgiving evening, Nov. 10. Abundance of fowl and other good things are being provided for the dinner, which will be followed by a good programme.

Everything was planned at the meeting—the purchasing of eight extra geese, besides the fowl donated, the supervisors for tables, who will choose their waiters; all these matters were dealt with in detail. After the meeting adjourned, Miss Hunter served lunch, and a social time was enjoyed.

To Toronto Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Paul, accompanied their nephew, Mr. Harry McIvor, to Toronto on Thursday morning. Harry will enter Dr. Wright's Orthopedic Hospital, where he will remain for some time, possibly three months, to take treatment for rheumatism. Dr. Turn● has recommended this course of treatment, and some time ago had Dr. Wright visit him. His friends hope he may receive great benefit from the treatment, as he has been an invalid for some time.

Miss Margaret Paul has returned from a two weeks' visit with her sister, Mrs. Charles Ghent, Lotus.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill (nee Myrtle Swain) returned from their honeymoon on Wednesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Hill will reside in Peterboro'.

Mr. J. Taylor came to Mr. T. A. Kelly's on Tuesday morning from St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterboro', to recuperate after an attack of pneumonia. His mother, who was staying n Peterboro' during his illness, has also been a guest of Miss Kelly and Mrs. Milligan this week, and returned to her home in Goderich on Friday.

Mrs. V. Rowen has returned from a prolonged visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bell, Toronto.

Mr. S. S. Staples shipped a car of hogs on Monday; the price paid was close to 10 cents at Cavan Station.

Mr. Harry Lang sold his hogs to T. Lang, shipping from Frazerville. The price received was 10 cents.

Mrs. M. Syer and Mr. G. Coulter, Millbrook, are guests of their sister, Mrs. E. Syer, Cavan.

FLOOD THREATENS FRENCH TERRITORY

Widespread Destruction May Be Caused By Heavy Rains in France and Belgium.

PARIS, Nov. 3—(Canadian Press)—Swollen by incessant rains of the past week, the rivers of Northern France and Belgium are rising with unprecedented rapidity, threatening widespread destruction. The Seine has risen over six feet in two days, the Marne is overflowing at certain points, the Saone is rising two inches hourly, and the Doubs even faster.

In the Argonne the Meuse has turned miles of country into a lake, and near Nancy a number of factories have been submerged. The floods and gales have ravaged seven thousand acres in the Somme valley.

Nearly the whole of the Charleroi region of Belgium is under water, and boat services are being organized to convey food to the flood victims.

BARNARD TRIED BY JUDGE COATSWORTH

Trial of Montreal Home Bank Director Opened This Morning.

TORONTO, Nov. 3.—Trial of C. A. Barnard, Montreal Home Bank director on charges of making, using approving and concurring in false statements of banks affairs was started this morning before Judge Coatsworth in County Criminal Court. R. S. Robertson, K.C., counsel for Barnard, submitted that Judge Coatsworth should not try the case as he had already tried three men on similar charges and that therefore it would be humanly impossible to divest himself of impression already gained. His Honor said he wouldn't mind complying with the request, but there was no other judge available and he had to go on with it. Sir Thomas White was Crown witness, concerning correspondence and conferences he had with the Home Bank directores, D. L. McCarthy, Crown prosecutor in stating the case to the Crown, said he would endeavor to prove, that although Barnard was not present at the annual meeting of 1923, it would be contended that he got a copy of the annual statement and concurred in it.

MOTHERWELL WILL RESIGN FROM POST

Ill Health Has Forced Minister of Agriculture to Quit Job.

TORONTO, Nov. 3. — (Canadian Press).—A special despatch from Ottawa to-day says: It is expected that Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, will resign shortly from the King Cabinet owing to ill-health. It is stated here that his physician has advised him to continue to administer such a large department as that of agriculture in his present state of health would be fatal, and within a short period of time he will give up his portfolio.
The resignation of Mr. Motherwell will necessitate further Cabinet reorganization, and Mr. King will be forced to make such changes as will help him when he goes to the country in 1925. It would therefore be no surprise if Hon. T. A. Crerar, at present Progressive member for Marquette, should be included in the King Cabinet as Minister of Agriculture, a position which he held in the Union Government under Sir Robert Borden.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

The young couple will reside in Toronto.

KING URGES UNION.

Progressive Accessions To Cabinet Looked For On His Return.

OTTAWA, Ont., November 3. — Further endeavors on the part of the Federal government to secure Progressive accessions to the Cabinet are looked for on Premier King's return from Western Canada.
In speeches, the Premier has repeatedly urged the necessity of union between the Liberals and the Progressives.
Political Gossip is busy with Cabinet reconstruction possibilities, and there is talk of the retirement of Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, through ill-health, and of renewed negotiations with Hon. T. A. Crerar and Premier Dunning, of Saskatchewan.
Until the Premier returns, however, it is unlikely anything definite will be announced.
There is much surprise among Motherwell's friends over the report that his health may necessitate his retirement and they are inclined to doubt the rumours to this effect.

TRIPLE LINK NEWS.
Saturday night last again showed a large attendance at the rooms of the Triple Link Club, when members, together with their friends, made up a complement of 32 tables for progressive euchre.
There were five valuable prizes given, and won in the following order: 1st, Mr. George Worboy, winner of the special prize; 2nd, Mr. E. Head; 3rd, Mr. R. J. Craig; 4th, Mr. E. Robinson; 5th, Mr. F. Packenham.
The Owls—Twixt Sunset and Sunrise
At the first regular fall monthly meeting of Syrious Sanctorum No. 94 United Order of Splendor and Perfection, held on Friday evening last, a class of 14 candidates were admitted, which, with 3 reinstatements, made it a "field night," and shows that the members are keeping in touch with the motto of the Order, "We never sleep."
The meeting was favored by the presence of a number of the Tribesmen of Kahavi Sanctorum No. 235, Bowmanville, in charge of Grand Hyastylee Moore, who on their behalf extended a cordial invitation to visit them at their next regular meeting.
At the close of the session a "Moon Feast" was held, which, together with community singing, went to make up a most enjoyable event.

FIRE DESTROYED FOUR BUILDINGS

Worst Fire in History of Wellington, Caused By Burning Leaves.

IN MAIN SECTION.

Blaze Spread From Residence of Mrs. Pattengale to Telephone Office.

KINGSTON, November 3 (Special to The Examiner). — The village of Wellington, Prince Edward County, suffered the worst fire in its history this afternoon.
According to information received in the city at 1 o'clock the fire started in the rear of the residence of Mrs. Pattengale, who lives on the main street, and gradually spread to the telephone office, of which Miss M. C. Stinson is the local manager.
Harry Short's residence and also the home of Dr. McCullough were destroyed.
A reporter of The Whig office here tried to get in touch with Wellington over the long-distance telephone but he was informed by the Picton long-distance operator that she was afraid that she would be unable to get a connection on account of the telephone office being burned to the ground.
To her surprise one of the linemen employed by the Bell Telephone Co. realising the office would be destroyed, connected on to the burning wires and erected a new telephone system on the telephone pole a short distance from where the fire was raging.
The lineman stated that the telephone office, Mrs. Pattengale's residence, and Mr. Short's home had been completely destroyed, and the home of Dr. McCullough was then burning, and there was very little chance of saving it.
It was stated that the Picton fire fighting apparatus had been called, and the firemen were centring their attention at saving the surrounding buildings, which were very dry on account of the lack of rain during the month of October.
The fire started about twelve o'clock, and it was stated that it was caused by burning leaves at the rear of the Pattengale home.
A spark from the leaves was blown by the wind, and it was only a few minutes until the whole of the Pattengale building was afire.
The blaze spread to the surrounding buildings, which burned up like matchwood.

COOLIDGE PICKED TO WIN ELECTION

Odds of 35 To 1 Are Being Offered Against Senator Lafollette.

NEW YORK, November 3 (Canadian Press). — Following the Republican forecasts of a certain victory at the polls to-morrow, betting odds that Calvin Coolidge would win the Presidential race went to 11 to 1 to-day.
A prominent Wall Street firm announced the offer to lay $55,000 against $5,000 on President.
The odds against Senator La Follette, leader of the Independent Party, were 35 to 1 in Wall Street.
Odds against John W. Davis, Democratic Presidential nominee, were quoted to-day at 13 to 1. One estimate placed the total bet so far in Wall Street on various nominees at a million and a half dollars.

OPERA COMPANY DID NOT ARRIVE

De Feo Organization Failed to Reach Peterborough on Saturday.

For some reason yet unknown to the management of the Grand the De Feo Opera Company billed to present "Rigoletto" and "Aida" at the Grand on Saturday failed to put in an appearance. The company played in Brantford on Friday but did not reach Peterboro. No explanation was sent to the local management who deeply regret the contretemps for which of course, no one here is to blame. The audience was dismissed at 8.20 when it became evident that there was no chance of the company arriving.

G. H. HOWSON RESIGNS.

Senior Inspector of Weighs and Measures Quits Civil Service.

Mr. G. H. Howson, Senior Inspector of Weights and Measures, who has resigned from the Civil Service, was the guest of his brother officials, of the Belleville District, at a dinner given in his honor, at the Hotel Quinte, Belleville, on the eve of his retirement.
On behalf of those present, Mr. F. Davey Diamond, District Inspector, made a presentation to Mr. Howson, and gave expression to the regret felt by all the members of the staff, at his retirement. He referred to the high regard in which Mr. Howson was held, and the cordial relations that had always existed between him and his associates, during his long term of service in the Department, and expressing the hope that many years of usefulness were yet before him.
Inspector Hart, of Kingston, and Inspector Worrell, of Picton, also spoke very kindly of the retiring member and regretted his retirement.

RE-UNION DAY AT GEORGE STREET

Yesterday was re-union day at the George Street Methodist Church in connection with their Jubilee celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the present church building.
Ex-pastors present at both services yesterday were Rev. S. P. Rose, of Montreal, who was pastor of the church from 1872 to 1875, Rev. I. Tovell, D. D., of Toronto, (1884-1887) Rev. F. H. Wallace, D.D., of Toronto, (1887), Rev. W. R. Young, B.A., D.D., of Toronto, (1893-1897), Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., of Belleville, (1900-1904), and Rev. R. G. Peever, D.D., of Hamilton, (1913-1917.)
In the morning, when a large congregation was present, the special preacher, was Rev. Dr. Rose, of Montreal, taking as his text, "The Church, which is His Body."
The reverend speaker emphasized three prime necessities in church life: it must be modern, it must be evangelistic, and it must be universal.
It must be modern in that it must be able to speak to each succeeding generation in the thought forms and the speech of that generation. Paul in his day was modernist, as were the ancient prophets, Isaiah and Jeremias, and so was Jesus outting into the speech of His day the Sermon on the Mount.
It must be evangelistic to bring a message of God into the lives of men, and it must be universal is its catholic appeal to every type.
In the evening, when the large edifice was jammed to the doors, Rev. Dr. Young of Toronto, father of the present pastor, and a former pastor of the church, spoke from St. Paul's text: "Forgetting the things which are behind and reaching forth to the things which are before, I press on to the goal."
Rev. Mr. Young emphasized the need of forgetfulness of those things which are left behind, in the sense that one who lives in the past may become unmindful of the new duties of the present. We should live in the usefulness of to-day, carrying with us the lesson of the wide experinece of the past.
Vision was another need of the church. Any man, to amount to something, must possess a vision of the future, and the church is in need of the vision which will spur her on to greater missionary effort and more interest in all phases of church life.
Duty was the third necessity. "I press on to the goal." Energy in perfection of church orgasization was a duty coupled with reliance on divine helath.
At the services yesterday, the music was of an exeptionally high order, with special selections by the choir, led by Mr. Renwick, and solos by Mrs. J. H. Renwick, Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park and C. A. Thorpe. Rev. Harold Young made reference to the work done by Mrs. Park in the choir during her stay of nearly two years in the George street church, speaking appreciatively of Mrs. Park's singing during that time, and expressing pleasure that Mrs. Park's return to the choir of St. Andrew's church, would not take her away from the city.
Afternoon Services.
An open session of the Sunday Schools, with about 800 members in attendance, took place in the afternoon, when addresses were given by Rev. Dr. Peever of Hamilton, and Sir Joseph Flavelle, of Toronto.
Dr. Peever spoke particularly to the young people, stressing the importance of their work, then recounted to the children some of the possibilities of the lives opening up before them.
Sir Joseph Flavelle spoke to the young men on the necessity of cultivating the qualities of courage, patience and self-reliance, and with absolute integrity of character. He decried the idea of striving to attain a position in life through influence, and recommended instead the way of merit and effort. His address was copiously interlarded with reminiscences of his stay in the George street church, where he was Sunday school superintendent 37 years ago.

TWO MET DEATH.

Fast Travelling Automobile Left Road and Landed In Ditch.

WINDSOR, Nov. 3. — (Canadian Press). — Racing along a narrow river front pavement near Riverside, five miles east of Windsor, early yesterday, an automobile driven by C. U. Shrieve, of Detroit, and with two women and a man as passengers, got beyond control, and, plunging down a steep incline into a ditch, was reduced to a mass of junk. The men escaped with minor injuries, but the two women were crushed beneath the debris and died in a few hours at the Hotel Dieu here.
The victims are Miss Lucille Scott, 23 years old, and Mrs. Doris Berank. All were residents of Detroit.

PREMIER KING SPEAKS.

Three Thousand People Hear Address at Weyburn, Saskatchewan.

Weyburn, Sask., Nov. 3.— (Canadian Press.)—Speaking here on Saturday night before three thousand people, Premier King said the Federal government could be relied upon at all times to see that railways were made to serve the people and not the people serve the railways. An Act of Parliament must be supreme, he said.
The Prime Minister dealt with Senate reform. He said he was not in favor of abolishing the Senate, but he would abolish some of the older members of it. It was very undesirable that the will of the people should be thwarted by any body of men appointed to office for their natural life, he said.
"A funny thing about the Senate is that when anyone is appointed to that body his natural life is almost twice as long as it should be otherwise," the Premier added.

MILLIONS HEARD LAST MESSAGES OF CANDIDATES

Coolidge, Davis and La Follette Closed Presidential Campaign by Radio.

ALL CONFIDENT

Huge Vote Expected Today in United States—Weather Generally Favorable.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—(Canadian Press). — The Presidential campaign was brought to a novel and dramatic conclusion last night with an audience of millions listening in their own homes to the election-eve addresses by two Presidential nominees.

A far-flung network of radio stations took command of the air to carry to the country the final pre-election admonitions of President Coolidge, delivered from his study in the White House, and of John W. Davis, speaking from a radio studio in New York City.

Momentarily the radio affair jostled out of public mind the loud and persistent claims of victory that emanated in the final hours of the campaign from the headquarters of all parties. It overshadowed for the night even to-day's election itself, at which the nation will choose between Coolidge, Davis and Lafollette, will elect a new Congress, and will fill a governor's chair in each of thirty-four states.

Both the President and his Democratic opponent chose the occasion to say a word for a full poll of voting strength—an objective which kept party managers great and small busy throughout the day and far into the night.

Expect Record Vote.

A forecast of fair weather for virtually the entire country with dry roads in the agricultural sections of the middle west, led to predictions that the vote to-day would be by far the largest ever recorded in a Presidential election.

President Coolidge will remain at work to-day in the White House, having sent his ballot by mail to his home voting precinct in Northampton, Mass. Mr. Davis will be at his home on Long Island, and Senator Lafollette, the third entry in the three-corner Presidential contest, will cast his vote in Madison.

All three have arranged to receive complete news reports of the election returns, Mr. Coolidge in his study, Mr. Davis in his Locust Valley residence, and Senator Lafollette in the Governor's suite at the Wisconsin State capitol.

The Running Mates.

Two Vice-Presidential candidates also prolonged their speaking campaigns until last night, Governor Bryan spending the final hours before election in a circuit of five Nebraska cities, and Senator Wheeler winding up his long speaking tour in Baltimore. Having concluded his campaign Saturday, Charles G. Dawes rested at his home in Evanston.

Campaign Expenses.

During the day new figures regarding campaign expenditures were filed in Washington, but in no case did the totals given bring party statistics down to date. The latest official reports made to any government authority show collections of $3,742,000 by the Republicans up to October 31st; $618,311 by the Democrats, up to October 29; and of $245,000 by the Lafollette-Wheeler managers up to October 10.

The rival claims of victory issued last night by political leaders did not differ materially from their estimates of several days ago, although each headquarters declared it had received reports of a definite last minute draft to its candidate. The Republicans clung to a minimum prediction of 350 electoral votes for Coolidge, out of a total of 531, and declared that figure probably would be surpassed in a landslide carrying with it a decisive Republican majority in the new Congress and sweeping Republican state tickets into office in all doubtful states.

Democratic headquarters repeated its expressions of confidence, but went no further toward specific claims than to issue a statement saying that all the border country from Maryland to Oklahoma was safe for Davis, and that he would carry also a substantial bloc of states in the east and the west. Indiana, New Jersey and Oregon were mentioned as likely to go into the Democratic column.

As for the Lafollette managers, they again declared that a "great

THE WEATHER

Yesterday morning the temperature was down to 21 degrees (the lowest this season); this morning it was 25 degrees. Snow fell yesterday in all sections of the province north of Muskoka, and there is sufficient for sleighing in some places. This young winter will likely disappear, and it is to be hoped it may. If it does not, we are likely in for a long steady winter in more southerly sections, as the north invariably sees winter's commencement, as well as its finish.—W.P.

LAW ASSOCIATION IS GOOD SCHEME

Books Costing Lawyers Thousands of Dollars Will Form Valuable Library.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, Nov. 4.— The Law Association of Northumberland and Durham recently formed and chartered, is rapidly assuming working order and will be a great benefit to solicitors in the wide district it will serve. Whereas the individual members have now thousands of dollars invested in books that will be useless when they go out of practice, the library that is being built by the Association will be perpetuated for the use of future members.

The United Counties' Law Association is headed by W. F. Kerr, K. C., president, and A. Cochrane, secretaray.

CANADIAN DOLLAR UP.

Our Dollar Is Now Worth Exactly the Same as the U. S. Dollar.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.— (Canadian Press.)—The price advance of the Canadian Dollar, which yesterday was quoted at exactly the same value as the United States' dollar, has shut the United States' bankers out of a prospective new financing business for Canadian account. A second factor said to be as important as appreciation of Canadian dollar, was improvement in the Canadian bond market. Prices there on issues listed also on United States' bond exchanges were said yesterday to be fifteen one hundredths of a point higher than they are here.

As a result of this shift in financial set-up of two markets, the city of Toronto will not come into United States' market next week for new loans, but will do its prospective financing at home.

City will open bids on Thursday on new issues of $9,971,000 of 4 1-2 per cent. bonds. United States' banks had planned to enter bids, but find under present conditions they cannot top bids of Canadian banks. Other Canadian cities are expected also to take advantage of excellent money market conditions at home.

New Test For Sobriety Was Invented On Coast

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 4.—(United Press).—Of all the tests for sobriety this one is the newest.

It was invoked by Judge Summerfield in Superior Court recently when the case of Irene R. Meek against her husband, Morris Meek, came up. Meek was $300 in arrears in his alimony payments.

"He drinks up all his money," Mrs. Meek flashed when her husband on the stand professed an overwhelming love for her. "Why, he is drunk now."

The judge looked from wife to husband.

"Stand up," the court commanded. "Say Methodist-Episcopal."

"Methodist-Episcopal," bellowed the husband.

"Now say 'Whoop'" ordered the court.

"Whoop," exploded Meek.

Judge Summerfield announced Meek sober.

OPIUM TRAFFIC CONFERENCE AT GENEVA IS OPEN

Plenary Sessions to be Held in Public With Committees Private.

LEAGUE AUSPICES

Effort Launched to Eradicate Opium Poppy Growth And Use.

GENEVA, Nov. 4.—The plenary sessions of the International opium conference are to be open to the public, but the committee meetings will be held in private. The conference began its sessions Monday under the auspices of the League of Nations in an endeavor to work out some means for checking the smoking of opium and to stay also a method to do away with the illicit growth of the opium poppy in China.

Most of the session was devoted to a lively debate on whether the conference should be public or private. When finally it was decided to open the plenary sessions to those who cared to attend but to have the committee meetings in secret it was ruled that each delegation would be entitled to make public statements regarding its position on the questions before the committees. China, Japan and India favored making all the sessions public, but France and Great Britain succeeded in having the committee meetings closed to the press.

Sao-Ke Alfred Sze, Chinese minister to the United States who is representing China at the conference, having lost out on the point of publicity, insisted on the right to make public statements to the press. He laid emphasis on the fact that this was the practice at the Washington arms conference and said it worked especially well during the Washingtotn and Shangtung negotiations. The Japanese delegate throughout the debate stood strongly in favor of publicity, going even farther than the Chinese.

AUSTRALIANS WOULD ANNUL TRADE TREATY

Opposition Develops Against Agreement Recently Made With Canada.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 4.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuter's).—The trade agreement which was completed recently by the governments of Australia and Canada providing for a mutual preference between the overseas dominions, is in danger of disruption because of strong opposition which has developed in the commonwealth against the pact. Already efforts are being made to have Australia secure release from her engagement.

The Melbourne Age to-day voices its strong opposition to the agreement. It declares that Canadian industries which are largely capitalized by Americans are getting the preference in certain classes of commodities at the expense of Great Britain. The journal accordingly is urging upon the government to take the first opportunity of obtaining release from the agreement with Canada.

BLAZE AT SARNIA

Damage of $5,000 in Fire on the Water Front.

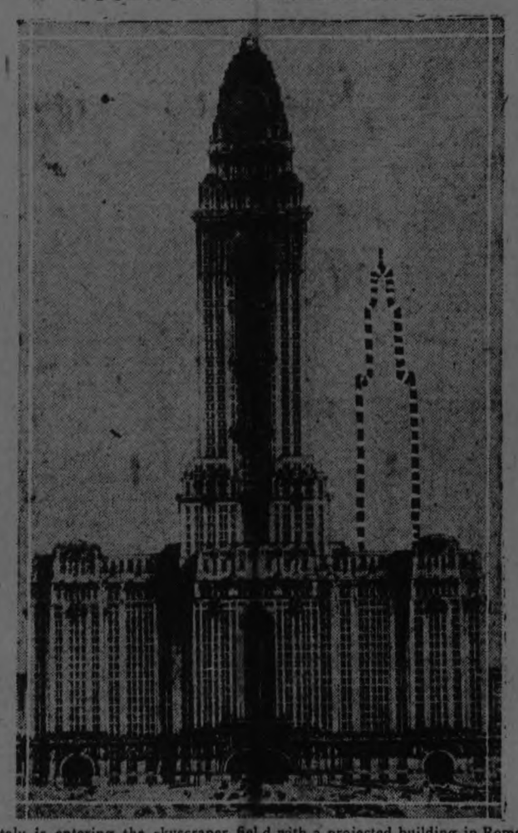
SARNIA, Nov. 4.—A blaze which threatened many buildings on the river front immediately behind the Front street business section Monday, did damage of $5,000 to property of Gardiner Brothers, hardware and feed merchants, and the King Milling Company. A hundred tons of hay were stored in the Gardiner Brothers sheet iron building ready for shipment by water to the west. Building and contents were lost and the fire spread to the King Milling Company warehouses nearby where a quantity of hay and millings supplies burned. For two hours the whole river front was obscured in dense volume of smoke, and despite all efforts of the department with strong water pressure, three buildings and contents were totally destroyed. The loss is only partly covered by insurance.

MONKS TO OBSERVE 700TH ANNIVERSARY

OXFORD, Nov. 4.—The 700th anniversary of the arrival of the Francisean Friars in Oxford will be observed by monks here. A pontifical high mass will be celebrated at the Church of St. Maysius, on the site of the ancient friary.

Because of the close connection between the Friars and the University and City of Oxford in mediæval days, the Lord Mayor and the Vice-Chancellor will take part in the celebrations.

WOOLWORTH TOWER IN ECLIPSE



Italy is entering the skyscraper field with a projected building in Rome, 1,100 feet tall, to be called the "Mole Littoria." The Woolworth Building, indicated by a dotted line on the right, is only 792 feet high. The new building is to contain 4,500 rooms, a concert hall, gymnasiums and training space for all sports.

LONDON GREETS KING AND QUEEN

BALDWIN'S PLANS

LONDON, Nov. 4. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—In view of the present political situation great interest was taken yesterday in the return to London of their Majesties, the King and Queen, from Sandringham. A great crowd welcomed them at King's Cross railway station. Meanwhile the MacDonald cabinet committee is continuing its inquiry into the source of the Zinovieff letter in connection with which Sir Borlase Childs, head of the special investigation branch of Scotland Yard, was summoned to Downing street, the residence of the prime minister.

Stanley Baldwin, leader of the Conservatives, who will likely be called upon by the king to form the next government of Great Britain as a result of the sweeping victory of his party at the polls, is resting in the country until Premier MacDonald has officially announced his intentions following his defeat. Mr. Baldwin is daily receiving numerous congratulatory messages from all parts of the Empire.

While the unionist party headquarters deprecate certain speculation in regard to the personnel of the new government, the friends of Mr. Baldwin declare that he is determined to form a cabinet composed of the best men from the national and empire viewpoint regardless of personal claims or past records.

PRINCE'S LIVESTOCK TO BE SHOWN IN TORONTO

Car Load of Shorthorns and Horses for Winter Fair.

CALGARY, November 4. — A car load of stock made up of two Percheron horses and Shorthorn cattle, including the famous bull, "King of the Prairies," will leave the Prince of Wales' ranch on Friday night with other Alberta exhibits, for the Royal winter Fair at Toronto, stated Prof. Carlyle, manager of the E. P. Ranch on Monday. Mr. Carlyle does not expect to leave until about Nov. 16th.

The Percheron entries include a stallion and a mare. There will also be a yearling fat steer, a yearling heifer, and a bull and heifer calf, and pure bred Shorthorns.

ESTATE TO AID ZIONIST MOVEMENT

LONDON, Nov. 4.—An estate which will be eventually worth a million pounds has been left for the benefit of the Zionist movement by the will of an English Jew. The fund will be used to "restore the Jews to their ancient home in Palestine."

SOCIALISTS TO PRESS DEMANDS

French Premier Must Pay Price of Their Support Or Fall.

PARLIAMENT OPENS

PARIS, Nov. 4. — The French parliament re-convenes to-day with the Socialist party on record as determined to make Premier Herriot execute part of the Socialistic programme as the price of the Socialists' support. Without this support the government will be unable to remain in power.

Parliament's most important work will be the discussion of the 1925 budget. The premier and Finance Miniser Clementel intend to have the chamber examine the various expenditures and immediately send them to the senate when the lower house has voted them, instead of waiting until the entire appropriation bill is approved by the end of the year.

In this way they hope to avoid, if possible, having to vote provisional monthly credits, as has been frequently necessary heretofore.

Other Questions.

Suppression of the French embassy at the Vatican, resumption of diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia, duration of military service, the status of religious orders, the high cost of living and the salaries of functionaries are other questions which parliament will be called on to discuss. They will not be taken up, however, until after the budget is disposed of as the government is especially desirous that the budget should be voted before other matters are reached.

Soviet Recognition.

About 30 deputies have served notice on the government of their intention to interpellate it on measures enacted since it assumed power last June. Most of the interpellations deal with internal policies, except the "de jure" recognition accorded the Soviet government. In regard to this recognition several deputies will ask an explanation of what they consider the strange coincidence that the resumption of diplomatic relations with Moscow was announced on the very morning of the British elections.

WU PEI FU FLEES.

Sailed From Tangku. Probably to Join Ally.

TIENTSIN, Nov. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Wu Pei Fu, ousted Field Marshal of the Peking Government armies, left here at four o'clock on Monday morning, going to Tangku on the Gulf of Chihli, where he sailed on the steamer Chiohsing for a destination unknown. Tientsin is quiet.

It is reported that Wu transferred to the cruiser Haichi off Tangku. If this is true, he probably will make for Nanking to join his ally, the Tuchun of Kiangsu Province. Before leaving Wu executed a Shensi officer who had refused to fight.

BIG SPREAD IN PRICE

Fish at Ottawa at Five Times the Seaport Cost.

OTTAWA, Nov. 4.— That fish from Maritime provinces was sold at Ottawa at five times the price that the fishermen got for it at the ports was a statement made by T. H. Blais, local agent of the C.N.R. Express company, in the course of a trade talk at the Rotary Club Luncheon Monday.

Mr. Blair said that he asked the local storekeeper to give him a reason for the large difference in price secured by the fishermen and that at which the fish was retailed in Ottawa, he was told the express charges were so heavy. The speaker pointed out that the express rates on such fish were only 1 1-4 cents a pound.

LABOR MAY USE STRIKE WEAPON

Agitators Declare Political Method Fails to Realize Their Hopes.

DISPUTES RECUR

LONDON, Nov. 4. — (Canadian Press). — With the defeat of the Labor Government, responsible trades union leaders and officials are anxious about the industrial future of the country in view of the assertions of the agitators among the rank and file that Labor can no longer build high hopes in the use of the political weapon to achieve its purposes. Many of the leaders predict that there will be attempts to revert to industrial pressure. Probably he first big storm will arise out of the demands of the National Union of Railwaymen which are now being embodied in a new program so far-reaching that it is expected the National Wages Board will find great difficulty in presenting a report which will satisfy both the companies and the union.

If the Board fails to avert a crisis the danger point may be reached early in 1925.

Another outstanding dispute which is threatening to cause trouble concerns the electrical supply industry in connection with which a joint industrial council will meet on November 14 to continue efforts to avert a national strike. A special tribunal has reported that no case has been made out for an increase of ten shillings a week in the trade.

There is also grave unrest among the miners and the question of hours among the various building trades remains to be one of the thorniest problems for some of the members of the Labor Cabinet, who, being trades union officials before they entered the Government, will mostly resume their former duties.

CHURCHILL URGES SINGAPORE SCHEME

Advocates Establishment of Naval Base Dropped by Labor.

LONDON, Nov. 4. — (Canadian Press).—Winston Spencer Churchill, who has just been re-elected to Parliament, is the first Conservative of possible governmental rank to advocate publicly the revival of the Singapore naval base scheme. This he did in the course of a political speech here last night.

The resumption of the plan to establish a great naval base at Singapore has already been advocated by several Australian newspapers.

The project for a naval base at Singapore at a cost of about £11,000,000 was brought forward by the Conservatives in 1923. The naval estimates, which were adopted in July of that year, provided for the Singapore development.

In March of this year the Labor Government abandoned the plan, Premier MacDonald contending that world peace by agreement would be a more effective guarantee of security than strengthening or increasing naval bases and armaments. It was urged also by the Laborites that the project was contrary to the Washington agreement.

The Australian Government has always been strongly in favor of the Singapore plan.

Mr. Justice Wright Presiding at Northumberland Assizes—Array of Legal Talent.

(By a Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, Nov. 4.—A true bill of indictment was returned by the Grand Jury yesterday at 4.45 o'clock charging William John Crossen with the wilful murder of Bryon A. McCrodan on May 18 last. A second indictment on a charge of shooting Edward Rowe, with intent to do grievous bodily harm was also indorsed "a true bill". The jury was out 3 hours.

McCrodan, who lived at 175 Dunvegan Road, Toronto, and was spending the week end here, was shot by the accused, it is said, while trespassing on the fishing preserve of William James Crossen of Brighton. The accused, it is alleged, fired two shots at point blank range from a 12 guage shot gun.

The court room was crowded to capacity and many were turned away. A large proportion of the spectators were women and the interest taken in the case was shown by the representation of nine newspapers.

Galaxy of Counsel

Before Mr. Justice Wright appeared there were gathered within the bar, Crown Prosecutor A. B. Cunningham, K.C., of Kingston; Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr, K.C. of Cobourg, Assistant Crown Attorney James W. McFadden of Toronto for the prosecution and R. H. Greer K.C., of Toronto and A. R. Willmott of Cobourg, for defense.

The court room was crowded with spectators standing four and five deep behind the public seats, all following the proceedings with evident interest.

Until the entry of the presiding Judge, Sheriff D. J. Nesbitt was the dominating figure in the court as he appeared in the full regalia including cocked hat, sword and scroll.

The other officials were Supreme Court Registrar J. T. Fields; Court Crier, W. H. Smith, and Chief of Police J. C. Ruse.

Grand Jury

The Grand Jury was composed of J. N. Stone, foreman; H. R. Armstrong, J. Barfett, F. Brisbin, W. Craig, J. W. Glover, W. S. Jackson, J. H. Penwarden Silas Runnals, W. E. Tweedie; A. L. Reindeau, H. Sauva, and W. Caldwell.

Address to the Jury

In addressing the Grand Jury, Mr. Justice Wright said:

"Your duties on this occasion will be somewhat important; first, the investigation of crime and secondly the inspection of public buildings. Your principal duty is the investigation of crime as brought before you on indictment by the crown prosecutors. You are not trying; you are merely investigating.

"Your duties are exceedinly important, His Lordship continued. The crimes charged in these two indictments are very serious. The charge is murder in one instance and attempt to commit murder in the other. For purposes of Grand Jury it is sufficient to be satisfied that one man killed another. Answering the question 'was the deceased killed by the accused' will advance you far enough to say whether there should be a true bill or not.

"It is said that the deceased man and another were on a fishing preserve which was not their property, when a game keeper, who is the accused came upon them, spoke to them and as they walked away fired two shots. As a result, it is said, McCrodan died and another man was wounded.

If you find the accused shot at him with a weapon likely to cause death you will find a true bill. Every man who uses a firearm to shoot at another is presumed to intend the natural consequence of his action.

Outlining the second part of the duty of the Grand Jury, His Lordship explained the importance of the proper inspection of public buildings in order that information of an unbiased nature may be given to the public.

"In connection with buildings, I understand that a complaint has been made regarding the ventilation of the court room, and I suggest that you look into that," he concluded.

Absent Jury Man

D. Wilton of Port Hope, failed to answer to his name when called for duty on the petit jury, and His Lordship imposed a fine of $25.

No Civil Cases

Hodges vs. C.N.R. and Alyea vs. C.N.R. in which Frank L. Webb was named as solicitor for the plaintiff and P. Pratt was defendant's solicitor, were withdrawn, no one appearing in either case.

WINTER COMES TO NORTH BAY

Snow Fell Four Hours Monday, Muffling the Woods for Hunters.

FROST AND ICE

NORTH BAY, November 4. — King Winter laid his white mantle over Northern Ontario on Monday. North Bay and environs had enjoyed nearly a month of almost summer like weather but the cold winds on Sunday and enough frost to cause ice foretold the arrival on Monday afternoon of snow which fell steadily for four hours, and at six o'clock there lay between two and three inches of "the beautiful" on the level. In the north the temperature dropped almost to zero at Timmins, and snow began to fall at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, and continued all afternoon, but a southeast wind resulted in a welcome rise of temperature.

Other points scattered over the north section also report snow and it is believed to be fairly general.

It will be greatly welcomed by the hunters who have been complaining that the dry woods with crisp leaves and twigs that snap under foot have heralded their approach to the game.

Some four hundred hunters came north this morning from Toronto over the Canadian National, possibly two-thirds of them detraining between Gravenhurst and North Bay.

GERMAN SUGAR ON NEW YORK MARKET

First Purchase of European Beet Sugar Since 1920.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.— German sugar sold in the New York market Monday for the first time since 1920. A local refiner was credited with the purchase of 7,000 tons of the German raw beet product, of which one thousand tons will be shipped to this country. The remainder was resold abroad. The represented a slight concession from that paid for Cuban sugar, although purchase price of four cents a pound sales of Cuban raws late to-day were reported at the lower basis.

Reports of a heavy oversupply of sugar in Germany have contributed to the recent unsettlement in the local sugar market. Prospects that prices of the product here would be forced lower by importations also have been an influence in the weakness of sugar company securities.

JAPAN CUTS OFF PASSES.

TOKIO, Nov. 4.—(United Press). —Railway passes in Japan will be a thing of the past. The Government has just announced that the 31,500 passes now in use will be invalid when they expire. They are in the hands of officials of many large commercial companies in the country, Government officials and anybody with any connection with the Government, however far-fetched, and some newspapers. Hereafter nobody gets a pass except Government officials on Government business.

The police will be permitted to ride free if in a hurry to catch a criminal—but they have to pay later.

Nearly every henpecked man has a bob-haired wife.

25 ARE NOW DEAD.

Los Angeles Plague Took the Life of Another Person Yesterday.

LOS ANGLES, November 4. — The death toll since the outbreak of the pneumonic plague in the Mexican quarters here on October 19th, has been increased 25 to-day by four fatal cases reported yesterday.

Health officers continue their efforts to bring under quarantine every person known to have been in contact with sufferers from the disease.

BOYS' WORK CONFERENCE.

Delegates From Surrounding District Gathered in This City.

The Boys' Work Conference, which began its sessions in St. Andrew's church Friday evening, continued through Saturday, under the direction of Mr. Plowman and Mr. C. E. Hendrey, of the Ontario Boys' Work Board, Mr. C. W. Meyers of the Presbyterian church and Manson Doyle of the Methodist church.

On Saturday evening a banquet was held in George street church, when nearly two hundred boys sat down to a sumptuous dinner provided by the churches of the city, under the capable leadership of Mrs. George Robertson.

The programme was one of very great excellence. After a short singsong, Mr. Penker, organist of Knox church, played three piano solos, which were enthusiastically received by the boys.

Following a short list of 'Toasts,' Mr. Allan Neal and A. Martin, candidates for the 'Boys' Parliament,' addressed the gathering, and asked support in the coming elections; Mr. Gordon Lapp, of Brighton, Ont., candidate for Premier, was present, and fired the opening gun in his campaign.

Mr. Morton, of Cobourg, then spoke briefly on "Brotherhood and Service."

On Sunday afternoon a mass meeting was held in Knox church, addressed by Mr. Charles Plowman, and the closing session of the conference was held in Murray street church at the close of the regular service.

SERUM FOR PLAGUE.

Airplane Loaded With Medicine Is On Way To Los Angeles.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4. United Press.—An air plane loaded with serum to combat the deadly pneumonic plague in the Mexican quarter of Los Angeles, is racing across the continent to-day.

The medicine to fight the deadly pestilence that has taken a toll of 24 lives in the California City, was manufactured by the H. K. Mulford Laboratories here.

A NATIONAL ASSET.

As the greatest transportation company in the world, the Canadian Pacific Railway has maintained a national service in the Trans-Canada Limited which is second to none and on the conclusion of the summer schedule of this crack train has transferred the equipment to the Vancouver Express which leaves Toronto every night at 10.10 p.m. on its trip across the continent, via Winnipeg, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise, the spiral tunnel, Sicamous and parts of the Canadian Pacific Rockies famous throughout the world, on its way to Vancouver, where the travellers are unanimous in their praise of the service of the Vancouver Hotel. The Canadian Pacific also operates a steamship service to Victoria, the Mecca for winter tourists.

Not only does the Vancouver Express carry tourist and standard sleepers, but it also carries a compartment-observation car complete in itself, while a parlor car is added from Revelstoke to Vancouver.

Added to this national service is a feature service from Toronto to Montreal via the Lake Shore Line, which has been entirely reballasted with crushed rock and relaid with 100 pound rails, insuring a maximum of comfort for travellers at night as well as an absence of dust in daytime. Trains leave Toronto Union Station at 9.00 a.m. daily, 10.00 p.m. daily except Saturday, and 11.00 p.m. daily. Arriving at Windsor station, the traveller has the benefit of immediate facilities in the women's rest room, lunch room and barber shop, which cannot be duplicated in any other station in Montreal. An added convenience is offered those who wish to travel to Montreal from North Toronto, in the 9.45 p.m. train, daily except Saturdays, from Yonge street station.

Canadian Pacific agents will gladly make your reservations and supply you with any information you require. They are fully qualified to offer a "second to none" service to the public.

MAN FAILED TO ANSWER TO NAME IN COBOURG CASE

Forty-four Talesmen Called Last Evening in the Crossen Murder Trial.

YOUTH EJECTED.

Story of Shooting Related to Crowded Court Last Evening.

COBOURG, Ont., Nov. 4.—Forty-four talesmen were called to face W. J. Crossen yesterday evening before the panel was secured, the defence counsel rejecting 15 and the prosecution ordering 15 to stand aside. One man who failed to answer his name was fined and one was rejected, because of deafness.

William John Crossen pleaded not guilty to the indictment that he did on May 18th wilfully murder Bryon McCrodan, the charge on which he was arraigned. There is a second indictment charging him with shooting Edward Rowe, with intent to do grievous bodily harm.

During the progress of the hearing, His Lordship found it necessary to order a youth from the court room, issuing at the same time a stern warning that he would permit no talking or levity among the spectators, who crowded the room.

The only witnesses examined yesterday were John F. Skitch, photographer, and Dr. William Robinson, who performed the autopsy on the body of Bryon McCrodan, in the cross-examination of the former, a blue spruce was prominently and persistently metioned gy Mr. Greer.

Dr. Robinson declared that in his opinion McCrodan came to his death through gangerine poisoning, introduced by a gunshot wound on the ey.

The accused is highly respected in Cobourg and district, the consensus of opinion being that no one more harmless could be found.

It is said that during his long period in jail, he was worried considerably about the tragedy, showing the greatest sorrow for the bereaved family.

He is over fifty years of age, and numbers many of the best families in the district among his personal friends.

His address to the jury, Mr. Cunningham described the reserve,where the hatchery is 10 feet from the barbed wire fence and near there on the west side is the residence of the accused.

On Sunday morning, McCrodan and Rowe went to the fish reserve for the purpose of getting a few fish. They crawled under the fence from the north and proceeded about 150 yards to a pool, where they started to fish.

They had been fishing a few minutes, when the accused Crossen appeared. After a few minutes' talk with them he shot Rowe, and later shot the deceased. Rowe is here to tell of the shooting.

As a result, Dr. Armstrong was called in, and the men were taken to Cobourg hospital early on Sunday morning.

On Sunday afternoon McCrodan was taken to Wellesley Hospital in Toronto, where an operation was performed on Sunday and another on Monday. A week later McCrodan died.

These are the facts I shall lay before you and on these facts the Crown asks you to bring in verdict of murder. Whi the defence will be I know not at this moment. I don't think there is any dispute as to the facts, Mr. Cunningham concluded.

A photograph taken by John F. Skitch was the first witness for the prosecution. Identified photograph he took at the reserve five miles north of Cobourg on May 21st and in June. They showed the fence, the tool house and the dam, the road, and the pool.

SEYMOUR COUNCIL HELD A MEETING

Man Assessed For a Dog Says He Never Owned Such an Animal, But Must Pay.

CAMPBELLFORD, November 4. —The Seymour Council met yesterday. All the members were present, excepting Councillor McKelvie.

Reeve Von Volkenburg was in the chair.

After the reading of the minutes, communications and accounts were read and considered.. Mr. Charles Craighead complained that he was assessed for a dog, and that he never owned one. As he had not attended the Court of Revision, the Council had no power to act.

A motion by Deputy-Reeve Nelson and Councillor Milne that the report for the nomination meeting shall be an audited account.—Carried.

The work on the Boundary Road between Seymour, Rawdon and Marmora, north from Allan's Mills, was discussed.

Moved by Councillor Milne and seconded by Councillor Peake, that whereas the rates have been levied for the current year, and whereas this Council could not forward any moneys to this portion of the work without incurring a debt to be carried over at the end of the year, and whereas on present information this will in no way affect the grant from the Government, and the work could not be completed this season, therefore, be it resolved that this Council do not forward any moneys this year. —Carried.

The Reeve was instructed to sign orders on the treasurer for the following accounts:

"Nerves in Bad State Could Not Sleep"

Mrs. H. N. Tardell, Harrowsmith, Ont., writes:

"My nerves were in a very bad state, and for nearly six months I did not know what it was to have a good night's rest. I could not eat, and never felt well. I heard about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and thought I would try it. After taking it for a few days I began to feel better, and soon was able to sleep well at night. My appetite also returned, and I felt stronger and better, and after taking three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was quite well. I have also given the Nerve Food to my little girl, with good results."

PETTY OFFICER M. COOK

His Auto-Intoxication Had Nothing To Do With Volstead

Mr. M. Cook of 1236 Pacific Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I felt 'drunk' most of the time. My head was dizzy, I couldn't think clearly. If I paid no attention to it until one day I dropped a coin and when I stooped to get it, I got so dizzy I fell in the middle of the street and was almost run over. I later found out that the cause of this condition was due to a sluggish liver causing FAULTY INTESTINAL ELIMINATION (constipation). This was promptly and effectively overcome by a short course of Carter's Little Liver Pills. They were a life-saver in my case. My appetite has doubled, my dizziness has gone, and my pep is great." Carter's Little Liver Pills have been recommended by druggists everywhere for 67 years. 25c a package.

CAMPBELLFORD COUNCIL MEET

Decide to Secure a New Chief of Police—Other Business Disposed Of.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 4.—The regular meeting of the Town Council for November was held last night.

Members present: Mayor A. J. Meyer, chairman; Reeve C. Davidson, Councillors, Abernethy, Cole, Johnston Kingston, McDonald and Redden. Deputy Reeve Dorie was absent.

Some communications were read and discussed. The Mayor, Reeve Davidson, Councillors Kingston, Johnston and McDonald were appointed members of Court of Revision to be held on November 17th., 1924 in the Council Chamber, Public Library.

A petition for sewers was received for Market street and Oliver Road, according to the local improvement act.

Motion by Councillors Cole and Redden, that this petition be referred to clerk, for verification.—Carried.

Mr. Sanders and Mr. Hunter came before the Council requesting that the ditch on Cockburn and Elmore street, be opened up and the culverts lowered.

On motion of Councillors Cole and Abernethy, that the culverts be lowered and ditch be opened up, that the town in that part may be drained and that the sum of one hundred dollars be appropriated for this purpose.—Carried.

Mr. John Hull sent in a request that more tile was needed.

Moved by Councillors Kingston and McDonald that 18 feet of 12-inch tile be supplied, and that street tile be used.—Carried.

New Streets.

R. J. Allan addressed the council and presented plans for the opening up of new streets by property owned by L. A. Denike and himself.

Moved and seconded by Reeve Davidson and Councillor Cole, that the roads as shown on the plans submitted by R. J. Allan for the opening up of certain streets, as presented by himself and L. A. Denike, be accepted by this council, and that the mayor and clerk be empowered to sign the said plans and to affix the seal of the corporation of the town of Campbellford on them.—Carried.

R. J. Allan also, on behalf of Mrs. Kellar and Mrs. Bertrand, came with the request that a crossing be put across the road on Queen street, from Mrs. Turner's property to their property, and also that a light be put on a pole in front of their residence.

On motion of Reeve Davidson and Councillor Cole, a board will be put in.

Moved by Councillors Abernethy and Johnston that the matter of the light be left with the chsirman of te Water and Light Commission. —Carried.

Mr. Robert Fraser was the next delegation to the Council on behalf of Mr. Third, Mr. Hoard and himself, that a sidewalk along Palliser and Alma streets, in front of their properties, be built. After some discussion he was satisfied to have the low places filled up for over the winter, and make a place for the people to walk instead of going across his lawn. Moved and seconded by Reeve Davidson and Councillor Redden that this filling up be left with the chairman of the Roads and Bridges.—Carried.

Councillor McDonald brought up the matter of extending the sewer across Trout Creek and have it completed this year. On motion of Councillors Cole and Abernethy, this will be extended and completed.

J. M. Arnold asked for information as to the cost of frontage for sewers on Kent street, and when it would be started, and if the cost per foot was not higher than some of the other sewers. After considerable discussion, it was decided, on motion of Councillors Cole and Johnston, to begin the work on Kent and Napier streets sewer as soon as the drill work was finished, on Sebastapool street and Hastings road sewer.

Want New Chief.

Councillor Kingston, on behalf of the Police committee, spoke of the laxity of law enforcement in Canada and also in Campbellford, and he moved that this Council notify the Chief of Police that his services will terminate on December 31st, 1924. Quite a heated discussion by some of the councillors followed. Dissatisfaction as to lack of reports from the Chief of Police for poll tax was shown by the members, but he had given his assurance that they would be in by November 15.

Councillors Kingston's motion was seconded by Councillors McDonald, Reeve Davidson as chairman of the Police committee, said he was not satisfied with the work of the police and would support the motion.

After further discussion the motion was put and carried, all voting yea but one councillor, who did not vote at all.

A second motion by Councillors Kingston and McDonald, that this Council advertise for a Chief of Police at a salary of twelve hundred dollars with night duty. The applications to be opened at the special meeting on November 17th., 1924. This motion was carried.

The police committee and clerk were appointed to look after the advertising.

Reeve Davidson and Councillor Cole moved that the Clerk prepare the necessary bylaws for the proposed sewers and have them ready by November 17th for the special meeting.—Carried.

Mr. Mulhearn presented his tax roll and requested that as his work was so much more now than it used to be on account of all the women's names being on the voters' list, he asked for a raise of salary.

Moved by Councillors Redden and Cole that Mr. Mulhearn be paid the sum of three hundred dollars for his services—Carried.

DISLIKE HANGING.

English Authorities Discussing Advisability of Using Coal Gas.

LONDON, Nov. 4. — (Canadian Press).—English authorities are discussing the advisability of employing coal gas for the execution of criminals instead of hanging. Inspired by popular horror over recent hanging, Earl Russell suggested before the Medico-Legal Society, a group of physicians, lawyers and criminologists, that it would be more human if coal gas was introduced into the cell of the condemned man while he was sleeping. The current number of "Lancet," the leading British medical journal, devotes several columns to the discussion of this question by leading authorities, and the general opinion is opposed to the change.

TWELVE KILLED.

Liverpool Express Train Was Wrecked Near Lythan.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Twelve persons were killed and many injured when the Liverpool express to Blackpool was wrecked last evening near Lytham. Several prominent Lancashire business men were among the casualties.

C.P.R. EARNINGS DECREASE.

COBOURG COUNCIL RESCIND BY-LAW

Will Not Compel Removal of Gasoline Pumps From Streets.

COBOURG, Nov. 4.—Cobourg Town Council met last evening, with Mayor Boggs, Reeve Corbett, Councillors Denton, Skitch, Odell, Fullerton and Russell present.

A deputation from the garagemen of the town, consisting of Messrs. Green, Leonard, Bulger and Fitzgibbon, waited upon the Council regarding the removal of gasoline pumps from the streets, which were ordered off the sidewalks by November 1st. The deputation contended that danger to pedestrians would be increased by having pumps inside the different garages, as it would be necessary for motorists to drive their cars over the sidewalk twice in order to fill up with gas, and that the majority of this business which now comes to this town would go elsewhere.

After much discussion by various members of the Council, it was moved by Councillor Odell and seconded by Councillor Skitch, that the former by-law passed, ordering the removal of the pumps from the sidewalks, be rescinded until the Council took up the matter of having all signs and gas pumps removed from the streets.

This motion was carried unanimously.

A by-law authorizing the Council to borrow $5,000 from the Bank of Toronto to meet current expenditures was carried.

Reports from various committees were received and accounts passed

The storm on Sunday which was general over the Great Lakes caused the freighter "Ashe Bay" to put into this harbour late yesterday afternoon . The captain in charge stated that it took sixteen hours to come from Long Point, off Presquile to Cobourg. The "Ashe Bay" was up bound light from Montreal to Port Colborne.

Car ferry Ontario No. 1, has been laid up here for a few weeks on account very light traffic.

Work on the provincial highway between Cobourg and Port Hope is proceding rapidly and with continued fine weather the greater portion of concrete should be completed this fall. When complete this stretch of pavement will be a big improvement to the Kingston Highway.

FISHERMEN RESCUED.

Thirty-two Men and Two Boys Spent Wild Night on High Seas.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Four fishing parties, comprising thirty-two men and two boys, were brought to safety yesterday by an excursion boat and a sea-going launch from Ambrose Lightship, after riding out all night in one of the heaviest gales the fisher folk have experienced in many months. The death list remained at three, two of whom are unidentified. One small vessel went down.

A seaplane flying over Long Island Sound, opposite Stamford, Conn., was hurled about by the gale and finally plunged into the surf. Frederick Schavior and Aemil Mazzio, pilot and mechanician, were rescued an hour later by a power boat.

Energy for Men in Fry's

A DAILY cup of FRY'S Cocoa will do wonders in giving that energy of body and clearness of mind, you need for a good day's work.

To read the analysis of FRY'S Cocoa is readily to believe the claims of Dr. Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E., Dr. Robt. Hutchison and many other scientists, that it is the nearest thing to "liquid energy" that exists in the world to-day. Food for every department of the human body, and Nature's kindliest stimulant for heart and nerve—theobromine—is found in FRY'S. Tea and coffee are mere flavours but FRY'S is a complete food.

FRY'S has that delicate "chocolaty" flavour that comes only from a blend of the choicest cocoa beans and the experience of 200 years.

Rev. E. O. Seymour Unable to Attend Pastoral Duties Owing to Illness of His Wife.

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 4.—Rev. Mr. Woodger, of Trenton, took charge of the service Sunday afternoon, and gave an interesting address.

Rev. E. O. Seymour is unable to attend to his pastoral duties owing to the serious illness of Mrs. Seymour. A message was received yesterday that her condition was very low.

The Ladies' Aid met Wednesday afternoon for business.

Mrs. Herbert Rose, of "Ye Olde Mill," was successful in landing four lunge while trolling down the river recently.

Mr. Robert Kennedy of Toronto, who spends his holidays with Mrs. Kennedy and family at Kendon EEEE's was the purchaser of the Ritchie property at the sale last week, paying $750 for the cottage and $200 for the motor boat.

Hallowe'en passed off quieter than usual this year, and with no damage to property.

DRY RAID IN THE UKRAINE.

Authorities Arrest 2,000, Find 4,825 Stills, and Get $100,000.

KHARKOV, Ukrainia, November 4. — In their campaign to suppress the illegal sale of vodka the authorities during the last month have arrested nearly 2,000 persons, while 11,000 searches of houses have been made by the military in the Kiev and Kharkov districts.

These searches resulted in the discovery of 4,825 illegal stills, the confiscation of 350,000 bottles of bootleg vodka and the imposition of fines amounting to the equivalent of $100,000.

victory for the Progressive cause" was in sight. They insisted that whatever the outcome of to-day's voting the independent group had established itself as a permanent factor in American politics which ultimately must force a reconstruction of party lines.

If a Deadlock.

Should neither Coolidge, Davis, nor Lafollette receive 266 votes in the electoral college—a clear majority over all—the election of a President would go into the House of Representatives under the constitution. In that event the House would vote in February, and only the three candidates who received the highest electoral vote would be eligible. But the choice would be made by the present almost evenly balanced House, and not by the new one that is to be chosen to-day.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE.

No wonder it has been considered necessary to hold a fire prevention campaign every year and that insurance companies and fire department heads are always pleading for more care on the part of citizens generally.

Yesterday the village of Wellington in Prince Edward County suffered the worst fire in its history, simply because some one took a chance on burning leaves on a windy day and the breeze carried a spark to a nearby residence, with disastrous results.

The practice of burning leaves even under favourable circumstances is not to be encouraged, and there should be severe penalties for individuals careless enough to follow this method of disposing of leaves when the conditions are such as to make a serious fire likely.

Not only is there the chance of heavy property damage, but there is always the danger to children and even adults of fatal injuries.

Several tragedies of this kind have been reported in Ontario during the last few weeks, the latest the death of a six-year-old London boy, whose clothing became ignited from a bonfire of leaves.

ARMISTICE DAY.

The local branch of the G.W.V.A. has been fortunate in securing for its speakers for the annual Armistice Day memorial service Brigadier-General Ross and Hon. W. H. Price, the Provincial Treasurer of Ontario.

These distinguished men are not only prominent in the public service, but they both saw service overseas, and their addresses should be full of interest.

The memorial service will be held in the Opera House on Sunday afternoon, and the people of Peterborough are urged to attend in large numbers to show their respect for the memory of the men who gave up their lives in the World War.

Peterborough's casualty list was a heavy one, and it is fitting indeed that on every anniversary of the end of the conflict that the community from which these men went and in defence of which they fought should recognize this service and sacrifice by a service appropriate to the occasion.

Every returned soldier in the city should feel the obligation that is his to help lead public sentiment in offering a suitable tribute to the memory of the men who will not come back.

This year's Armistice celebration with General Ross and Col. Price as the orators should be the most successful observance of the anniversary yet held, and will be if the people generally do their part.

TODAY'S ELECTION.

The chief interest so far as Canadians are concerned in the United States presidential election which takes place today is not so much as to whether Coolidge or Davis is elected as to the fate of the third party led by Senator LaFollette.

The average Canadian believes that the crushing of the LaFollette organization will be a good thing for our neighbors—and indirectly for this country.

A good showing in today's election by the Progressive machine would cause its continuance in politics, and the general opinion on this side of the line would favour its disappearance altogether.

The personality of its leader, whose pro-German stand during the war is well remembered in Canada, does not appeal to Canadians, nor does the composition of the Progressive organization make a favourable impression.

Here is a picture of the LaFollette party as furnished by one of its own supporters:

"With one accord Socialists, Farmer-Labourites, non-partisan leaguers, labourers of every description, discontented Democrats, liberal Republicans, anti-prohibitionists, anti-internationalists, pro-Germans and anti-English have joined in the race."

The advent into power of a mob of that character would be a sorry day for the United States, and a far from good one for Canada.

Whatever else happens in the Republic today, the northern half of the Continent will hope to see LaFollette and his following receive a thorough beating.

A RUMOUR DENIED.

Premier MacKenzie King has lost no time in denying the report published yesterday that Hon. T. A. Crerar, former Progressive leader, is to succeed Hon. W. R. Motherwell as Minister of Agriculture.

The entrance of the member for Marquette into the Cabinet would be taken as an indication that a successful attempt had been made to bring about a union of the Progressive and Liberal forces, something that the Premier has eloquently urged during his Western trip.

However, Premier King himself sets at rest the rumour that Crerar is ready to come in.

Whether he eventually will land in the Cabinet is another matter.

At present the prospect of anything like a general drift of the Progressives into the Liberal camp does not seem probable.

The Progressive organization was founded on the basis of independence of both of the old parties, and it is to be fancied that the leaders of the organization very much prefer the present statis to having the Progressive identity lost by a merger that would send the former Conservative followers of the Progressive doctrine back to their old allegiance.

Nevertheless the result of the Premier's Western mission will be watched with considerable interest throughout Canada.

The present situation cannot continue indefinitely—and future developments will be eagerly awaited by all parties, and that considerable percentage of the population which just now is attached to hope.

THREATENED GERMAN COMPETITION.

There is an argument, advanced by both secret and open opponents of the Dawes Plan, now so successfully launched by the floating of the German loan, which does not seem to stand squarely on its feet, or even on its head.

This is that a reconstructed Germany will be an invincible competitor of other countries in foreign trade. People who advance this argument seem to forget that Germany existed before the war, and that the world then had enjoyed a complete experience of German efficiency. But the argument is advanced by people who were saying, only two years ago, that Germany was immensely profiting by the depreciation of the mark, which enabled her, by means of small real wages, to compete at an enormous advantage with other nations. We have had a measure of that competition exactly as we have had a measure of competition by a solvent Germany. It is curious how these arguments are advanced as coming from the topsy-turvy minds of La Follette's German following, which, in all logic, should be showing its gratitude to Dawes. That statesman may well go down in German history as the saviour of Germany.

Discussing this topic in the financial article of the London Times of September 30, the editor says:

"Of course, the £40,000,000 will not of itself suffice to meet Germany's monetary needs. It is hoped that it will induce a return of the large amounts of capital which fled from Germany during the period of inflation . . . The return of these sums would be equivalent to a German export, without any competitive effects being felt. Moreover, it must be borne in mind that any substantial increase in the monetary resources of Germany must tend to raise her price and wage level, and therefore to diminish rather than increase her power to compete."

Much of the opposition to the Dawes plan in Great Britain comes from the labor-union leaders. They want short hours, high wages, restricted production and an individual service which can only be described as "soldiering on the job." If the rehabilitation of Germany results in blowing that kind of nonsense sky-high, so much the better. The lesson for our own union leaders will be of the greatest possible value. The world must get back to normal conditions, and the only way it can do so is by everybody doing an honest day's work so that production can be increased, a process involving reduction in wages but an increase in what wages can buy.—Barron's Weekly.

CANADA'S INTEREST.

In the British Dominions the MacDonald Government has comparatively few mourners. Sincere Labor sympathizers may regret the reverse that has overtaken their cause, but the general feeling is one of relief. The MacDonald administration has shown little or no interest in the important matter of colonial trade. Abrogation of the McKenna duties was a serious blow to the Dominions and was keenly felt in the Border Cities because of its effect on the automobile industry.

While in office the Baldwin Government favored more extensive commerce with Britain's overseas possessions. This was proven in a tangible way by the policy of inter-Empire trade preference evolved at the last Imperial Economic Conference. Before these promises could be implemented the Government was swept out of power and the Labor administration which succeeded it repudiated the agreements. With the return of Conservative rule the Dominions feel justified in expecting more favorable consideration from the Mother Country. In his pre-election manifesto, Mr. Baldwin pledged himself "to encourage mutual trade in the Empire by Imperial preference." It is probable that the first step toward that end will be re-imposition of the McKenna tariff. Such a move would act as a grateful stimulant to Canadian trade and would redound particularly to the benefit of the Border Cities.

Under the McKenna duties Canadian automobiles were granted a preference of 17 1-9 per cent. on a general tariff of 33 1-3 per cent. Naturally, this concession was valuable to firms manufacturing motor cars in the Border Cities. It is true that it did not affect the Ford Company to any great extent because there is a Ford plant in England, but other concerns were exporting as much as 60 per cent. of their products to the Old Country and were seriously injured by removal of the favorable schedule. Attempts were made to negotiate a preferential agreement with Australia which would compensate, to some extent, for the loss of British business. Nearly everyone is familiar with what followed. The Commonwealth did enter into a reciprocal compact with Canada, but automobiles were given no appreciable consideration. Under these circumstances, election of a Conservative Government in Great Britain with the prospect of preferential tariff consideration is especially encouraging to most Canadian automobile manufacturers.

In considering the effect which re-imposition of the McKenna duties would have on Empire trade, Britain's interests should not be forgotten. While sentiment is a powerful factor in binding nations together, commercial considerations are bound to prove the stronger influence in the final analysis. When the McKenna preferential schedule was first adopted it was designed mainly to aid certain British industries, with the incidental object of promoting trade between the Motherland and her Dominions. During the last ten years highly organized American industries have been gradually diverting a large proportion of the business which Britain formerly carried on with her colonies. Statistics prove that while imports from the United States to the Dominions have increased tremendously of late there has been a corresponding decrease in the amount of goods brought in from Great Britain. This is unfortunate, whether viewed from the standpoint of patriotic sentiment or business. It is no wonder, under the circumstances, that British statesmen, looking at the facts from a purely national angle, have concluded that something must be done to encourage trade within the Empire. —Border Cities Star.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Nov. 3.—The early movement today was chiefly in fat cows, which were bought for the Jewish trade up to as high as $5.50 a cwt. Export bulls were also easily absorbed from $3.50 to $5 a cwt. Butchers cattle were stronger and the packers were competing with the exporters. For one load the packers paid $7.65 a cwt. For a lighter load, 1,250-lb. steers and heifers, Arnold paid $6.40 a cwt. Export steers and choice butchers were to to 15 cents a cwt. higher than last week and the activity during the morning will take care of all of today's shipments.

For export, Rogers and Maybee will get about 600 head today and will need more for the space open. There was a heavy run of butchers' cows, but the demand was equal to the supply. A number of baby beeves sold from $7 to $9.50 a cwt. A few light stockers were held over from last week, but there was a fair trade in these today. Loads of stockers went at $3.75 to $4.25 a cwt. and one load of feeders averaging 975 lbs. each, sold at $4.85 a cwt.

The bidding on calves started out at last week's closing price and several good to choice calves sold at the opening from 10 to 11 cents a pound. One light calf sold at 12 cents. Medium calves brought 8 to 9½ cents, common calves 5 to 7 cents and grassers were firm at 3¾ to 4 cents.

Lambs were slow in making an opening price but 12 cents was conceded as about the level for choice ewes today. This was up about 50 cents a cwt. from Thursday. One extra choice bunch of lambs sold at 12 cents, but the large proportion of bucks will bring average down. Other small lots sold at 12½ cents. Large bunches of average quality lambs sold at 12 cents. Sheep were steady and 8 cents was paid for some choice handyweights.

The packers' bid on hogs was set at $9 a cwt. f.o.b. this morning, but this quotation was not acceptable and sellers refused in some instances to take less than $9.25, or today's load the packers are only bidding $8.25 a cwt. f.o.b.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, November 4 (Canadian Press).—Owing to the steady decline in the production of eggs at producing centres and supplies of fresh eggs being very scarce, a strong feeling has developed. Sale reported car of May Western storage firsts at 41 to 42 delivered Toronto. Export offers figure about 43 cents seaboard for storage firsts.

Toronto market firm. Ontario country shippers paying extras 50, firsts 45, seconds 32 to 35, making sales extras 55, firsts 50, seconds 36 to 38 f.o.b.

Montreal market firm. Jobbing extras 50, firsts 38 to 39, seconds 32.

Ottawa market firm. Dealers quoting country shippers delivered extras 44, firsts 34, seconds 30.

Winnipeg market firm. Dealers quoting country shippers delivered extras 40 to 45, firsts 31 to 35, seconds 23 to 26.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, November 4 (Canadian Press). — The export business in Canadian grain here yesterday was reported dull, there being few firm bids for any kind of grain that could be accepted eves at the lower prices ruling the Winnipeg market. There was some demand from local buyers and odd sales of No. 3 Northern wheat were made at 3 cents per bushel under the Winnipeg November option c.o.f., bay ports, while No. 2 Canadian Western oats sold at 9 cents per bushel over the same option f.o.b., Montreal, No. 3 barley at 6 cents per bushel over the November option c.i.f., bay ports. Ontario No. 3 malting barley was quoted at $1.08, and No. 3 grade at $1.07, No. 2 white oats at 60 cents, No. 3 white oats at 58, and No. 4 white at 56 cents per bushel, ex-track.

Owing to the continued weakness in the Canadian cash wheat situation and the fact that prices scored declines amounting to 7 3-4 cents to 9 cents per bushel, a weaker feeling developed in the spring wheat flour grades and millers generally reduced prices another 15 cents per barrel, which makes a net reduction since 8th October of 75 cents per barrel.

An easier undertone was present in winter wheat flour at the late reduction in prices noted owing to the more liberal offerings from Ontario millers and the somewhat limited demand for supplies here.

There was a steady inquiry from foreign buyers for millfeed on account of the shortage of feed stuffs in the United Kingdom.

A weaker feeling developed in the rolled oats and prices were reduced 10 cents per bag.

The feature of the butter situation was the weaker feeling that developed for all grades, and prices scored a decline of 1-2 cent to 1 cent per pound.

The demand from all directions was limited.

Prices of cheese were also reduced 1-4 to 1-2 cent per pound.

The volume of business in new crop beans was moderate sized, and prices were steady at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel for one pound pickers.

QUEBEC BUTTER.

MONTREAL, November 4 (Canadian Press). — At the Quebec Agricultural Co-operative Society auction sale held here yesterday, the offerings amounted to 1,200 packages of creamery butter of which 250 packages No. 1 pasteurised creamery sold at 34 1-2 cents per pound, 500 packages No. 1 creamery at 34 cents per pound, 200 packages No. 1B creamery at 33 cents per pound.

There were also 250 packages No. 1B pasteurised creamery offered for which there was no bidding.

500,000 YEARS OF MAN SHOWN BY SPECIMENS IN WISCONSIN COLLEGE

BELOIT, WIS., Nov. 3 (By United Press).—A collection of specimens of the handiwork of man from the time of the bronze age, 8,000 to 10,000 years ago, way back to the time when man first emerged from the animal state, some 500,000 years ago, have been brought from Europe by Alonzo Pond, Beloit college graduate, and added to the collections at the Logan museum, making this museum the most important one in the United States in its material on the early stages of man, especially the stone age.

Pieces of bone, metal, wood and ivory from every period in history of man are in the collection and will be used by the college in its courses. With the new material collected by Pond in France, England, Switzerland and Denmark during the past summer, and representing a heavy outlay in money Beloit college is perhaps better equipped to teach the development of man than any other school in the United States.

Beloit college, because of this collection, may be the meeting place in the future of some of the most noted students of prehistoric man in the country, who, rather than go to Europe, will come to this institution.

Pond, who has had much experience in paleontology prior to this visit, sailed from New York on May 24 and returned home recently. Many of the specimens are already in the museum while more are still to come.

Necklace 75,000 Years Old.

Among the most valuable of the specimens is a necklace, of 137 pieces of ivory, bone and stone made in the aurignacien period, 75,000 years ago. In the rest of the world, there are but 120 such beads, and two of the pieces of the necklace here are absolutely unique in the world—an ivory fish and two pendants.

From a scientific standpoint the most important pieces brought back by Pond are the 36 carvings on stone belonging to the magdelenean period, some 30,000 or more years ago. These are the only ones of this kind in America, and were found in a cave at Limeuil, in the southern part of France. They are small slabs of stone on which are drawn crude outlines of animals and from evidene in the cave itself, it has been deducted that there was once an "art class" in this cave. The pictures are drawn on the walls of the cave, but on separate pieces of stone.

The specimens of the earliest stage of man obtained by Pond are 500,000 years old, the period when man was just beginning to acquire reasoning power, distinguishing him from the beast. There are pieces of flint indicating use by man.

The next period is that of 400,000 years ago, and specimens obtained of this are large cleavers of flint without handles, positive of use by man.

The neanderthal period was 100,000 years ago, of which there are scrapers and points in the collection.

"It is generally conceded by paleontologists," said Pond, "that this form of man absolutely disappeared."

The next period is that of the necklace—the aurugnacien period, 75,000 years ago. Other specimens of this period are a skeleton, showing man as he is now, proof that the resemblance of the beast in man was gone. Of this period there is also a game stone —a boulder with little holes, in which, it is believed, small stones were thrown, as in present-day games.

Illustrating the next or solutrean period, there are some flint specimens, as few bone pieces remain. Three stages of this period are shown clearly.

The Stone Age.

Of the magdalenean period, before mentioned, besides the 36 valuable carvings, are fine bone specimens—a harpoon head, bone needle and others —partly fossilized. After this period comes the well-known neolithic (stone age) period some 16,000 years ago and specimens of this age are axes from France, England, and pieces which were used by the Swiss cave dwellers. There is also pottery, pottery making implements, much as those used today, and the more detailed implements. There are arrow heads almost exactly like those used by American Indians.

The bronze age followed in the comparatively recent time of 8,000 to 10,000 years ago—just yesterday, considered scientifically. Of this period Beloit college has clay pottery, bronze implements, and tools used in weaving.

BETTORS HIT AS RACE IS RE-RUN

Trainer Refused To Allow Victor at Newmarket Run After False Start.

There was a mix-up on the occasion of the opening of the Autumn race meet at the Newmarket track in England recently which resulted in a race being re-run on orders of the starter, who had not given the signal, and the loss of the money bet on the winner of the unofficial race, Lord Lonsdale's Snip Snap, whose trainer refused to allow the colt to run again. The jockeys weighed in after Snip Snap had won as if there was nothing wrong, although the starter had telephoned to the weighing-in room that it was no race. Seventeen two-year-olds ran.

"When the starter returned and was interviewed the stewards had no option, under the rule, but to order the race re-run," says Hotspur in The London Morning Telegraph. "They did this under the rule which reads: 'Should the starter consider that through any faulty action of the starting gate a fair start has not been effected, he shall declare it no start and order the jockeys, by means of a recall flag, to return to the post. The starter's decision on this point shall be final.'

"In an hour's time the re-run took place, but with a sadly depleted field. Fred Darling would not allow Snip Snap to run again. The same course was followed with Swanage, Evana and Princess Pauline, so that we had a re-run race with not one of the original first three engaged.

"Actually there were seven whose owners and trainers were not afraid of asking their two-year-olds for a second effort so soon, and as Lomondside, the original favorite, was one of them it was not surprising to find him a favorite again in this greatly depleted field. Lomondside won, to the delight of all who had backed him in the first instance, as their original bets, according to rule, stand, and they were on him at the price at which he was returned in the false start.

"Some people think that in a no-race they do not lose their bets, but this is not so. The rule is quite clear. Having come under the starter's orders in the first instance, they must be regarded as starters, whether they go to the post again or not. Thus those who imagined they had won their money over Snip Snap really lose their stake, which seems cruel luck.

"The rule of racing says: 'In the event of any horse running the course from a false start or from a void start, the owner may, with the consent of the stewards, withdraw his horse from the race. The horse shall, nevertheless, be considered as having started.'

"The rule of betting is also emphatic, and, while those who backed horses in the false start and which did not run again lose their money, those that went to the post are at the same starting price as obtained in the case of the false start.

"These happenings are most unfortunate, and somehow one feels they ought to be avoided. This one would apparently have been avoided had the advance flag man notice the recall flag of the starter. Some one blundered. Actually the horse which caused the false start appears to have been John Bass. He got the tapes in his mouth and in the break they practically all went right through and away without any recall signal being shown.

"One is reminded of what happened in, I think, 1919, on the July course here, which is really a parallel case. In a large field Scatwell won for Lord Glanley, but there had been a false start, and the stewards ordered the race to be re-run. Scatwell and others did not go back to the post, but the money wagered on him was lost, as in the case of the unfortunate Snip Snap."

CAMPBELLFORD MAN FELL AND CUT HIS HEAD

J. A. Donald, Carpenter, Fell From Roof and Was Knocked Unconscious.

SERIOUSLY HURT.

St. Andrew's Church Held a Very Successful Bazaar.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 4.—Mr. J. A. Donald, who lives on Sebastapool street, was seriously hurt on Saturday morning about nine o'clock at Stirling.

Mr. Donald of town and his brother, Mr. Harvey Donald of Burnbrae, who have been doing capenter work together all summer were putting on roofing on a house in Stirling belonging to Mr. LaGrow, when Mr. Donald was about half way up the roof without any bracket. He slipped and fell, about sixteen feet, onto a cement platform, falling on his head and shoulders. His head received a very bad cut. When picked up by his brother he was unconscious and remained so most of Saturday and on Sunday was just partly conscious, being in a stupor most of Sunday. He is suffering a great deal. He was taken into the home of Mrs. Bissonnette, next door and thedoctor called. After examination it was found he had no bones broken and his back was all right. At once after the accident was sent to Campbellford and Mrs. Donald and son motored immediately to Stirling. His relatives and friends are very grateful that he was not instantly killed. The doctor says that with time he will be all right again. He is being cared for at Mrs. Bisonnette's.

A Social Event.

The Ladies 'Aid of St. Andrew's church held a bazaar and cooking sale on Saturday afternoon in the sample rooms on Bridge street. One room was used for an afternoon tea room and the different tea tables were in charge of: Mrs. James W. Johnston, Mrs. Walkinshaw, Mrs. N. Morrison, Mrs. John Storie, Mrs. Peter Meiklejohn, with Mrs. Henson in charge of the tea. Mrs. Greenley was the cashier for the tea-room.

In the other sample rooms, there were four booths, fancy work, plain sewing, home-cooking and home-made candy. The fancy work was looked after by Miss Buchanan (president of the Ladies' Aid), Mrs. N. Thompson and Mrs. O'Hara.

The home cooking was in charge of Mrs. W. Oliver, Mrs. James Massie and Mrs. Alfred Hay.

Mrs. Chas. McKelvie (treasurer of the Ladies' Aid), Mrs. S. J. Moss, Mrs. Brady and Mrs. Adamson had the candy booth to look after.

The plain sewing booth was in charge of Mrs. James Alexander, Mrs. Allan Watson and Mrs. S. Parks.

The ladies in the different booths and in the tea-room were kept busy most of the afternoon and those booths that were not sold out in the afternoon, were kept open at night as well.

The ladies of St. Andrew's congregation were generous in their donations to all the booths. The proceeds amounted to a little over one hundred and eighty-four dollars.

Mission Circle.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Meahodist Church will be held on Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. H. Ashton, Inkerman street. The mission circle will meet on Tuesday night at Miss Gladys Plumpton's home on Tuesday night at eight o'clock.

At the evening service in the Methodist church, Mr. and Mrs. L. Parish, san beautifully, the duet, "Abide With Me".

Mr. and Mrs. Parish, who leave for England in two weeks will be missed from the choir where they have splendidly assisted in the music, ever since coming to Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Randall and family of Port Hope, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. R. Weston, Rear street.

Miss L. M. Hawley who has been making an extended trip to Winnipeg, Calgary and other places in the West, also to the Coast, returned to her home in Campbellford on Friday.

Mr. Trecise and three children motored to Campbellford on Saturday and spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Pearse, Frank street. Mrs. Trecise and her twin boys who visited Mrs. Pearse for the past two weeks, returned with Mr. Trecise and family to Port Hope on Sunday.

Miss Jess Currey of Toronto is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. G. C. Clarke at the rectory on Kent and Church streets.

Mrs. Mary Totten, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. Honey, near Belleville, is visiting her granddaughter, Mrs. Allan Watson, Napier street. Mrs. Totten is a former resident of Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Richardson and family spent Sunday with relatives in Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Morton and son, Dr. Percy Morton of Toronto, motored to Campbellford on Saturday and spent the week-end with friends. Misses Nelly and Irene Davidson of Toronto accompanied them and visited at the home of their parents, Reeve and Mrs. C. Davidson, Mill street.

The many friends of a former pastor of the Methodist church in Campbellford, Rev. A. J. H. Strike, will be sorry to hear of his death which occurred last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Strike were stationed in Campebellford several years ago and made many warm friends here.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening grey, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays ,though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

SHOT IN THE BACK.

Thomas Roddy, Football Referee, Shot By Policeman.

CHARLEROI, Pa., Nov. 3. — (United Press).—Thomas Roddy, 19, died in the Charleroi Hospital to-day from a bullet wound in the back, received while officiating as head linesman in a football game at Elco yesterday.

Roddy made a decision which was disputed by the players and immediately taken up by a crowd of 400 spectators. Fearing a riot, Constable William Roy arrested Roddy, who tried to break away, and was shot in the back by the constable.

Roy was held to await the action of the Coroner.

Beauty

A Gleamy Mass of Hair

35c "Danderine" does Wonders for Any Girl's Hair

Girls! Try this! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through the hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance.

While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair becomes.

CATTLE PRICES REPORTED LOW

Good Butchers' Cattle Yield Farmers Between Three and Four Cents.

FEW BEECH NUTS

CAVAN, Nov. 4.—Beef should not be too high a price to the consumer in the city as the farmers are receiving very low prices for good beef cattle coming off the grass in good condition. Good butchers' cattle are only bringing between three and four cents a pound.

Prices of farm machinery and repairs are still high. Mr. John Hatherly broke a small part of the knotter on his binder. He telephoned to Peterboro for a man to come to fix it. The repair part cost $3.00. The man came on the ten train and left at two o'clock and charged nine dollars for the job.

Beech nuts, butternuts and hazel nuts are scarce this year.

Operations have commenced in Mr. Cody's lumber camp. Men released from farm work are coming in seeking jobs.

Hallowe'en Party.

On Friday evening a Hallowe'en party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Perrin. Among those present were: Misses Lillian and Helen Syer, Muriel Matchett, Margaret Lang, Lillie Pudsy, Dorothy Pudsy Iva and Olive Smith, Norma Staples, Hazel and Gwendoline Hunter and Electa Preston, Messrs. Herb and Kenneth Syer, Ray and Gerald Staples, George Lang, Wilfred Reynolds, Everett Keegan, Lewis Pudsy, Charles and Emery Smith, Ralph and Gordon Staples.

Hallowe'en games and contests provided entertainment.

A dainty lunch was served after which games were resumed. The evening was enjoyed by all present.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, November 4 (Canadian Press). — With the United States visible supply of wheat reaching a total of almost 90,000,000 bushels yesterday and with all the grain exchanges in the country closed to-day on account of the elections, the wheat market showed a downward tendency most of the time yesterday.

Closing prices here on wheat were unsettled, 3-8 to 1 1-8 cents net lower, December $1.39 3-4 to $1.39 7-8 and May $1.47 5-8 to $1.45 7-8.

Corn finished at 3-8 cent off to 1-4 cent advance, oats varying from 3-8 cent decline to 1-8 cent gain, and provisions unchanged to 25 cents down.

NEW BANK ERECTED IN OMEMEE VILLAGE

Building Was Erected By the Bank of Toronto at Cost of $12,000.

OMEMEE, Nov. 4.—Mr. G. D. Gowans, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Toronto, moved with his wife and family into the living quarters in connection with the new Bank of Toronto building, this week. This new building is situated on the south-west corner of the old McCrea property, on the corner of King and Sturgeon streets, and when outside improvements are completed, will be one of the prettiest places of business in the village. The cost of erection, etc., is in the neighborhood of between twelve and thirteen thousand dollars. It is a two-storey building of red Milton rug brick, 25 x 35, and the office, which is complete with modern equipment, is the last word in convenience and comfort. The office fittings, which correspond with all the interior, are of quarter cut oak. The heating system is complete in every detail. The plumbing included the installation of a compression tank worked by an electric motor. The electric wiring was done by C. L. Morcombe, Omemee, which was in accord with the policy of the contractor, Mr. Collier, that as far as practicable, supplies were purchased from local dealers.

The living quarters on the second floor include two bright living rooms, fitted with French doors, electric grate, and are brightly and tastefully decorated. A neat kitchen is outfitted with a complete kitchen cabinet, built in the wall, and in addition to pantry and clothes closets, there are two bedrooms; an electric range is one of the many conveniences. There is a balcony to the north and a beautiful sun-room facing Sturgeon street. No room is wasted in the building and the plan is the subject of much favorable comment by the people of the district who appreciate the confidence which the Bank of Toronto has manifested in the community in the erection of such a splendid office in the village.

The Bank of Toronto, first opened a branch in Omemee, in the village in 1903 with Mr. A. L. Ames as the first manager and since that time Messrs. Grout, Hodgetts, Weaver and the present Mr. Gowans, have held the office of manager, and it is gratifying to note that the support given the institution by the people of the community was such as to warrant the erection this year of larger and more convenient quarters.

Mr. W .Collier, of Toronto, was the contractor and having previously erected ten building for the Bank of Toronto, in varjous centres, was thoroughly experienced in every detail. The workmanship and fittings are of the best and many who have inspected the building state that it is up to the minute in every respect.

WINGS

Like this, runs the evolutionary theory: A fish wanted, for instance, to get out on land and explore. Struggling it developed fins into flippers like a seal's. Gradually these became legs—like a lizard's. Trying to seize objects ultimately developed fingers.

Or, struggling to fly, fish developed fins into wings. Man yearned to fly—so much, he pictured the angels with wings. He didn't wait for wings to grow. Made his own, artificial—the airplane. No longer confined to the ground. It's a freakish step in evolution, is man's joining the birds.

A real whole wheat porridge

If you like a hot porridge that is not a mush—one that you have to chew—try this one: Place several Shredded Wheat Biscuits in a saucepan, adding salt and enough water to cover the bottom of the pan. Stir and boil until it thickens; serve hot in porridge dish with milk or cream. Makes the best whole wheat porridge because it is thoroughly cooked. WOMEN OF FRANCE REFUSE DICTATION

Winter Hats Causing Much Discussion in Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—Winter styles are here, and with them has come a bitter fashion controversy. The "hat question" has arisen between the milliners on the one side and their customers on the other. "Is the 1924-25 winter hat to be the tall directoire crown and upturned brim, or the little cloche wih fitted dome-crown?"

The milliners have replied, it shall be the Directoire, and refuse to make any other kind. Paris women have vehemently objected, and the result has been that a suprisingly large number of straw hats continues to be worn, and the time honored custom of donning velvet hats on the first day of September has been broken.

At the opening of the fall racing season at Longchamp it was noticed that women steadfastly retained their summer headwear. Meanwhile the show windows of milliners on the Rue de la Paix and the Rue Royale are overstocked with velvet hats.

"It makes me look too matronly," one of the most fashionable women at the track replied when asked the reason for her failure to adopt the "Directoire." This probably sums up the case for the customers.

The milliners have come out flatly and decreed that women must wear square crowns or nothin. It has become practically impossible to find a milliner who will make the stubborn little cloche.

"Beware of the wrong hat! The hat you choose can make or mar not ony the ensemble of your toilette, but the charm of your face itself." Such is the way a woman fashion writer in one of the most widely circulated style magazine advises her women readers.

The tendency in hat styles, apart from the square crowns, is distinctly to height. Black panne is prevalent in every modiste's window. If there is any trimming at all, it must stand very high. The crown alone carries the height if the hat is not ornamented. The square crowns have their high trimimng at the side or directly in front, but the round crowns, what few there are to be seen, carry their ornamentation on top.

The next few weeks will decide whether it is to be "the Directoire" or "the cloche" hat. Some stubborn women say they can wear their straw hats until next spring. It remains to be seen whether the milliners can carry their stocks of velvet hats all through the winter.

LONDON'S OLD CUSTOMS

Visitors Find Many of Them Still in Vogue

Many Americans visiting London this season have found that several ancient customs still survive there. In Ely Place, Hatton Garden, a watchman still cries the hour after the great iron gates are closed at 11 p.m. and will only admit late merry makers or theatregoers after full identification; in Lincoln's Inn at 9 o'clock the curfew is still sounded on the bell in the chapel tower. This bell was brought from Cadiz in 1596 by Queen Elizabeth's favorite, the Earl of Essex.

Every night at 11 the night watchman at St. James's Palace makes a round of the grounds. A subaltern, a sergeant and three privates form the guard, led by a band-boy carrying an ancient horn lantern, in which a candle burns. The lantern is a tradition of the Guards, and so far nothing will induce them to go in for an efficient, modern electric flash lamp. "Won't you buy my sweet lavender?" is still heard, but changed by market conditions to six instead of sixteen bunches a penny.

TUNIC GOWNS.

Very attractive tunic gowns have black chiffon velvet arranged over a slip of gold or silver cloth.

BELLEVILLE HUNT CLUB LEFT TODAY

Long Lake Hunters Left for Their Annual Three Weeks Hunt.

BRIGHTON, Nov. 4.—The Long Lake Hunt Club left Belleville this morning for their annual three week's hunt. The party is composed of Jim Thompson, Dr. Dolan and Lloyd Knox of Belleville; C. H. Grenfield and Dr. Dure of Brighton; Dr. Anderson of Woollers; Archie Randolph and Dr. Glover of Campbell ford; Jay Zufelt of Toronto, and their guide Peter Fraser.

The party will proceed to their usual hunting grounds, where there is a large camp with good accomodations, which is situated on Long Lake. This will be the tenth annual hunt of the club and judging from past experiences will be a very successful one.

The Art Exhibition, which was a display of about five hundred large and small pictures from the Elson Art Co., and which was presented by the High School in their Assembly Hall from October 29th to November 1st, inclusive, proved a decided success. In the afternoons several ladies were in charge, to welcome the vistors and serve them with light refreshments, and the pupils of the High School had charge of the evening programmes. The object of the exhibition was to purchase pictures for the school and they were fortunate in obtaining $160 for this purpose, and also had fifteen pictures donated by different citizens of the town.

This display gave the citizens the privilege of studying leisurely the reproductions of famous masterpieces and also the pleasure of spending a social hour with the pupils.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Moysey of Toronto have recently moved to Brighton where the former has taken a position as accountant with Sping Valley Conners, Ltd.

A large seaplane from New York landed on Brighton Bay about eleven-thirty a.m. Saturday, and purchased some needed gasoline. The plane left New York at about 8.30 a.m. and from here went to Toronto.

BAND CONCERT AT LAKEFIELD

Musicians and Villagers Turn Out in Sunday Afternoon's Chill.

DANCE ON TUESDAY

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 4.—The first open air band concert of the Citizen's Band was held at 3.30 on Sunday afternoon outside the Memorial Hall and was attended by a number of citizens. The cold wind made playing rather difficult but the band, under the leadership of Bandmaster T. Jewell, gave a good concert and Lakefield has reason to be proud of its band. They have gone a long way since the stormy night they were re-organized last February. With all too little encouragement from the citizens and the important question of funds to purchase music and instruments, being a serious problem, the leaders took hold and we have now an organization of which Lakefield should be very proud. We appear to have abundance of material in the village to organize a political or semi-political campaign and time seems as nothing to many of these people but a little time given to encourage our own young men in their endeavor to provide what is a genuine asset to the town seems to be lacking, even though good citizenship demands it. Small towns are too apt to run to denominationalism and are not quick enough to encourage organizations in which every creed has a common interest and a common right to participate. Our Band and the Fire Brigade are two outstanding groups which deserve the support of all, they help all and in consequence they are a municipal asset. Let us remember that it is Our Boys and Our Village.

Firemens' Dance.

The event of the week will be the Masquerade Dance given by the Volunteer Fire Brigade in the Memorial Hall on Tuesday night. This is the third annual masquerade and it is expected that a good crowd will attend. Costumes of many varieties are being planned and the auditorium of the Hall will present a gay appearnce. Fire Chief W. L. Webster and his men are not sparing themselves to make this the most successful masquerade ever held.

Miss Aileen Brown entertained about thirty-five of her young friends at a jolly Hallowe'en party on Friday night. The evening was spent in Hallowe'en games and the children had a delightful time.

Mrs. Paul Wells has been the raison d' étre of several delightful little parties during her brief visit to her mother, Mrs. L. H. Grahame.

Bush Fire.

A brush fire at Buckley's Lake caused a mild sensation on Saturday. It was caused by hunter's (it is supposed fires not properly extinguished). The dry autumn has made it necessary to carefully watch fires and cigarette or cigar butts as a blaze of large proportions can and does arise from small causes.

The extreme dry weather is holding up the farmers with their fall plowing. Other outside work has been well done and now the farmers hope for a little rain to make possible the completition of the season's work.

Methodist Anniversary.

Sunday next is the anniversary of the Lakefield Methodist church and special services will be held at which Rev. I. W. Rowland of Omemee will be the special speaker. The usual Thanksgiving dinner and concert will be held on Monday evening, the former under the direction of Mr. K. S. Madill and the choir.

On Sunday next Rev. George J. Bousfield of St. Luke's, Peterboro will be in charge of the morning service in St. John's Church. In the evening the Rector will be in charge.

MASQUERADE DANCE

Apsley Residents Spent Enjoyable Evening at St. George's Institute.

APSLEY, Nov. 4.—The annual masquerade dance was held in the St. George's Institute on Friday evening, and as usual proved a very successful affair, visitors coming in from Haultain, Warsaw, Clydesdale, Lakefield and Rose Island. This event is recognized as an established feature in the social life of Apsley and is always anticipated with keen enjoyment by the young people. There were about thirty dancers in fancy dress, the men being in the minority so far as costumes were concerned. The hall was appropriately decorated and presented a pleasing scene when the grand parade and march took place at nine-thirty, when the judging took place. Dancing lasted for about three hours after. Prizes for the most striking costumes both ladies and gentlemen were offered, and the judges were Mrs. C. S. Windsor and Mrs. Z. Tucker. The ladies' prize was won by Miss Marguerite Campbell of Rose Island as an Indian maid, and the gents' by Roy Spence as an English gentleman, the Clutching Hand, personated by Mr. C. Spence, a well-known character of moving pictures, running close for first place.

The following are some of the characters represented besides the winners: Miss Canada, Miss Charlotte Tucker; night, Misses Patterson and Flora Wilson; sailor, Clarence Campbell and Miss Myrtle Windsor; cowboys. Roy Brown, Reeve, Scott and Cicely Spence; Japanese lady, Mrs. R. Scott; sunflower, Mrs. H. Reid; snowballs, Miss Stella Northey; bootleggers, Herb. Tucker and John Selkirk; ice maiden, Miss Marjorie Spence; witch, Mrs. J. Downing; monk, Mrs. Spence; Hallowe'en fancy, Miss Simbert and Miss Burn; porter, George Kilborne; autumnal frost, Phyllis Spence.

EAST EMILY NEWS.

EAST EMILY, November 4. — Mr. and Mrs. H. Cottingham and children, of Oshawa, spent the week-end with the latter's brother, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Fee.

Miss Ethel Wright spent Saturday at the home of her parents at Woodstock.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Fee were visitors to Lindsay last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McConnell were business visitors to Peterborough last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Finnie of Peterborough spen a few days this week visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Moncrief.

Quite a number of people from this district attended the annual fowl supper held in the Presbyterian Church, Omemee, on Monday night.

There are quite a number of little farmers motoring out to the front for apples during the past week.

Mr. Samuel Stinson had the misfortune of having one of his young team of horses hang itself.

Mr. Stinson was in Omemee and had put his horses in a shed and tied one horse and didn't tie the other. The one that wasn't tied backed up, and pulled the other one so that when he went to get the horses one was dead, owing to hanging.

The men who have been working on Doube's railway bridge all summer have most of the bridge completed, and are getting things ready to leave in a few days.

The men have surely made wonderful work on the new bridge this summer.

DOWNEYVILLE HELD MASQUERADE DANCE

Ellwood Orchestra of Lindsay Furnished the Music.

DOWNEYVILLE, A very successful masquerade and social was held in the hall here Friday evening under the auspices of the Catholic Woman's League.

The Ellwood Orchestra from Lindsay furnished the music for the evening and a very large crowd was present from Ops Lindsay, Ennismore, Omemee and Peterboro.

During the parade in which over 200 took part the costumes were displayed and were a sight to behold.

Many beautiful costumes and many comic ones were in evidence and those who were old ladies and gentlemen were all admired by the large crowd. The judges found it difficult to form their decision as they had so many to choose from but finally they decided on the following: Best ladies, Miss Geraldine Harrington, teacher at King's Wharf who was a Butterfly; Gentleman's Joseph O'Leary, also of King's Wharf, who went as Indian Chief. In the comic class Mr. P. Winn, as the "Old Man" took first prize, while Miss Amelia Morrissey of Lindsay as the Old Lady, took first prize, and was applauded for her many comic actions and especially for her step-dancing which was admired by all. Among others that deserve special mention were as follows: Miss Ethel Goselin as Queen of Hearts; Miss Agnes Murray as Red Cross Nurse; Miss Ruby Perdue, Canada; Miss Pearl Herlihey as "Topsy"; Mrs. Jos. Guiry as Indian Maid; Messrs. Cecil Bissette, Leslie Lucas and Jas. Lucas as Clowns; Messrs. Carl Harrington and Fergus O'Neill as Sailor Boy, and many others. A special feature was the step-dancing by Messrs. Aubrey and Harold Crowley. A dainty lunch was served by the ladies after the judging and the remainder of the evening spnt in dancing which was enjoyed by all.

MARMORA NEWS

MARMORA, Nov. 3.—Though dances were being held in neighboring places on Hallowe'en, the dance in the Town Hall, Marmora, under the auspices of Marmora L. T. B. 177 held its own for attendance. Everything went well and good humor reigned supreme. The drawing for the quilt resulted in Miss Mabel McGarvey being the lucky one. At Deloro the masquerade ball was widely patronized.

Mrs. Allan McGarvey returned on Wednesday from Niagara Falls, N. Y. Her daughter, Miss Aldora, returned to spend a few days in town.

Miss Aletha McGarvey of Toronto is visiting relatives here.

Hallowe'en revels were indulged in by folks of all ages despite the tendency to rain.

Mrs. F. Tonkins of Carlow Township is spending a week with her sister, Mrs. Hilliard McGarvey.

DUCKS NOT PLENTIFUL.

Many Duck Hunters Enjoying Themselves at Rice Lake.

BAILIEBORO, Nov. 3.—Many duck hunters are daily enjoying a day's sport at Rice Lake. There are not a great number of ducks on the lake as yet, possibly owing to the fact that the weather has been too warm.

On Wednesday, by the Rev. R. M. Patterson, at the Methodist Parsonage, Fraserville, Zelma, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Gainer, Bailieboro, to Percy, third son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Moncrief, Fraserville. The young couple will reside at Fraserville.

FANATIC WAS TAKEN INTO CUSTODY IN PETER VEREGIN CASE

Detectives Allege He Made Allegations Before Death of Leader.

MONTREAL, Nov. 4.—A. Doukhobor fanatic, Sam Komenshcoff, who was employed on section Coryell, has been arrested as a suspect in connection with the death of Peter Veregin and his three fellow passengers who met their deaths in the recent Parron disaster.

Word has been received here by the investigation department of the Canadian Pacific Railway from Burns that this man has been taken into custody following allegations that he made a statement a few days ago to two other Doukhobors that they would soon have no more Peter Natto Veregin. The fanatic who was noticed at the scene of the disaster soon after it occurred will be questioned to-day. The jury decided that the death of four men was due to the discharge of a high explosive placed within the passenger coach by person or persons unknown and it was urged that the C.P.R. and provincial police continue their efforts to definitely place the responsibility for the discharge.

SNOW FALLING IN NORTHERN ONTARIO

Heavy Wind Storms Friday and Saturday—Snowing Since 11 O'clock Monday Morning.

TIMMINS, Nov. 4. — (Canadian Press). — Northern Ontario is receiving its first touch of real winter. Heavy wind storms ruled steady for Friday and Saturday, but the wind and temperature took a sudden drop on Sunday morning.

Since 11 o'clock yesterday morning snow has been falling steadily, driven by a south-easterly wind, and the temperature has become more genial.

Snow will be greatly welcomed by hunters, who have been complaining that dry woods, with crisp leaves and twigs that snap under foot, have heralded their approach to game. Some 400 hunters came north yesterday morning from Toronto over the Canadian National, possibly two-thirds of them detraining between Gravenhurst and North Bay.

COUNCIL OF WOMEN HEAR TALK ON BEEF

Demonstration On Cuts Of Beef Held in Market.

Three men, earnest and interested in better beef, addressed a large number of women, the majority of them housewivs, yesterday at the February meeting of the Local Council of Women.

Not for a long time has such an interesting demonstration of the cuts of beef, with technical advice on what to choose in buying, been given to a meeting of women in Ottawa.

Dr. H. M. Barnes, of the Health of Animals Branch ,and Mr. J. C. Stuart and Mr. A. MacMillan, of the Live Stock Branch, were responsible for as entertaining a meeting as has ever been arranged by the executive of the Local Council of Women.

Hind and fore quarters of choice beef were displayed, and at the conclusion of short talks by Dr. Barnes and Mr. MacMillan, the quarters were cut into roasts and steaks of many names and into various other cuts dear to the heart of the thrifty housewife.

Dr. Barnes gave a timely address on the danger of buying meat that had not been inspected by Government officers. It was estimated that 75 per cent. of the tuberculosis in children was of bovine origin. Animals were also subject to cancer. If unscrupulous farmers or butchers owned sharp knives it was possible for them to cut away all traces of disease, and the beef might be sold as first grade. This could only be overcome, Dr. Barnes believed, by a Government inspection at slaughtering.

Mr. Stuart, from the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, is here to day making final arrangements for the Meat Demonstration to be held here under the auspices of the Local Council of Women, at the Market Hall, Thursday afternoon, 6th November, at 3 o'clock.

BAPTISTS MET.

Young People of Local Churches Met on Monday.

The young people of the Peterborough Association of Baptist Churches met on Monday, Nov. 3rd, in their annual fall rally, in the Port Hope Baptist church, the afternoon session taking the form of a conference on B.Y.P.U. work, while the evening programme was educational and inspirational.

Those taking part in the evening were Rev. J. N. Norton, Cobourg; Rev. N. S. McKechnie, Belleville, and Mr. Fred Reynolds, Brockville, secretary of the Interprovincial B.Y.P.U. The attendance was large and enthusiastic, a good delegation going from Peterborough. An excellent supper was served by the ladies of the Port Hope church.

Representatives from Park street Baptist church were: Rev. N. R. McLeod, Messrs. A. Thompson, P. Luther, Ernest Elliott, Geo. Panter, Mrs. Neil Porter and Miss Margaret Riddell. Among the large delegation from Murray street church were Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Richmond, Messrs. A. J. Madill, Roy White, P. Johnson, H. Doughty, K. Routley, A. Mann, the Misses Archer, Clara Doughty, Marjorie Stenton, Nellie Stenton, Alice Johnston, Evelyn Rose, Clara Baptie.

Has Your Husband Got Indigestion?

Nothing creates domestic discord quicker than an attack of indigestion, and nothing gets rid of indigestion quicker than Bisurated Magnesia. No man can be sweet tempered(good natured or eevn fair minded when his stomach is constantly sick, sour, gassy, and upset with after-eating distress. If your husband has stomach trouble neither scold nor pity him, but help him by seeing that he has a supply of Bisurated Magnesia (either powder or tablets) constantly at hand. A teaspoonful of powder or two tablets taken in a little water after meals will instantly neutralize the acids in his stomach that are causing his trouble and he can enjoy his meals with no fear of indigestion. Bisurated Magnesia is the special form of Magnesia used by thousands to neutralize stomach acidity and quickly overcome Indigestion —do not confuse with Milk, Carbonate, Block or Citrate of Magnesia. Insist on Bisurated. Its action is safe, prompt and sure and it can be obtained at small cost from any reliable drug store.

WIDOW GETS LOEB ESTATE.

Richard, Franks' Slayer, and Two Other Brothers, Not Mentioned.

CHICAGO, November 4. — Mrs. Anna Bolman Loeb, widow of Albert Loeb, Sr., vice-president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., is named as sole beneficiary of the $3,000,000 estate of her husband, by his will filed for probate.

Allan Loeb, eldest son, is appointed sole executor of the will. Three other sons ,Ernest Richard and Thomas, are not mentioned in the testament.

The fact that Mr. Loeb's third son Richard, serving a life sentence in Joliet Prison for the murder of Robert Franks, is not mentioned, was not due, it was said, to the murder.

The bulk of the estate is composed of stock in Sears, Roebuck & Co.

The Affair at Flower Acres

by CAROLYN WELLS

©1924 by NEA Service Inc.

"No use discussing imaginary criminals," Dobbins said, briskly, "we have quite enough real suspects."

"Suppose I confess to the shooting ——" began Malcolm Finley, and Dobbins quickly turned to him.

"Do!" he cried. "That's what I've been waiting for! You confess to shield Mrs. Raynor—and then she'll confess to shield you——"

"Oho," Goddard said, "that's fine! If they each confess to shield the other, that lets them both out!"

"Not much it doesn't!" Dobbins returned. "The truth is, to put it plainly, one of those two people shot Mr. Raynor. Both know which one did it. Neither will tell, unless if one confesses, then the other will. If Mrs. Raynor fired the shot, then Mr. Finley picked up the pistol afterwards and rubbed off her fingerprints. If, on the other hand, the shot was fired by Mr. Finley—Mrs. Raynor saw him as she stood at the west door. But they both know."

"This is discarding the theory of Miss Turner or of an intruder from outside," Ezra Goddard summed up, thoughtfully.

"Yes, sir, and I do discard them. I've thought over that nurse, but she never would have shot and then turned on the lights. In the dusk she would have run away."

"You can't affirm that so positively," Kent said; "nor can you give up the idea of an outsider merely because I didn't see him make his getaway. Of course, he would have disappeared silently and in the darkness of the shrubbery, and I'd stand small chance of seeing him at all."

Dobbins looked uncertain again. The man seemed to have little initiative—yet he was rated a good detective But, as he had said, this case presented so many possibilities, had so many sides to it; and Dobbins was an earnest enquirer rather than a brilliant deducer.

"I've got to interview more people," he sighed as he rose. "But I know where to go for information. I'm going for some now—and if I'm not mistaken, it will throw some light on a few dark points."

Sanguine of nature, the detective went off and went straightway to the home of Dolly Fay.

That young person sat in a swing on the lawn, and with a word of greeting Dobbins sat down beside her.

"Now, young lady," he said, trying to intimidate her by a fierce scowl, "you are to tell me all you are keeping back about Mrs. Raynor. If you don't, you'll be in danger yourself."

"Danger? How come?" and the slangy child snapped her little fingers in the detective's face.

This flippancy irritated the arm of the law, and he scowled harder at her.

"Be careful, Miss. Have you ever heard of contempt of court?"

"No—what's it mean?"

"It means that if you treat lightly the inquiries of a detective you are liable to fine and imprisonment."

Dobbins found it was necessary to take strong measures with this difficult chit.

"Oo! I'se so 'fwaid!" But though Dolly pretended flippancy, Dobbins could see she was seriously disturbed.

"And so," he followed up his advantage, "unless you see fit to tell me whatever I ask you, I shall have to report you——"

"What do you want to know?" the question was snapped at him.

"You were with Mrs. Raynor when she threw a parcel into the Falls?"

"Yes; that was only a bit of rubbish."

"Why did she take the trouble to carry it to the Falls to dispose of it?"

"Oh, it wasn't any trouble. We were out for a walk, you know——"

"Had you ever seen that parcel before?"

Dolly was game.

"No," she said, stubbornly, "I never saw it before."

Dolly was unaccustomed to lying; unaccustomed, also, to being questioned by a detective, and, as she spoke the untrue words, her red lips quivered and she burst into tears.

"Go away!" she cried.

"Wait a minute, Miss Fay. Try to realize that for you to tell the truth will help Mrs. Raynor more than for you to conceal antyhing."

"What do you mean by that? I don't believe you! Take me to Mrs. Raynor, then, and if she gives me permission, I'll tell you all you ask."

But this plan by no means suited Dobbins, and, too, he had found out all he wanted to know. There was a mystery about the parcel. It was a secret between the two. Dolly had promised Mrs. Raynor not to tell about it—therefore the parcel of morphine was of importance—it was no old rubbish to be tossed a way carelessly.

He went away, and Dolly, torn and shaken by the experience, started to walk over to Flower Acres and talk to Nan about it.

She had done her best to keep faith with Nan, and if that old detective had discovered anything, it was not her fault, she mused.

As she came to old Gannon's house, that worthy sat on his little porch, smoking his pipe.

Dolly was friendly with the old man over his "specimens," which always interested her. She didn't like Gannon—didn't trust him, but she had a natural bent toward the science he followed and had spent many hours listening to his discourses on the habits of water-beetles, or the varieties of dragon-flies.

"Did you get the new night moth?" she asked as she paused before him.

"Yep. It's in the case." He jerked his finger over his shoulder, a motion meant as an invitation to go in and look at it if she chose, and curious to see the new specimen, Dolly ran into Gannon's house.

The old man remained on the porch, and, when a few moments later Lionel Raynor joined him there, he had quite forgotten Dolly's existence.

Gannon and his visitor fell into an absorbed conversation. Dolly, inside the room, studying the new moth, heard the hum of their voices but paid no heed.

TAX COLLECTOR TO REMAIN AND COLLECT TAXES

Saturday Conference and Result Confirmed at Last Night's Meeting.

PARK RENT OVERDUE.

Those Whose Names Appear on Park Lease May be Approached for Rent.

The threatened re-organization of the Tax Collector's office did not materialize at last night's meeting of the City Council. A special committee appointed by the Finance Committee to examine the Collector's office and to report and make recommendations to the Council reported that after having had a conference with the Tax Collector "we recommend that no change be made at present; the Tax Collector having given an assurance that the rolls will be returned as directed."

The matter would have closed with the reading of the special committee's resolution, but Ald. Melville Turner wanted more information on the matter. Mayor J. J. Turner in reply said that the conference was held on Saturday afternoon in Tax Collector W. J. Green's, office. It was agreed that the tax collector had been too lenient with delinquent tax payers in the past and the members of the Council were specially urged by the Mayor to turn a deaf ear to any pleadings that might come from citizens for an extension of time. In this way the Tax Collector will be better able to do his work and return the rolls on time. "Members of the City Council should not assume any such responsibility," said the Mayor. It is Mr. Green's duty to assume that," he added.

Rent Overdue

The matter of overdue rent from the Peterboro Baseball Club for the use of Riverside Park was broughto up and both Ald. Turner and Ald. Fife were of the opinion that the money outstanding and amounting to $750 should be collected in a business-like way. The question of approaching those whose names appear on the lease was discussed and may be resorted to. Ald. Turner said he understood that a local syndicate was preparing to take over the defunct club, but the question of assuming the debts of the old organization, was an issue in the negotiations. A committee of the ball interests was to have waited on the City Council last evening but they did not turn up.

"They would have created a better impression had they turned up at to-night's meeting as promised," remarked one of the Aldermen.

Ald. Turner said a good deal more money had been expended by the city on improvements on the park, than had ever been obtained as rental from the ball club.

Old Home Week

A Special Committee appointed to consider the date for holding an Old Home Week reported as follows:

"Your Committee considered the matter with others who were interested in such a celebration and in view of the fact that the Soldiers' Memorial will not be ready until May, 1926, it is the opinion of this Committee that it is advisable to postpone the celebration until 1926, and then the centenary of the naming of Peterborough can be celebrated."

Skating Rink

A Special Committee appointed to consider the location for skating rinks for the coming season reported as follows:

"We recommend that skating rinks be established at the following places:

"In the King Edward Park at the corner of Aylmer and Princess streets.

"At Donegal and London streets on property owned by the G. Walter Green Company.

"In Inyerlea Park.

"In Riverside Park.

"The Committee also recommended that a toboggan slide be constructed in Riverside Park if it can be financed.

The Parks Committee reported that they could not proceed with the construction of a toboggan slide at Riverside Park this year owing to lack of finances.

New Freight Shed

The chairman of the Parks Committee was authorized to insure the small building at Lake Street bathing beach and that the premium paid on the certificate of the chairman.

A letter wil be sent to Mr. Marshall, Superintendent of Queen's Park Toronto, thanking him for plants which he sent and which are much appreciated.

The Canadian National Railway has been written to and their attention called to the fact that a new freight shed is to be built in Peterborough and that they see, especially in view of the unemployment now existing and in prospect, if they cannot see their way to proceed with the construction of the building this season.

Objection Sustained

A Special Committee appointed in regard to the application of the Purdy Lumber Company for permission to construct a lumber shed partly on Whitla Street, beg leave to report as follows:

"That owing to objections which were raised by an adjoining property owner this committee cannot recommend that the request be granted."

Snow Ploughing.

A special committee recommended that the tenders for snow ploughing of W. J. Stinson, T. H. Jackson, R. J. Manley, George Sexsmith, H. Moncrief, and W. A. Millen for Districts Seven and Eight be accepted. Service to the ratepayers was considered in all cases, and the total represents a saving of $125.00 over last year's cost of doing the work. The following tenders were received. This was confirmed:

District No. 2, W. J. Stinson, $200.
District No. 3, Thomas Flannery, $250. T. H. Jackson, $220. W. E. Patterson, $230. E. J. Ferguson, $235. R. Plumpton, $240. A. Deal, $235.
District No. 4, E. J. Ferguson, $140. R. J. Manley, $175.
District No. 5, George Sexsmith, $175.
District No. 6, H. Moncrief, $9205 George Sexsmith, $190.
District No. 7, David Conroy, $129. W. A. Millen, $150. R. Mitchell, $165.
District No. 8, W. A. Millen, $140. R. Mitchell, $170. Charles Healey, $140.

Fell on Sidewalk

Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., addressed the Council on the subject of compensation for Mrs. M. E. Robson, who was injured by falling on an icy sidewalk and also on behalf of A. Longo who claims his business was disrupted and earnings

OBSERVANCE OF GEORGE STREET CHURCH CLOSED

Semi-Centennial of the Building of Church Came to an End Last Night.

DEBTS CLEARED.

Roll of Subscriptions Read By Rev. H. Young Showed Total of $12,000.00.

The observance of the semi-centennial of the building and opening of George Street Church closed down last night in a happy, most enjoyable and triumphant gathering, celebrating not only the old associations of the years that have gone sliding down the declivity of time, but the most excellent accomplishments of the present. For at the close, or near the close of the evening, the expected for moment came when the chairman, Rev. W. Harold Young, pastor of the church, read with almost tantalising reluctance, the roll of subscriptions, in units and groups of givings.

It had been asked that the congregation should find and offer so much as $7,500 to clear off all encumbrances. Loyally and thankfully, cheerfully and willingly ,determinedly and successfully the total rolled up to nearly $12,000. A most handsome offering, showing that even old ,and at times venerable, churches may inspire young people and wise heads to remarkable effort.

Attention was tense as the Roll of Honour was translated. So many at $2.00, more in number at $5.00, a considerable group at $10.00, a swelling total at $20.00, climbing upwards and increasing in value and richness to thirty-seven at $100.00, with a welcome number at $200.00, a hurried sprinkling of $400.00, two of $500.00, and then a gap, to be closed by one of $1,000 and a crowning gift of $2,000.

The result was greeted not with applause, but a most boisterous fusilade of cheers and other ways of exhibiting approval. Well deserved and creditable to the people, the congregation and the church. The last two gifts were $1,000 from the Ladies' Aid of the church and $2,000 from Mr. B. F. Ackerman.

Both the ladies and the member are ever to be relied on when devotion and necessity ask.

And the list of subscribers should appear in print that all men should view the good light and marvel accordingly, but the accredited list is not at hand just now.

Heroic Work.

Heroic work was done by the Ladies' Aid, in whose able hands rested the responsibility for the Old Time Tea Meeting. A body-filling, hand shaking and cheerful time, if ever one was. Heroic work was done by the women of the church, who literally toiled all day and caught nothing but incredible industry, anxiety and a large patience for their portion. The supper was a masterpiece, deftly served, satisfying and wholesome. Thrice had the table to be spread, and yet there was abundance, and it was even that at eight o'clock, after the supper had been in progress for nearly three hours before the final call to eat was given, and the Salvation Army Band, which had been playing for two steady hours, went below to enjoy the refreshment that the band so well deserved. For it is an ill thing to make music on an empty stomach. So those who have tried it aver.

It was nearly nine of the clock before the platform was taken by those who were to speak and tell of past experiences. Several of the ex-pastors who had been in view and hearing on Sunday, had been called away, and those who came on the platform, to be seen and heard by parishioners of years ago, included: Rev. F. H. Wallace, Rev. Isaac Tovell, Rev. W. R. Young, all of Toronto, and Rev. R. G. Peever, of Hamilton; J. P. Wilson, of Belleville, and Rev. S. J. Thompson, of Watford, with Rev. A. J. Thomas, of Windsor. Probably numbering in ability, wisdom and executive ability those who constituted the First Methodist Conference of the now Province of Ontario.

It is not at hand to find space to report what was said. While speaking in the general drift of reminiscence, each interspersed his relation with anecdote and story. Called back the days of his pastorate, of connection with men and women, many of whom have passed away, greeted those left of the faithful of fifty years ago and whose handshake seemed to be as hearty and friendly as ever. Ten of these were hailed to the platform, and ranged behind the clergy showed a line of smiling faces good to look at. One vacant chair was worthily filled by Mrs. James Stubbs, a matron of the congregation, whose quiet presence testified that woman had not been forgotten in the beneral eulogy and appreciation.

Seldom has so much bottled-up eloquence been confined in one church. And Rev. Mr. Thomas, who at times is moved to express himself and his convictions with energy and forcefulness, found his opportunity to extol the work, the men and the end. Did it well too. Possibly the others were too much occupied, when on their feet, in telling how much they appreciated the unique gathering and opportunity, to take on even ten minutes of discussion and propaganda. And of such retin ence the audience approved. Each ten-minute discourse could easily have been expanded into one hour of interesting relation.

A few notes are all that may be written, lest space and time hold back.

A most agreeable part of the programme was the song by Mrs. Geo. King (accompanied by Mr. King), and who came from Trinity church as soloist of the congregation typifying that Trinity church is a true daughter of George Street, but mistress in her own relation to Methodist work and progress. Mr. Douglas Carlistle also sang, delighting the gathering with an appropriate selection. A worthy son of a father of George street church. The Salvation Army band has been mentioned and deserves to be referred to again, for it kept in good humor the waiting throng, hungry for supper and thirsty withal. No mere ordinary band could do this and survive.

Crowded? Well, yes, the building was fairly infested with people from foundation to roof. Every seat was taken and held, and it was 11 o'clock of the night before the meeting ceased to perform. If anybody had stayed there might have been organized a watch night service to usher in the beginning of the next and coming centennial of the church.

A feature at the close, just preceding the benediction, was the unveiling of the handsome bronze tablet, which rested on an easel, and will be clasped to the wall, the hand forever as a testimony in regard to the Unforgotten.

The inscription, lettered deep into the bronze surface, reads as follows:

TO THE GLORY OF GOD.

And in recognition of the debt of gratitude which we, who worship in this church, acknowledge to our fathers, whose vision, faith and devotion made possible this building, and whose loyalty has maintained this cause through fifty years of widening influence to the community,

Erected in this Jubilee year:

Even after the bulk of those participtaing had dispersed, groups lingered to hand-shake and congratulate, to greet and be greeted. And to have distinct and visible remembrance that those of the clergy who had participated, Roy, the indefatigable and expert photographer, gathered the ministers in a corner and made a big plate, the replica of which will be hung in the Sunday school, that blessings, like chickens, at time come home to roost. Thus worthily hanging in demure display alongside the group portraits of the long and honorable line of school superintendents, whose personal attributes are on view to keep in remembrance those who are worthily served as captains and leaders in the good work.

In this connection a word, or perhaps many, are due in recognition of this wonderful work of organization done by Rev. W. H. Young. A complete refutation to the alleged idea that the province of a clergyman is to attend to spiritual things and let the temporal lay in other hands. The pastor is able in both. Largely the conception of the Centennial is to his credit. The church has had in view for some years that the fiftieth year should be marked and in such way that there would result a positive big and resonant thump. The thump has arrived. Rev. Mr. Young has the ability to suggest, outline, plan and then attract others to take hold. Follows the tradition that there is always some one in the world who can do some one thing better for you than you can do it yourself. So he threw on others responsibility, urged them to action, inspired where things lagged, pulled men out of their shells, and inveigled the women of the church to such efforts as never before attempted. And the result, even the husbands of these worthy and energetic women were surprised. But then we all knew that blood will tell, age ain't nuffin'.

The whole celebration was a matter of concern to the city, because such events form a milestone that marks civic progress. And to the church essentially vital. A freshening up of interest and an inspiration to go ahead with renewed vim and energy, and concern that the church of the next fifty years will remain vibrant with the resolution of those who wrought and accomplished.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

Annual Convention Will Be Held On Thursday and Friday of This Week.

The teachers of the city are holding their annual convention on Thursday and Friday of this week.

The Thursday evening session, which is free and open to the public, bids fair to be of unusual interest. The teachers have secured as speaker for the occasion, Rabbi B. R. Brickner, M.A., B.Sc., Ph.D., D.D., of Toronto.

Rabbi Brickner is an eloquent and scholarly speaker and will have a message well worth hearing.

In addition to the address, Mr. R. A. Brown, of the city, will render two solos.

The evening meeting will be held in the Assembly Room of the Collegiate Institute, and will open at 8 p.m.

LONG DISTANCE CALL.

Peterboro Man Talks To a Relative in Los Angeles.

A resident of the city, who had relatives visiting at their home from Los Angeles, and who had returned a month ago, was surprised last night on receiving a 'phone call over the long distance telephone line from Los Angeles. The conversation was very satisfactorily carried on between the two parties. It is just possible that this is one of the very few long distance calls from or to Peterborough from such a distance, and it denotes the remarkable strides that have been made in telephone service in recent years.

It is just as hard for a rich man to go to heaven as it is for ao poor man to stay on earth.

MANAGERS AND UMPIRES OF CITY LEAGUE TO DECIDE BEST PLAYER

Ballots Will Be Distributed to Determine Winner of the Spaulding Medal.

ANNUAL MEETING

Entrance Fees Retained as Nest Egg for Next Season.

At a meeting of the City League Baseball Association held last evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, there was a fair representation of teams that took part in the League games during the past season. It was decided by the members present that the fees paid into the League last spring would not be returned to the clubs, but would be left with the League, so as to give the Executive something to work on next spring when the playing season starts.

The question of selecting the best all-round player in the City League during the past season was discussed. A medal for the best player in the city has been donated by the A. G. Spalding Sporting Goods Company, Toronto, and whom to give this medal to the Executive have not yet decided. So as to be fair to every player who took part in League games this season, it was finally decided, after much discussion, that the secretary, Mr. Don. Loucks, be authorized to send out a ballot to each manager of the different teams and to each umpire who umpired any of the games during the season. The ballots are to be marked with the player's name which they think was the most popular or most useful to his team and then returned to the secretary, Mr. Loucks. The ballots will then be counted in the presence of the president, Mr. Jack Sullivan, and the winner will be presented with the medal at some appropriate time.

Presentation of Cups.

Providing that the City Council gives a banquet to Mr. LeBarr's champion Lakeview team, the captain and manager of each team winning its local series will be supplied with tickets for the banquet. It is also the wish of the League that the medals and trophies won in the different series be presented to the manager of each team at the banquet.

Owing to the fact that Peterboro is the only city in the East, outside of Toronto, that is represented in all the series of the O.B.A.A. and that the only representative for the East is situated in Ottawa, the League thought that they should have a representative for this city and district on the O.B.A.A. Executive. A meeting is to be held in the spring and a representative for this city will be elected, and the League believe that they will be able to find a place for him on the O.B.A.A. Executive.

The secretary's report was read and it showed a balance of $79 left over after all expenses were paid. Mr. Loucks said that at one time it looked as if the League was going in the hole, but that the proceeds from the last juvenile game between the Maple Leafs and the Curlers, which amounted to about $60, put them on their feet and carried them through the season.

Election of Officers.

It was moved by Mr. L. LeBarr that the same officers who held offices this season be carried over next year without any change. Mr. Sullivan, president, said that he found it a great pleasure to be connected with the League, but that he did not think that he filled the job during the past season as well as it should have been filled. He said that he would be willing to act on the Executive next year and help to boost the League, but that he would not be able to fill the presidency, as he would be out of the city for two months next summer.

Mr. Munro, vice - president, thought that the job was too big for one man to look after, and he suggested that the League have two vice-presidents who would be interested in the advancement of ball players in this city, and who would also have plenty of time to spend with the boys.

It is the belief of President Sullivan that if some money can be secured during now and next spring and have a good executive next year, Peterboro should have one of its biggest baseball seasons.

RUGBY STANDINGS.

Saturday's senior Rugby results rather changed the complexion of things in several unions. And a number of teams were added to those already in the discard class.

The three senior standings now are:

INTERPROVINCIAL.

Teams.	Won	Lost	For	Agst.
Hamilton	4	1	46	23

meet Jack Bernstein of Yonkers for the third time. The winner of this bout will be matched with the victor in the Sid Terris-Luis Vicentini fight arranged for November 28.

The ultimate winner of the informal tournament will emerge as the logical challenger to Leonard, and, in the opinion of many critics here, will probably be the next champion.

Vicentini is the hitter, Terris the flash, Mandell, the best rounded fighter and Bernstein the veteran of the challengers. Mandell and Terris are favored to meet in the final.

Among the flyweights, with Champion Pancho Villa forced into semi-retirement by an edict of the State Athletic Commission, Al. Brown, a wiery Panamaein, will make his downtown debut in New York next week against Tommy Milton. The two lads are regarded as the best of the flyweight aspirants. Brown is a hitter, and if brought along slowly, looks, to the majority of sport writers here, the potential champion. He will probably be matched with Frankie Genaro if he defeats Milton.

The third cheat, yet vague, is to Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, now in New York fighting the footlights. Sully Montgomery, former centre college football player, will meet Quintin Romero, Chilean slugger, in the main bout of a heavyweight tournament at the Garden Wednesday evening. Pat Lester and Tony Fuente, coast sensations, will be brought along later to meet the winners of the tournament. The much-discussed match between Romero and Luis Firpo may become a possibility before January 1, if Romero survives his tests up to that time, and assuming that Firpo defeats Charlie Weinert in their Newark battle November 12.

Harry Wills, crown prince of the heavyweight realm, is due back in town this week after a long vacation following his victory over Firpo.

FINDS ABSCONDING CASHIER RECEIVED ONLY $1,750 A YEAR

Judicial Probe Reveals Chief Defect Is Lack of Proper Auditing.

HAMILTON, November 4.—Holding that the whole system of engaging and paying clerks in the City Hall was wrong, and recommending the engagement at once of a thoroughly qualified auditor to look after Hamilton's finances, Judge Gauld yesterday gave out his finding as a result of the judicial probe which he conducted her into the City Hall scandal.

He pointed out that Harold S. Forbes, the absconding assistant cashier, had been receiving only $1,750 and Ernest King and Thomas Fisher only $1,500 a year. This, he thought, was putting temptation in the way of men who are handling cash.

The whole system of engaging clerks, he found, had been along lines of influence, political or otherwise, while the chief defect, he found, was the lack of proper auditing.

In regard to charges of Alderman Charles Aitchison that the probe was a whitewashing, he characterised this as the statement of a man seeking re-election and thought it more in the province of a psychiatric than a judiciary to deal with.

CROWNS OF PADDED ARENA THREATENED

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—(Canadian Press).—The heads of inactive wearers of pugilistic crowns will lie uneasy this week as strong rivals peer into the throne rooms on their way to battle for the right to challenge.

The most seriously threatened will be Benny Leonard, ruler of the lightweights for many years. On Friday night at Madison Square Garden, Sammy Mandell, of Rockford, will

SOCCER NOTES.

The annual general meeting of the P. and D. F. A. was held last evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, Mr. William Cooke presiding, and was well supported by a good attendance of directors and representatives of the teams.

Saturday's game will be the G.W.V.A. versus the Thistles at Nicholls Oval in a league game. Mr. Jack Clark will handle the whistle. Kick-off at 2.45 prompt.

On Monday (the holiday) the Quaker Oats will supply the opposition to the Thistles in a league game. The well-known referee, Mr. Alex. McKinley, will officiate as the referee at King Edward Park, and time of the kick-off is scheduled for 2 o'clock prompt.

During the season Richmond, Thistles has scored thirty-two goals and has participated in every game this year for his team. Without showing any partiality, he is a good sport. Mitchell come snext with 18 goals to his credit. Richmond got 21 goals in league, 2 in Gordon Cup, 4 Phelan Cup, 3 Peck Cup and 2 in Plenty Cup. Burrows of the Vets still head their list, while Wyllie got 7 for Woollens and 3 for Quakers.

The President intimated to the Executive that he was approached by Mr. Pulley, captain of the Massey, for a charity game, to be played against a senior team, but his request was held in abeyance.

John Marshall, the well-known Scottish full back, who is on Middlesbrough's open-to-transfer list, left Scotland for America. He sailed in the s.s. Cameronia from Glasgow, and is bound for New York to join the Brooklyn F. C., with which club he has made an engagement.

It was unanimous agreed by the Senior Executive that H. Gardiner, a registered player for the Quaker Oats, be suspended SINE DIE for playing in outlaw football. He took part in the game against the Masseys when the C.P.C. met their first defeat and referred to as the London school boy player. It is also stated that he played a trial game for Clapton Orient. The same player led the attack for the C.P.C. against the Masseys in the Turner final.

The members of the board were pleased to learn that the amicable referee, Mr. Alex. Mitchell, was progressing favorably after undergoing serious operations, and expressed the wish that he have a quick recover, to good health; also a letter be sent accordingly.

The Quaker Oats have been very unfortunate in losing the services of their stalwart half-back, Murdoch McLellan, who sustained a severe injury to his hand at his employment a few weeks ago, but he is progressing favorably, according to the hospital report.

Mr. James Sharman, who was suspended for his non-appearance after being sent off the field in a game, away early in the season, made his personal appeal to the Board of Directors to have his suspension lifted and apologized for his action to the board; also promised he would never repeat the fiasco. After a prolong consideration, he was notified that his suspension was lifted, and that his request not to go out of football suspended after 18 years playing was met unanimously.

The NUT CRACKER BY JOE WILLIAMS

Columbia and the football world mourn Haughton's death ....His countless admirers will be consoled by the knowledge that he came back far enough in his new surroundings to prove the Haughton system was something infinitely more than a book of memories and a press agent.

Dempsey tells reporters he will fight Gibbons and then retire ..... This is the rather illogical result of last summer's bout to establish a logical contender.

A logical contender is not wholly unlike a moral victory....It sounds very pretty but it buys no spares for the family flivver.

Muddy Ruel aspires to be judge but the fans think he is too good a catcher to be benched.

There is one nice thing about playing ball before a London audience .....The game never has to be stopped to remove rooters who die with excitement.

In suing Judge Landis for libel to the extent of $100,000, Mr. Dolan of the Giants proves that Nick Altrock is not the only comedian in baseball or out of it, as happens to be his case at the moment.

"No mater how much modernization," Mr. O'Goofty, "a kick in the chin will always be a kick in the chin."

Egypt is soon to see its first professional prizefight ....This is one evil, however, that can not be blamed on the shoulder shakings of the late Miss Cleopatra.

Princeton has about decided not to play Notre Dame next year..... Even a doormat gets tired being a doormat in time.

Now that Mr. Frank Tinney is in London it is to be hoped he will be able to curb his brutality and not hop one of those fragile British heavyweights.

CURE FOR EVIL

Sunshine and Fresh Air Prescribed for Bad Girls.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(Associated Press).—The English reformers' idea of making bad girls better is to give them trips to the seaside. Accordingly last year several of the detention institutions for young girls took parties of inmates to various seaside resorts, where they were given a two weeks' vacation with only the supervision of two matrons to each party of 25 girls.

Last year's outings proved so successful that nearly all similar institutions this year took up the idea and allowed their best behaved girls to have a vacation. The expenses for the trip, above what it would have cost to feed and provide for the girls at the institution, were donated by persons interested in progressive and humanizing methods in the correctional institutions of the country.

FEW CHILDREN IN VIENNA SCHOOLS

VIENNA, Nov. 4.—(Associated Press).—The havoc wrought by the war in the birth rate in Austria is brought out forcibly in figures issued by the city school authorities of Vienna, showing 100,000 fewer children inscribed in elementary schools for the autumn term this year than in 1914.

ENGLISH CRITICS 'KNOCK' BASEBALL

Cricket Has Indefinite Variety By Comparison—McGraw's Reply.

LONDON, Nov. 4.— Americans who scorn cricket as a slow and soporific sport ought to be told that the English, or at least some of them, think that baseball is monotonous. Such was the conclusion of the cricket experts of the London newspapers who reported the first of the games played between the New York Giants and the Chicago White Sox in the British capital last week.

"An inning by the dullest professional cricketer who ever dawdled through the leaden hours on an English cricket ground has infinite variety when compared with the thwackings of a baseball star," was the sober judgment of the Manchester Guardian reporter. "He has only two possible strokes; one, is the slow one with a cross bat; the other is a smothering stroke which will enable him to bolt for first base as in tip-run, while pitcher and catcher tumble over each other in rescuing the ball from the mid-wicket.

"What usually happens is that the striker slogs the ball into deep field, high in the air, whence it descends into one of the capacious gloves whose wearers are quite infallible in getting to the right place for the catch.

"There is no obviously perceptible variation in the pitching, which is all as fast and furious as may be, but, of course, there is enormous skill in it."

McGraw's Comment

LONDON, Nov. 4. — England's verdict that American baseball is too noisy and nothing but "glorified rounders" anyway, has caused hot indignation among the New York Giants and Chicago White Sox players on their European tour.

Nettled by constant criticism, John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, protests:

"I cannot understand how anyone can run down baseball on the ground that it is 'glorified rounders.' I am told none of your cricketers can throw like our boys, and as for double 'barracking' it is all good natured, though not an essential part of the game. We Americans could never sit in solemn silence all afternoon watching a game of cricket. We like to feel part of the game, and it is no worse than the way your football crowds act."

NEWS LAKEFIELD.

High Winds Over the Week End Strips Remaining Leaves.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 4.—The high winds of Saturday and Sunday have stripped the last remaining leaves from the trees and the work of raking and burning will soon be completed for another year. In this dry season many housekeepers will view this condition with apparent relief as the continuation of small boy matches and dry leaves is not pleasant to contemplate although unfortunately it is not uncommon.

Hallowe'en passed off quietly in the village, a few mild jokes were played but in the main it was quiet. In the early evening throngs of children in masquerade attire paraded the streets but they did not linger too long. Several Hallowe'en parties were held and the fun ran high Since the advent of the concrete side walks the old prank of lifting side walks has not been so common, but a number of small sections of board walk on private property were lifted and given a ramble.

JACK JOHNSON BEST.

Maker of Champions Hands Palm to the Negro.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 4. — Jimmy Dunn, who made champions of Johnny Kilbane and Bryan Downey, thinks Jack Johnson, the negro, was the greatest of all heavyweight champions.

"Johnson had everything," Dunn tells you. "He was cagey and clever and fast.

"On all-round greatness I would pick him ahead of Fitzsimmons, Jeffrires and Dempsey."

Bowling

LADIES LEAGUE TO START THURSDAY NIGHT.

The Ladies Mercantile League is now complete with six teams. The teams entered are: Canadian Packing Company, Westclox, Quaker Oats, Richard Halls, Law Ladies and Examiner.

Rolling in this league will commence Thursday night and thereafter on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, from 6:15 to 7:30. Captains of the various teams will please notify management at once as to what night, if any, they would prefer to bowl and the schedule will be drawn as near in accordance as possible.

ROLLING FOR TURKEY

A lot of bowlers have been rolling in the turkey competition being held at Solomon's Alleys and some good scores are already in. A. Pratt has 653 for three games and is high so far. The best score for three consecutive games takes the fowl.

Rolling for the three pound box of chocolates being offered to the lady bowler with the highest score for three consecutive games, Miss Lynch is high with 465.

BANKERS' LEAGUE.

In the Bankers' League yesterday Royals won three straight from the Unions. McDonald rolled high three with 467, and also had high single with 216.

EXAMINER LADIES' LEAGUE.

In competition last night at Solomon's Alleys, in the Examiner Ladies' League, the Swastikas took three out of four games. Some dandy scores were rolled by the young ladies, and each week's rolling shows a great improvement in their ability at the game. After last night's showing the Examiner ladies should make a good showing in the Ladies' Mercantile League.

Miss G. Heath had the high four games of the evening, when she rolled a nice score of 532. Miss W. Cadd was next with a nice score of 424, while Miss M. Collins had 393. Miss Heath had the high single of 161. The rest of the scores were all good and they can be found below:

Many Factories Closed—Price Paid Saturday Was 17 1-2c.

MADOC, Nov. 3.—Seventeen and a half cents was the highest bid on Madoc Cheese Board Saturday. It is thought the price will be lower for the following week.

The season for making cheese is almost over—in fact many of the factories close on October 31st, or somewhere around the middle of November. The season has been better than that of last year as regards the price of cheese, and also the quantity of milk sent in to the local cheese factories. Why would it not be a good idea to convert our cheese factories into butter factories for the winter months? It would save the goodly housewife and packing of butter as all this many hours of toil in the making could be done by the butter-maker, and in my estimation it would pay. Farmers took advantage of the wonderful weather and got as much plowing done as possible. The season has been the most favorable for years, there being very little rain and nothing to prevent lots of work being accomplished— in fact in some places it is too dry and the land breaks up in large pieces.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: Can you tell me through your valuable paper if there is any closed season for killing knots? I recently built a garage, and I am much interested in an answer to the above, for I fear they will be showing the 1930 models before I get my present car housed, if I wait to kill the knots in the lumber supplied. Now, when I say this, it means something, for I served my apprenticeship "and then some," with the well known firm of J. J. Turner & Sons, Ltd., and am without doubt one of the smartest painters since Michael Angelo, in fact the only reason he got the glory was because I wasn't of his day. Moreover, there were no knots to kill in his day. In fact there were very few even untied. Now, I am not boasting, for my name is an old one when it comes to painting.

In conclusion, please answer my query promptly, as I don't wish to break any of the game laws.

As a garage painter with such a knotty proposition on my hands, you may rest assured I will not break any of the speed laws. But will admit if my circumstances would permit I would have no hesitation in smashing the O.T.A. to smithreens.

Now, I know why the market for metal garages.

ONE FOR BETTER LUMBER.

There is no closed season for killing knots.

They may be disposed of at any time but you had better be careful as to how you go about it, inasmuch as the Humane Society insists that knots be killed as carefully as possible.

Apparently you have built your garage of the kind of lumber the small boys like to see used in the construction of a fence around the baseball park, with a knot hole for every member of the gang.

An expert suggests that the simplest and the best way for killing knots is to gently remove the rest of the board away from the knot, leaving the latter to carry on alone, the result being the speedy end of the knot from loneliness.

That method may not commend itself to you, and the only advice we can give is that there are no game laws to worry about, but look out for the Humane Society and the Lord's Day Alliance.—Editor.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir,—I noticed in the Monday paper, about the drowning that took place at the Nassau Dam, between the 2 bridges, on Sunday after noon about or between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m. whoever made the report made it wrong. I was there myself and helped to pull Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett out of the water and I was lowered down to the punt by a rope and I put the rope around the waist of Bunny Thompson and pulled Thompson out of the water with one hand on the punt and the other party pulled him up on the land. There was no police there at the time I was there. Mr. Walter Nugent was the first man on the scene and in a short time there was 3 or 4 more persons there. The party was in the water about 15 or 20 minutes before I got there. The punt was turned right upside down. We got Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett out of the water. They were taken to a near by house. Dr. Amys was there in a short time and Dr. Morgan after Dr. Young was called, but had not arrived while we was there. Part of the Fire Department was there, but it was too late to save Thompson's life. Who ever the one is that makes the report had better make reports right or not at all.

INMATE OF HOME ATTACKED KEEPER

Benjamin Smith Badly Injured When Inmate Attacked Him With a Razor.

CHATHAM, Ont., Nov. 4.—(Canadian Press). — Benjamin Smith, superintendent of the Home for the Friendless, is suffering from injuries sustained in an alleged vicious attack made upon him Sunday by "Captain" Thomas Walls, an aged inmate of that institution. Waylaying the keeper of the house in a corridor as he carried a large tray loaded with dishes, Walls threw paste into Smith's face, temporarily blinding him. The aged man is alleged to have slapped at the keeper with an old razor, inflicting deep wounds in the cheek, lip and chin. Walls mixed the paste in his own room. A sample is to be analyzed for the purpose of determining whether it contained any dangerous properties. Police have the weapon Walls is alleged to have used. It is an old razor blade, tied with string to a short piece of wood. "If I get out I'll fix him," Walls shouted on being relieved from the police court cells yesterday when remanded to jail for medical observation. A charge of assault and causing bodily harm to Smith has been preferred.

SMALL SHIPS MISSING.

Worst Storm in Years Witnessed on Lake Superior on Friday and Saturday.

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 4.—(Canadian Press).—The storm which raged on Lake Superior on Friday night and all day Saturday was one of the worst encountered in many years by mariners.

Whitefish Light, which stands 60 feet out of the water, was deluged by breaking waves, running mountains high. Steamers were forced into shelter, and their crews were glad to give up the battle against the elements, according to officers of the Huronic, which arrived this morning. Numerous small crafts operating in local waters, including tugs in pulp and fishing operations, due in port on Saturday, are not in yet, but they are presumed to be safe and are expected in at any time.

POWER ISSUES COVERED IN A HYDRO REPORT

Long Letter on Subject Received By City Council Last Evening.

METERS EXAMINED.

The Communication Was Referred to Committee of Whole Council.

At last night meeting of the City Council the following communication was received from the Hydro Electric Power Commission relating to the consumption of power at the Campbell Milling Company's plant here. The issue was raised in the City Council some time ago by Ald. J. Meyers and the appended communication covers the investigation that followed. The letter, which reads as follows, was referred to the Committee of the Whole Council:

Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.
190 University Avenue,
Toronto.
October 17th, 1924.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong,
City Clerk,
Peterboro, Ont.
C.O.S.-Peterboro'
Campbell Milling Co.

Dear Sir,—As requested by your Council, we have made an examination of all records in connection with the supply of power from January 1919 to December 1923, to the plant of the Maple Leaf Milling Co., known locally as the Campbell Milling Co.

Before presenting our conclusions, we will outline briefly the situation as presented to us.

The Campbell Milling Co. operate a flour and feed mill in Peterborough rated at from 750 to 800 bbls. per day. The motors installed in the mill have a total rating of 430 h.p. In January 1919 they received power under a flat rate contract based on monthly maximum demand. This demand was measured by periodical tests with a Bristol recording ammeter, the horse power being calculated from the ammeter reading and assumed voltage and power factor. This condition held until March 1st, 1919, when the method of billing was changed to the standard H.E.P.C. form of rate and a Westinghouse R.O. demand meter installed. This metering equipment was burned (probably by lightning) on July 31st, 1923, and from that date on a Lincoln Sangamo meter was used measuring K.V.A. on the demand element. The following tabulation shows the readings from the different meters during the period in question.

The statement has been made that it is impossible to operate a mill with the demands shown from March 1919, to December 1921. There is no criticism of the conditions during 1922, when it is admitted the flour mill was shut down for alterations and additional machinery installed, which is indicated by the increased demands in November, 1922 and since that time.

We have examined the records of the Peterborough Utilities Commission from the meter reader's cards and, except for some very small arithmetical errors which do not effect the result, everything is correct.

As to the accuracy of the meters, we find that the R. O. meter was tested and certified correct by the Dominion Government on February 8th, 1919, and re-inspected on February 24th, 1922. The fact that the meter was found correct on re-inspection gives strength to the assumption that the meter was correct in the interval between tests. A further proof of the accuracy of the meter, is that the Lincoln meter, installed after the destruction of the R.O. meter, gave readings of about the same value as the R.O. meter. The Lincoln meter was inspected and certified correct by the Dominion Government inspector on July 20, 1923. From available records we are convinced that the R.O. meter did register accurately.

As the statement was made that the mill could not be turned over with the horse power registered by the meters, and we found 1-3 H.P. per barrel to be the ordinary milling practice in power installations for milling, we asked Mr. D. A. Campbell if he could supply us with any information which would account for the apparent discrepancy. Mr. Campbell stated that the written records of the mill output cannot be located. We asked particularly if any reason could be given for the sudden decrease in demand shown between 312 H.P. in February, 1919, and 162 H.P. in March, 1919. He stated that though unable to say definitely of this time, that it was their practice to close down the flour mill production on short notice, at the Peterboro mill, as this mill is operated only when large local production is required and their mill at Port Colborne is their main plant. Mr. Campbell also pointed out that the Peterboro mill is very compact and is considered a highly efficient mill from a mechanical standpoint. The relatively compact arrangement of the mill is evident to anyone making a comparison with other local mills.

Further evidence as to the accuracy of the R.O. meter is statement by Mr. H. O. Fisk that periodical check readings were taken on the meters and these showed the meter accurate. (Unfortunately no record of the date and time of these tests were kept).

The probable causes of error in a demand meter are as follows:

1. Mechanical defect in the meter. This would have shown up at the time of Government test.

2. Defective electrical connections in the meter. This also would have shown up at the time of Government test.

3. Open circuit in the current or potential transformers supplying the meter. In this case we are informed that no switches or fuse links were used, which would make an open circuit unlikely, but owing to the destruction of the equipment by lightning, this condition cannot be checked. The check readings taken from time to time would have shown up this condition if it had existed.

The metering equipment is installed in a box on a pole on the street across the road from the mill, and it would be difficult and highly dangerous for any unauthorized person to make connections to supply the mill without the current registering on the meter. Furthermore, we do not consider that a firm of the standing of the Maple Leaf Milling Co. would permit such action.

In conclusion, we can find nothing to indicate that the meters were inaccurate and it is our considered opinion that the power supplied to the Campbell Milling Co. during the period from January, 1919, to December, 1923, was correctly measured and correctly billed.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) W. W. POPE, Secretary.

ELEVEN WERE KILLED.

Little Hope Held For Recovery of Four Survivors of Bus Crash.

HAMPTON, Va., Nov. 4.—(United Press.—Little hope was held out by the hospital officials here to-day for the recovery of the four survivors of the bus crash here, yesterday, in which eleven were killed.

Though all were alive, early physicians attending them, said their condition was desperate.

The tragedy occurred when the bus, loaded with fifteen passengers, was struck by an express train at a blind crossing. Eight were killed instantly and three died later in the hospital.

DELAY RESIGNATION.

If Investigation of Zinoviev Letter Is Delayed So Will Resignation.

LONDON, Nov. 4. — (United Press).—Delay in the investigation of the authenticity of the Zinoviev letter may mean corresponding delay in the resignation of the Labor Government. It was thought possible to-day that Premier MacDonald would postpone the resignation until to-morrow morning.

The Cabinet Committee was in session investigating the source of the subversive document which had so much to do with Labor's defeat.

If the committee finished its work the Cabinet was to meet and set a time for resigning.

SLEEP WAS STRANGER TO E. E. BRADSHAW

Toronto Man Was Near Nervous Breakdown When He Took Tanlac.

Edison E. Bradshaw, painting and decorating contractor, 159 Bleecker St., Toronto, Ontario, Canada, is another grateful beneficiary of the Tanlac treatment. In telling his experiences recently Mr. Bradshaw says:

"Before I took Tanlac I was suffering seriously from nervous prostration. I was so nervous I could seldom sleep, the slightest exertion made my heart palpitate, and my breathing difficult. Burning pains in my stomach tortured me for hours at a time, dizzy spells disturbed me, and my blood seemed out of order.

"With my second bottle of Tanlac I began to feel relief all round. With the seventh bottle my stomach is all right again, my heart action is normal, my nerves are steady, and, in fact, I feel like a brand new man."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

BETTY BALFOUR BACK AT ROYAL THURSDAY.

Britain's Queen of Happiness, Betty Balfour, will be with us again on Thursday in her newest comedy drama, "Life, Love and Happiness." Betty is so well-known for her character portrayals of "Squibs" that the mere notice of her appearance means crowded houses. "Life, Love and Happiness" is all the name implies. Andy Gump is also on the bill, which means more laughs.

"THE BASHFUL SUITOR."
Artistic Short Feature at Royal.

One of the most interesting and highly entertaining two-reel feature productions ever seen in this city was shown for the first time last night at the Royal Theatre where it will continue for an engagement of three days. It is called "The Bashful Suitor" and is the first in the series of Triart Great Master Productions based on the masterpieces of famous artists.

The original painting is flashed in at the end of the story and the audience is left with a feeling that it has been entertained, thrilled, amused, and something more — it has learned about a famous painting, a renowned artist and of the emotions and characters that inspired the masterpiece.

ILLUSTRATED SONGS AT THE ROYAL.

Last night the new Hearst song, "Forget Me Not," was sung for the first time locally by James Browne. This new number deserves the success it is getting in the larger cities, and James Browne is at his best in this kind of song, a fox trot ballad with real sentiment. It will be repeated to-night and Wednesday night.

SECOND YOUTH A CLEVER COMEDY FEATURE.

Allan Updegraff's humorous classic, "Second Youth," made into a motion picture and shown at the Royal theatre yesterday, is far funnier than it was as a book. Which is saying a great deal. Much of the success of the film is due to the fact that it has about the best cast of comedians ever assembled for one picture. This includes Walter Catlett, star of Ziegfeld's "Sally"; Herbert Corthell, featured comedian in "Topics of 1923"; Lynn Fontanne, star of "In Love with Love"; Alfred Lunt, featured in Booth Tarkington's "Clarence," and Mimi Palmeri of film fame.

The story concerns a young woman who is much put out over the fact that men can flirt with manicures, chorus girls, stenographers, saleslaadies and the like and get away with it while if a girl as much as smiles at a young man she doesn't know everybody talks about it. The young lady, accustomed to having her own way, decides to do some flirting herself so she picks out a harmless looking silk salesman to experiment on. He isn't, however, as harmless as he looks. Also, it seems, innumerable other young ladies have been attracted by him. This makes for complications and the fact that each of the girls has a sweetheart who strenuously objects to flirting on the part of sweethearts further involves matters. This condition makes for innumerable unroariously funny situations. Last night the laughter was continuous.

Alfred Lunt, as the slik salesman, proves himself a marvellous comedian, as does Walter Catlett, who strongly resembles Harold Lloyd. Mimi Palmeri, Lynn Fontanne, Margaret Dale, Jobyna Howland.

DEMPSEY-GIBBONS FIFTEEN-ROUND FIGHT AT GRAND, THURS., FRI., AND SAT.

The Dempsey-Gibbons fight pictures showing the entire bout as it occurred at Shelby, will be in Peterborough at the Grand Theatre on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week. No one can see these pictures without being convinced of the cleverness of Gibbons. He stood up to Dempsey during the entire fifteen rounds without showing any signs of weakness and retired from the bout without any evidence of physical damage.

Fight fans paid fifty dollars to see this bout at Shelby on 4th July last. Peterborough fans can see it, seated in a comfortable theatre chair, at the usual prices.

AT THE REGENT.

If you wish to get a glimpse of something unusual and something very realistic, yet quite romantic, something that reveals with a master study of detail the morbid life of the underworld, yet is the very essence of culture and refinement, see "Cornered," which opened at the Regent Theatre yesterday.

The leading role is a dual characterization, that of twin sisters. Both sisters live in different worlds, one in poverty and the other in wealth, and each does not know of the other's existence. The story begins to move when the discovery is made by the leading figures of Chinatown that a certain heiress resembles their pal, who is in reality sister to the heiress. Complications arise when the girl of Chinatown is sent to the home of the heiress, who has left the city to establish herself in the household as the heiress. Then comes the real difficulty when the girl returns. The heiress is taken for the thief and her sister pretends to be mistress of the house. There is a rousing climax with the discovery that the girls are sisters and a conclusion that cannot help pleasing the spectator.

William Beaudine, the director of this photoplay, must be given credit for having done a large share in turning out a very superior production. Marie Prevost, as the twins, is at her best in a characterization which seems strangely suited to her. The rest of the cast was also chosen with discretion, since it includes John Roche, Rockliffe Fellowes, Raymond Hatton, Wilfred Lucas and Cissy Fitzgerald.

AT THE CAPITOL.

Last evening, at an early hour, the Capitol Theatre was filled with the crowd of people who gathered to see the first evening presentation of "The White Sister", the screen production whose acclaim has cast a long shadow before it. "The White Sister" is one of those fortunate productions that everyone is eager to see, long before it arrives, and it proves one thing, at least, that true romance is still the most attractive element to the majority of theatre-goers. There are no spectacular gowns in "The White Sister", no thrilling episodes and no morbid undercurrent of sex or intrigue or danger. It is the simple love story of two people and the ending is rather sad. The big picture owes its wonderful appeal, of course, to the consummate art of Lillian Gish. Nothing that she has attempted before, not even her outstanding work in "Way Down East" and "Broken Blossoms" has been quite as artistic as her presentation of Angela Chiaramonte, the young Italian girl, who is the innocent victim of sorrowful circumstance, the dominant, gentle figure of "The White Sister". Youth, fragility and pensive sweetness are paramount in her characterization, that has none of the somewhat irritating jerkiness of action that occurs in other pictures in which the little actress starred. A patient submission to duty and right are keynotes of Angela's character, but she does not exasperate her audience, as so many determinedly virtuous women of the screen do. Whatever she does seems right, and that, again, is owing to superb acting.

"The White Sister" is outstanding in more ways than one. The clear freshness of the pictures, is remarkable, and they have an atmospheric quality seldom seen. Sunlight, almost visible, pours into the room where the young officer and his commander talk briefly, there is the drift ing cloudy sky of an ideal hunting morning over the field where the horsemen and dogs race the hare, and the colored representations of the great dragon of Vesuvius, unleashed in streams of molten lava, are immense, in the scenes depicting the eruption of the mountain, and the flood that follows it. The impression of reality in this scene is striking. An audience that never saw a volcanic eruption and never will see one can almost live the experiences of the unfortunates caught in its toils, as they watch the flood of fire and water engulfing its victims.

This quality of sympathy with the story and its actors is one of its charms. Probably everyone in the audience wanted the young soldier to win out, when he returned from cruel captivity and found his sweetheart had become a nun, but they sympathized just as much with her attitude and her instinctive clinging to what was right. Sentimental auditors will yearn for a different ending, but the beauty of the picture and its sweetness would be spoiled by any other conclusion.

Those who have never witnessed the reception of a nun into a convent have a wonderful opportunity in "The White Sister", although the ceremonial is carried out in different fashion in varying communities. The detail of this scene and the reverent atmosphere that surrounds it are a picturesque portion of an extremely picturesque screening, and show the minute attention to every element necessary to an artistic production. The scenes of Italian beauty and Italian interiors are also followed out with graphic attention to fact and the music that accompanies he picture, as played by the capable musicians of the Capitol orchestra is only another lovely adjunct that rounds out a beautiful and enthralling feature picture.

It is somewhat hard to adequately describe a picture like this. Acting, screening and atmosphere are admirable to a degree, it has a story of enchanting charm and romantic interest and a setting absolutely suited to the tale. It gives an opportunity to study the art of one of the most artistic actresses on the screen, in a presentation that lifts her to new heights, without one single jarring note in what might be described as a symphony of the silver sheet. Not to have seen "The White Sister" would be to miss one of the most appealing productions of the silent drama.

AT THE GRAND.

THE LOST TRIBE.

There are no sex problems or triangles in "The Lost Tribe," the sensational picture being shown at the Grand Opera House for the first three days of this week, but there are more genuine and honest thrills in one reel of this amazing film than in a dozen of the usual type. As seen at the Grand last night "The Lost Tribe" was a score of South Sea adventure yarns boiled down into one picture and that a photograph record of a real achievement.

"The Lost Tribe" deals with two exploring trips made to New Guinea by Captain Frank Hurley, whose life has been one of strange adventure at the ends of the earth. It shows in a most vivid series of pictures how Hurley and his associates penetrated by the aid of sea planes into the heart of the New Guinea hinterland, and there found a strange race of head-hunting cannibals, so Jewish in appearance that the theory has been advanced that this was the "Lost Tribe of Israel. No white man had ever penetrated into this country before and they regarded by the cannibals as gods from the air. The motion picture camera has caught the outstanding features of this adventure with realistic fidelity, and the result is a thrilling picture that surpasses the most thrilling efforts of the imagination of fiction writers.

The photography throughout is wonderful. A portion of the picture is taken from the air, with striking effect, especially the section showing the sea plane rushing into a tropical storm. Another part is taken beneath the surface of the sea, with the operator working in a diving tank, giving the spectator a glimpse of the wonders of the deep. There are scenes of surpassing beauty, secured in the unexplored interior of New Guinea; there are astonishing pictures of the cannibals themselves, their primitive equipment, their strange houses and temples, their peculiar boats and their picturesque dances. Everything you have ever read about in a South Sea story is here on the screen, and "The Lost Tribe" all in all merits the description, "The most sensational picture ever made."

Blase motion picture fans, who think they have seen everything the silver sheet can show them should not miss this picture at the Grand. No boy who loves adventure, no fiction lover who likes to read of strange deeds in foreign lands; no teacher of geography, no student, nobody who enjoys a real thrill, should fail to see "The Lost Tribe." Nothing like it has been shown here, and it may be a long time before there is another opportunity.

It will be screened at the Grand again to-night and to-morrow night.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

Y.W.C.A. Party Was One of the Biggest Held This Season.

One of the biggest and jolliest Hallowe'en parties of the season was held at the Young Womens' Christian Association last evening, when children, girls and women, to the number of about two hundred and fifty, gathered in the gymnasium in costumes that ranged through every variety of colorful combination. The big rooms and halls were lavishly decrated with Hallowe'en novelties and the downstairs section was converted into mysterious caves with ghosts in attendance. Mirthful games were the order of the evening, with an alphabet game and a charade, "mantel piece," conducted by Mrs. H. Wightman, Mrs. Eloise Perry, and the Misses E. MacVannel, McRae and E. Scott. Refreshments were served later. Judges of the costumes were Mesdames Jas. McDonald, D. Paterson and R. J. Devey. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. L. J. LeClair as a Baby Girl, in the Original section, the Misses Daisy Scott and Marjorie Long, as Rose Petal and Rainbow, in the prettiest costumes, and to comedy outfits; Miss Cora Mowry as a Dutch Count, Miss A. Long as a Sailor Man and Miss Gertrude Graham, as Squibbs.

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM MANIECE.

The death occurred shortly after one o'clock this morning, at St. Joseph's Hospital, of a life-long resident of Ashburnham, William Maniece, in his 72nd year.

Survivors are two brothers and one sister, T. B. Maniece, 253 Mark Street, Robert Maniece, James Street, and Mrs. A. E. Sedgewick, of Otonabee.

The funeral will take place at half-past two o'clock on Wednesday, from the residence of T. B. Maniece, 253 Mark Street, to St. Luke's Church, where funeral services will be conducted by Rev. G. J. Pousfield, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

GARRET McMURRAY.

There passed away yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock, a well-known and highly respected resident of the Township of Douro, in the person of Garret McMurray in his 59th year.

The deceased was born in Douro and resided on a farm there all his life.

There are left to mourn his loss, besides a sorrowing wife, five daughters and two sons and four brothers.

The funeral will be held to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock from St. Joseph's Church, Douro, and thence to St. Joseph's Cemetery.

JOHN ALLEN.

The death occurred this morning at 7.30 o'clock, of Jackie, second youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Allen, 629 Roger Street, at the age of 7 years. The little fellow had been ill only a few days, and his sudden death came as a shock to everyone.

Jackie attended the Immaculate Conception School, where he will be greatly missed by his little companions.

He is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Allen, two little brothers, Bernard and Oliver, and one sister, Eileen, who have sincere sympathy in their sad bereavement.

The funeral will take place from the family residence on Thursday morning at 8.45 o'clock, and proceed to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

reduced by reason of the construction of the Hunter Street bridge. Debris was piled in front of his store until it looked as though the owner would never get out. He fixed his loss at approximately one thousand dollars but was willing to consider a settlement of three hundred dollars.

In the case of Mrs. Robson, Mr. Gordon outlined the circumstances and later in the evening the Council confirmed its original settlement of $150.

Ald. W. Stocker and Ald J. Crowe will represent the city at the unveiling of a war memorial to be held in Oshawa on Monday next.

PETERBOROUGH MALE VOICE CHOIR PRACTICE.

The attention of the members of the Peterborough Male Voice Choir is called to the change of place for rehearsal to-night. The choristers will meet as usual in the Greene Music Studio, instead of at Mr. M. E. Chenhall's residence, as originally arranged.

Last week's rehearsal was a fine effort. The choir ranks are being filled with voices of some calibre this season, and everything points to a rousing season's work musically. The director and executive would like to have all members and intending members at every practice from now on, since this will mean just a little less drilling as would otherwise be the case with members coming in later in the season. Please be on time —8 o'clock to-night.

The executive is asked to meet at the same place at 7 o'clock.

If there is a best way to live, the Young Women's Christian Association covets the best way for every girl and woman. Its aim, therefore, is to develop the highest conception of Christian womanhood. It believes that the young woman who is a good citizen is one who is strong physically, who is intelligent, who enjoys good times and has friends, who is spiritually minded, and who gives expressions in service to the purposes of her life. Its programme is built upon the principle that a girl is worth most to herself and to her community when all sides of her nature are being developed."

3,000 CROWS CHASE EAGLE

Big Bird Takes Refuge in French Chateau Where Keepers Kill it

NEVERS, France, Nov. 4.— The strange sight of a huge eagle being pursued by a flock of crows estimated at some 3,000 caused the towns folk to crane their necks here yesterday.

The eagle eventually sought refuge at the Chateau de Cussy, where keepers immediately shot it; whereupon the flock of crows disbanded and disappeared. The eagle was found to measure more than eight feet across the wings.

OPIUM.

To curb the drug traffic, an international narcotic conference will be held in Switzerland in late November. Our country will send delegates It is understood that they will say, in effect: "The only way to curb the drug traffic is to curb the growing of plants that produce narcotic substances."

Opium farming, for instance, is quite common in the orient. To stop it, is easier said than done.

TRAFFIC LAWS ARE DISCUSSED

Ald. Crowe Brought In By-law and Resolution at Last Night's Council Meeting.

A by-law creating a number of stop streets was introduced by Ald. J. Crowe at last night's meeting of the City Council. The purpose of the by-law was to compel motor traffic to stop before crossing certain streets where accidents were liable to occur as a result of the heavy traffic. The by-law, said Ald. Crowe, was designed to prevent accidents and make conditions safer for pedestrians. A deputation representing the Peterboro branch of the Ontario Motor League occupied seats in the gallery, and Mr. R. S. Cotton, chairman, said that such a by-law was hardly necessary in Peterboro. He pointed out the difficulty Hamilton had in enforcing such a measure, which meant, among other things, marking all the streets and educating motor drivers on the use of the by-law.

Mr. R. H. Turner of the Motor League thought the by-law was a little premature. In larger cities motor drivers were called to task by the police for going slow over the crossings and holding up traffic. To have a by-law compelling motorists to stop would slow up the traffic. Mr. Turner thought it would be better to have some of the present laws enforced rather than bring in new ones. "Did you consult with the Chief about the by-law?" enquired Mr. Turner of Ald. Crowe.

"No, I did not. I do not recognize the Chief's authority, and we are not on speaking terms," replied Ald. Crowe.

City Solicitor Wearing thought it was better not to have a law than to have one and not enforce it. He referred to one motor vehicle law that is seldom enforced. "Councils and legislatures are too prone to pass laws that are not enforced," said Mr. Wearing.

The by-law was lost on a vote of the Council.

"I have done my duty as I see and I am satisfied," said Ald. Crowe.

A resolution compelling all vehicles to carry a light in the city limits was also introduced by Ald. Crowe and met a similar fate. It was approved by the Council, but the majority of the Aldermen were of the opinion that such legislation should emanate from the Ontario Legislature and be made Provincewide.

ALCOHOL

You could run your auto with alcohol instead of gasoline. But alcohol costs an average of 75 cents a gallon. Obviously, 75 cents is the top-not price beyond which "gas" cannot rise, since motorists would turn to alcohol.

Gradually we are building up an intricate system of checks and balances. Substitutes in time may hold the cost of living within bounds.

BRASS BUYS BANKRUPT HICKEY STOCK! WATCH TO-MORROW'S PAPER

TRESPASSERS FRIGHTENED APPEAL TO ARMED GAMEKEEPER ANSWERED BY HIS "I DON'T CARE A DAMN FOR THE LAW," AND HIS SHOTGUN'S ECHOES

Edward Rowe, One of the Principal Witnesses in the Cobourg Murder Trial, Graphically Pictures the Scene that Preceded the Shooting of Himself and His Companion.

WERE CAUGHT FISHING ON THE CROSSEN PRESERVE IN NORTHUMBERLAND COUNTY

Crossen Threatened to Shoot and Quickly Carried Out His Intentions—Said He Had Simply Carried Out His Orders.

POSTMORTEM STATEMENT ADMITTED

Bryon McCrodan, Grievously Wounded, Crawled Quarter of a Mile After Crossen Shot Him.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, November 5. —

"Hello, boys how's the fishing?"

McCrodan: "I don't know; we've just got here."

"You've been coming here too often."

"I was never here before."

"You're a d——n liar. You're just the two boys I want. I want you to come out and lay down your fish poles and give me your names."

Then as Rowe approached, Crossen shouted:

"Keep back, keep back. D——n you, I'll shoot you."

McCrodan: "Don't shoot; you mustn't shoot; it isn't necessary to shoot. You have no right to take the law into your own hands."

Crossen: "I don't care a d——n for the law."

Such was the dialogue that preceded the shooting of Edwin Rowe, on the last word of which William John Crossen pulled the trigger of his 12-gauge shot gun, according to the evidence given yesterday by Rowe.

Crossen was arraigned on two charges, and was being heard on the murder charge.

The proceedings are going forward in the County Court here, presided over by the Hon. Mr. Justice Wright and with a brilliant array of counsel on both sides.

Rowe, who said he was a Justice of the Peace, but was trespassing at the time of the shooting affray, was the big witness at the morning session.

R. H. Greer, K.C., of Toronto, cross-examining, attacked the witness' morals that permit him counsel said to "steal another man's fish and double-cross his friend to do it."

Many Girls Present.

When Court opened yesterday morning the corridor could scarcely hold the crowd that had gathered Young girls were noticeable in the audience and a good proportion of the remainder were elderly women.

His Honour Judge Ward, late of the County Court of Northumberland and Durham, sat on the bench with His Lordship, by invitation.

Fine Remitted.

Delbert Wilton, who was fined yesterday for absence from jury service ,appeared this morning. Representations having been made to His Lordship in extenuation, the fine was remitted and Wilton was ordered to remain in touch with the Court so long as it lasts.

Edwin Rowe's Evidence.

Edwin H. Rowe, farmer, who lives a mile west of Cobourg and is 63 years of age, said he had known McCrodan some years and was with him on 18th May last. They were together that morning, McCrodan having stayed with Rowe all night. They got up at 3 o'clock and got ready to go on a fishing trip. They were going to Mr. Crossen's preserve.

"McCrodan had his car and we went in it to a place a quarter of a mile past the pond, then came back. McCrodan wanted to go to the large pond on the west side of the road, and I didn't know how to get there. We didn't know whether we could get there without being seen. McCrodan looked and decided to go to the smaller pond."

They let down a bar in a fence on the east sid eof the road and went across until they found a place where they could get under the fence into the preserve. About 4.15 they were looking for the pond. It was just breaking daylight.

Rowe went near the raceway and McCrodan went to the west side of the pond, the side nearest the road. He returned after a while and came down past some trees on the east side.

Crossen (the accused) came out and said: "Hello, boys, how's the fishing?" and the following conversation took place:

Crossen. "You've been coming here too often."

McCrodan: "I was never here before."

Crossen: "You're a d——n liar. You're just the two boys I want. I want you to come out and lay down your fish poles, and give me your names."

Rowe took his rod apart and came out where Crossen was standing with McCrodan. He was acquainted with Crossen, he said, and could see him 25 feet away before he heard McCrodan. Before Rowe got on the bank, Crossen put up the gun and shouted: "Keep back, keep back. D——n you, I'll shoot you."

Rowe continued to climb up on the bank and walked to the north across the dam and had just got two steps past a little blue spruce tree when Crossen fired from a distance of 15 feet. Rowe was shot in the back of the right leg.

McCrodan was talking to Crossen at the time. When Crossen raised the gun, McCrodan said: "Don't shoot; you mustn't shoot; it isn't necessary to shoot."

He told Crossen he had no right to take the law in his own hands, and all the while Crossen continued to swear.

"I don't care a d——n for the law," Crossen declared as he lowered the gun from Rowe's head to his feet and pulled the trigger.

He paid no attention to McCrodan until McCrodan said he had no right to take the law into his own hands.

"After he shot me," Rowe said, "I kept walking slowly. He shouted: "Stand, d——n you, or I'll give you another one.' I had come closer to him in order to get around the spruce tree."

"You've Shot Me."

"Crossen went back towards McCrodan while I walked to a clump of trees and got behind them and kept under cover as far as the main road."

There had been no more shooting, so Rowe went back to look for McCrodan. He heard the shot, and heard McCrodan call out, "You've shot me."

Crossen was talking loud to McCrodan after the shot. Rowe went to the car, he said, put his fish-rod in its case, looked at his wound, and went south on the road to look for McCrodan. He saw a woman and child go through the gate toward the fish pond. He again went through the fence and came to a house, and later to the pond on the west side of the road. He went through the village of Baltimore and sat down by the roadside until Dr. Armstrong came in a car with McCrodan and brought the wounded men to Cobourg hospital.

Refused to Give Name.

In cross-examination by Mr. Greer, the witness said he had been in the preserve about two weeks before with a man who was not the deceased.

Mr. Greer pressed for the name of the person who accompanied him,

MORE CHILDREN ATTEND SCHOOL

Increase of 8 1-2 Per Cent. Between Ages of 3 and 19 According to Census.

TEN YEARS' GROWTH.

OTTAWA, Nov. 5.— (Canadian Press.)—Eight and a half per cent. more children between the ages of five and 19 years attended school in 1921 than in 1911, according to a census bulletin just issued. In 1901, 52.13 per cent. of the school population attended school for some period; in 1911 there was a slight improvement, the percentage rising to 52.88; while according to the 1921 census the attendance was 61.32 per cent. or 2,763,728 children.

Of the total school attendance 88.5 were Canadian born, 5.6 per cent. were British born, and 5.9 per cent. were foreign born. Of the Canadian born 62.93 per cent. attended school for some period in the year.

Eighty-nine per cent. of the 1,508,846 children between the ages of seven and fourteen in the nine provinces attended school for some period of the year and 80.25 p.c. were at school seven to nine months in the school year. New Brunswick Quebec, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island in order named showed the largest proportion of the school age as not having attended school.

DESPONDENT FARM WOMAN A SUICIDE

Worried By Illness She Shot Herself With Rifle.

FORT WILLIAM, Nov. 5.—Mrs. W. A. Grandland, aged 33, living on a farm two miles north of Kaministique, shot herself with a .303 rifle Monday evening at six o'clock. She was alone on the farm at the time. It is said by neighbors that she was despondent and worried and was suffering from tuberculosis. She has been in Canada fifteen years and on her farm, two. Dr. R. M. Boyd, coroner, left yesterday morning for the scene of the tragedy.

DOCKERS STRIKE.

Stevedores at Australian Ports Object to Overtime.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 5. —(Canadian Press Cable Via Reuter's.)—Stevedores and dock laborers at all the Australian ports with the exception of the port of Victoria are now taking part in a strike against being required to work overtime in loading and discharging vessels. It is believed that the crews of the vessels who are members of the Seamen's Union may become involved.

The port of Newcastle is the most seriously affected, the work of moving cargoes being practically at a standstill.

HUGHES JEWELS ARE RECOVERED

Diamonds and Pearls Stolen in Lindsay Found Under Floor of Toronto House.

VALUED AT $3,000

TORONTO, Nov. 5.—Beneath the floor of a bathroom, pinned to the wall in a leather jewel pouch in a rooming house on King street west, Toronto, the police Tuesday recovered $3,000 worth of diamond and pearl jewelry belonging to Lady Hughes, widow of the late Lieut.-General Sir Sam Hughes, war-time Minister of Militia, whose home was looted in Lindsay on September 27.

The jewelry was located by Chief of Police William G. Umphrey of Lindsay, with the assistance of Detective-Sergeants Frank Wickett and Robert Greenlee of headquarters staff. Most of the jewelry taken from Lady Hughes' home was recovered with the exception of her engagement ring, which is believed to be the only article missing.

The finding of the stolen jewelry followed the arrest of four Lindsay men, two of them father and son, by Chief of Police Umphrey, with the co-operation of Inspector Hammond of the Provincial police, and photographs from the Record Bureau at police headquarters here. All were charged with theft.

Ten days ago the police recovered Sir Sam's army revolver. The arrest was due to a man reporting to have worn a $900 diamond studded wristwatch belonging to Lady Hughes.

The list of the jewelry recovered is as follows: Platinum wrist watch with diamond settings; two pendants, emerald brooches, amethyst and pearl pendant, pearl brooch, gold wrist watch, diamond stick pin, several pearl and diamond earrings, gold ring set with five pearls, two pearl and diamond necklaces, white gold bracelet, perfect pearl lavalier, with an unusually fine setting of stones and pearls, and a couple of jewelry cases.

These articles were all packed tightly in little white tobacco pouches inside the leather jewel bag.

Checkley Surrenders.

LINDSAY, Nov. 4.—The local police were handed a real surprise package last night when William J. Checkley, for whom the authorities had been looking, arrived in town on the C.N.R. flyer and gave himself up to Constable Reeves. Checkley, according to his own statement, has been in several places in the Province since his departure from Lindsay, and had returned in order to assist his son out of his trouble.

According to the father's statement, his son, after committing the theft, had shown him the loot and then proceeded to hide it. He (the father) afterwards went to the hiding place and secured the stolen goods in order to protect his son, who afterwards produced a gun and accused his father of double-crossing him. The stolen goods were taken to Toronto, where he gave a man a dollar to register them and forward them to Lady Hughes. He came to Lindsay, he states, in the belief that Lady Hughes had received the goods.

Constable Reeves visited Chief Umphrey's home at 2 o'clock this morning, and when the latter came to the police station Checkley repeated his story. He offered to return to Toronto, shackled if necessary, and bring the Chief to the place where he had stored the goods.

Chief Umphrey interrogated Checkley relative to the location of the place referred to and left for Toronto this morning in order to investigate.

DEATH TOLL OF PLAGUE IN LOS ANGELES NOW 25

EPIDEMIC HALTED.

Teacher Crosses Health Department's Dead Line to Visit "Her Children."

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 5.—(Canadian Press).—Prompt control of the epidemic of pneumonic plague which has claimed 25 lives in the Mexican colony here since October 19, was predicted last night by Dr. W. Dickie, secretary of the board of health and director of the Anti-Plague Committee. No deaths were reported Tuesday and but one new case was admitted to the General Hospital.

"There is no reason for public alarm," Dr. Dickie said.

Dr. Dickie's statement said: "The State Board of Health is in charge of the anti-plague campaign and is being assisted by the United States public health service and by the health departments of the city and county of Los Angeles."

To-day, those in charge announced, twenty nurses, with a complement of physicians, will be sent into the infected districts to make a house-to-house inspection twice daily.

At the same time a vigorous rat extermination campaign will be put under way with a crew of 25 operators, under the supervision of the physicians' committee, Dr. Dickie announced.

Teacher's Devotion.

Nora Sterry, principal of the Macy Street School in that portion of the Mexican district here under strict quarantine for pneumonic plague, yesterday entered the district to give a message of cheer and hope to the now isolated people among whom she has labored for more than 12 years.

She bore the reports of state, county and city medical officers fighting the disease that the march of the malady seems to have been halted and no new deaths and no new cases have been reported since the total mortality from the epidemic was brought to 25 early Monday evening.

Miss Sterry, a middle-aged woman with years of school teaching behind her, besought Mayor G. E. Oryer Monday to permit her to cross the health department deadline and look after "her children."

PILGRIMS ALL HEAD FOR CITY OF ROME

Already Announcements of 65 Pilgrimages to Rome in 1925.

ROME, Nov. 5.—The organizing committee for the Holy Year has already received announcements of 65 pilgrimages to Rome during 1925.

One pilgrimage from Argentina is due to arrive Christmas Eve, the day before the Hoy Year opens. A thousand English pilgrims are coming in the following May. The Maltese pilgrimmage will arrive in August. The International Association of Catholic Youth is sending representatives in September and other pilgrims are coming to Rome from Mexico, Quebec, Montreal, Minnestoa, Michigan and the Philippines at dates yet to be fixed.

The largest number of pilgrims yet announced is from Germany, from which country a train of 1,000 pilgrims is being organized every ten days. Six hundred Chinese are expected in January. Chilean pilgrims are arriving in February, and a body of French widows in April. Other pilgrimages are being aranged from Palestine, Syria and Egypt.

C.N.R. EARNINGS.

COOLIDGE WAS ELECTED BY A GOOD MAJORITY

Huge Vote Rolled Up, With Returns Still Incomplete.

SMITH RE-ELECTED.

Captures Governorship of New York Three Times in Succession.

NEW YORK, November 5 (Canadian Press). .... With the returns from many states still incomplete President Coolidge was elected over his two opponents by a rolling tide of ballots mounting up toward the Harding landslide of 190.

The bugaboo of throwing the presidential election into Congress was chased away by the rapidity with which large blocks of electoral votes either fell into the Coolidge column or gave the seemingly unmistakable evidence of going there as the returns continued to come in.

John W. Davis succeeded in capturing certainly only the states generally reckoned as irrevocably Democratic. Even at that, he lost Kentucky, on the face of the incomplete returns, although he had carried it against Harding in 1920.

Same returns indicated that he had brought back into the Democratic folds two of the states taken away by Harding in Oklahoma and Tennessee.

Senator La Follette, running on a platform holding the popular vote by about four millions, which approximates Roosevelt's total when he led the third party movement in 1912, was assured of the electoral vote of only one state, his own Wisconsin, as against Roosevelt's 88 electoral votes in 1912 enough to defeat his republican opponent.

Democratic adherents, however, reduced the Coolidge majority to about 2,000,000 as against the 7,000,000 by which he defeated Davis, and estimated that eight million votes, as against nine million for Cox.

Many voters trooped to the polling booths and dropped their ballots yesterday than ever before in the history of the United States.

It was estimated that Coolidge polled 18,000,000 popular votes to Davis' 8,000,000 and La Follette's 4,000,000. Davis was estimated to have eight million votes, as against nine million for Cox.

The States favoring Davis are: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming. The votes of these States in the electoral college total 365.

The States favoring Davis are: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia, with voting strength of 136.

Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota and Utah, with a total vote of 30.

Overwhelming Vote.

In the State of Ontario carried by Coolidge his majority over both of his opponents was overwhelming. In New York State where the Republican National ticket made clean sweep both in the metropolis and upstate, the plurality over Davis was more than 500,000. In New England States Mr. Coolidge's one-time neighbors, piled up a lead for him which will be more than ten to one. In Democratic States the majorities likewise were tremendous and out on the Pacific coast, the tale of the ballots was almost the same. Returns from California indicate the Republican margin there will be close to 200,000. The heavy tide of this roaring tide of Coolidge strength pulled down to defeat a number of Democratic State tickets and Democratic members of Congress who had been confident of election, but in New York Governor Alfred E. Smith withstood the handican of a sweep for the Republican national ticket and tested his Republican opponent for re-election, Theodore Roose-

Trespassers Frightened

but His Lordship objected, saying, "You may bring in the whole neighbourhood."

A few minutes later, when again pressed by Mr. Greer, Rowe said he did not know how many fish he caught on the first occasion.

"Do you mean to say that you went fishing and don't know how many fish you caught?"

"If you are an old fisherman yourself," Rowe said, "you should have a heart on me now."

Justice of Peace.

The witness admitted that he was made a Justice of the Peace about 25 years ago; so long ago that he had forgotten all about it. He had never acted in the capacity.

"Is it the same being a J.P. as a Mason?" he asked. "Once a J.P. always a J.P."

Mr. Greer: "Then it is right to suppose that the reason you kept out of sight and did not speak was your desire not to be recognised?"

"I didn't want to be recognised."

Rowe said he was approaching Crossen and had his fishing pole, taken apart, in his left hand.

McCrodan came down in May from Toronto and brought his rod with him, but Rowe did not know why he brought the rod.

They were going to Gore's Landing on May 24th to fish, he said.

"What were you going to fish for there at that time?" asked Mr. Greer. "I want to get a line on your Justice of the Peace fishing activities."

"We could catch mud cats."

"And if a bass had committed suicide before the 15th of June it would have been alright?"

"No; it was against the law to catch bass at that time."

Stick with It.

After describing the events that led up to the expedition, Rowe said it was light enough to go in to the fishing pond, and it was the witness' piloting that took Mr. Crodan there. The pond is nine of ten miles from Rowe's house.

Referring to previous evidence given by Rowe in examination for discovery, Mr. Greer said he had fixed the time at 4 o'clock.

"Did I swear that before?" Rowe asked.

"Yes."

"Then I'll stick with it.

Rowe had known Crossen ten years or more, and knew that he was caretaker there.

"So far as fish is concerned, your code of morals allows you to take from friend and foe alike?"

"Yes," (heistatingly.)

"Have you ever tried chicken should not?"

"No; not yet."

"But there's no reason why you should not?"

"I'm not much on chickens; I'm more for fish!"

"But if Dick Greer came along, and asked you to go along with him on a chicken expedition you would likely have gone with him and taken the risk that went with it?"

"Likely."

Didn't Stop.

Crossen told Rowe to stand back, but Rowe kept on approaching, Rowe said. The photograph of the blue spruce tree where he was shot was taken by request of Rowe.

Crossen ordered Rowe to stop, but he was too frightened, he said. With a double barrelled shot gun pointed at him, he was too frightened to stop.

"You had your mind made up that he would not shoot at you?"

"No; I wouldn't swear to that."

With the disjointed fishing pole in his hand, Rowe walked across the front and kept his mouth shut. The three were then in triangular form; Crossen with the shotgun and each of the others with a disjointed steel fishing rod.

In the hospital McCrodan told Rowe that he had offered to settle with Crossen.

Mr. Greer: "You knew you were going into another man's property, protected by a man who was your friend? You were not only ready to go into another man's property to take his fish, but you were willing to double-cross a friend?"

"I don't know what I thought."

It was not a fact, Rowe said, that he pulled his cap over his eyes so that Crossen could not recognize him. He kept on going and had his back to the gun when he was shot.

"That's the luckiest thing I ever did," Rowe said, "to keep on going."

Where did McCrodan get the name 'Howell' he gave to Crossen?"

"I learned that he had a family connection by that name. I never heard that is the name he gave Crossen. I did not hear him tell Crossen any name."

Dr. Armstrong.

Dr. Gordon Armstrong of Roseneath, 18 miles from Cobourg and 14 miles from the Crossen preserve, was next called.

At five minutes past five on May 18 the witness received a call to Baltimore. He met two men at the preserve—the accused and James Patterson. One said "I have one of them in here, but the other got away. He is wounded for we found blood."

"I went into the house," Dr. Armstrong said, and found McCrodan face down on the floor. There were two ladies, Patterson and the accused, in the house. McCrodan turned around, and said 'Hello, Gord, I'll tell you all about this after you get me fixed up. He got me in the leg."

Crossen said, "I am sorry this thing happened. I have been troubled lately with people breaking into the fish pond, and was carrying out my orders."

Everyone left the room except Dr. Armstrong and McCrodan. Before that McCrodan complained of his foot being numb, and said that they had given him coffee.

Crossen told Dr. Armstrong he found two men fishing at the pond. "I am sorry that I shot them," he said, "but that was my orders."

Dr. Armstrong suggested that they should try to find the second wounded man, who might be bleeding to death. Just before he drove away with McCrodan in the car, Dr. Armstrong heard the accused say "I'm sorry this happened."

Fired Close Up.

McCrodan was wounded in the thigh, the shot coming from the back. There were two or three dozen of the punctured wounds, and a clear spot on each side of the thigh showed that the shot had not spread, and was fired at close range. All the shot remained in the limb, some pieces being discernable in front just under the skin.

McCrodan agreed to have an operation by Dr. Herbert Bruce and was taken to Toronto.

Cross-examined by Mr. Greer the witness described in detail the wound suffered by McCrodan and the nature of the poison that, it is believed, caused his death.

As Mr. Cunningham arose to re-examine, he was engaged in argument by Mr. Greer who objected to the admission of certain evidence as McCrodan's condition which it was feared might border on the dying declaration. Mr. Greer suggested that in order to judge as to its admissibility His Lordship should hear the testimony in the absence of the jury, but this was declared impossible and Mr. Cunningham continued, Mr. Greer declared he objected, "as counsel for the defence still has the right to do."

Afraid it's all up.

McCrodan was "just fair" on Monday evening, complications having set in, and got worse on Monday night. "I had no hope for the man," the witness said.

McCrodan himself said about five o'clock on Tuesday morning, "I'm afraid it's all up."

The witness then sent for Inspector Hammond; and Mr. McFadden arrived later. They remained less than five minutes, came out of the room and then returned.

At this time Dr. Armstrong said he thought he might pass away at any time. He had had no pulse for some hours, and his limbs were cold right up to the body. His heart was beating irregularly and he was likely to die at any moment.

At 7 o'clock McCrodan was in the same condition, and did not pass away until the following Monday morning.

In re-cross-examination by Mr. Greer the witness said McCrodan's mentality was quite clear.

Medical Evidence.

Dr. Herbert Bruce, who operated on McCrodan at Wellesley Hospital, Toronto, told of the nature of the wound and infection that brought about death. On the Wednesday and Thursday it was thought the injured man was recovering, but hiccough developed on Friday and it was then quite clear he was worse.

The treatment given was the best in Dr. Bruce's experience for a wound of this character. The shot was probably a little oblique, but this he thought might have been caused by its being diverted by the bone.

J. C. Patterson, a medical student in his graduating year, said he was the interne at Wellesley Hospital when McCrodan was in his section. On Monday evening, the patient was not so low as on Tuesday morning. On Tuesday morning the witness was present when Mr. McFadden and Inspector Hammond were there. Before that the witness had gone over the patient and decided his condition was hopeless.

With the two officers, Mr. McFadden, assistant Crown attorney of Toronto, and Inspector Hammond, the witness heard McCrodan say he thought he had a chance and he was going to make a fight for life.

Half an hour later Mr. McFadden asked if he was feeling better.

He said "no."

Then Mr. McFadden asked him if he thought he would get better, and McCrodan shook his head.

Mr. McFadden asked if he thought he had a chance and he answered quite distinctly, "None."

Then Mr. McCrodan started to tell his story, and the witness wrote down the statement.

In cross-examination, the witness said he had not discussed the matter at all with Mr. McFadden. McCrodan's mental condition seemed to be perfectly clear. There was no explanation made in Patterson's hearing that the statement would be used in evidence at the trial of Crossen.

"Do you think he appreciated everything he said?"

"Yes."

"His limbs were cold and pulseless, and you couldn't find his heart beat without a stethescope?"

"Yes."

The witness said ten grains of camphor in oil were given the patient but this would not bring back the pulse beat. Some re-act to it more quickly than others, and if it had gone over half an hour without affecting the patient it probably would not affect him at all.

Took a Statement.

Assistant Crown Attorney James W. McFadden of Toronto said he went to Wellesley Hospital on May 19 and met Inspector Hammond. They had some conversation with the doctors regarding McCrodan's condition. Dr. Armstrong asked McCrodan how he was feeling, and McCrodan said he thought he could pull through. No statement was taken.

On Tuesday morning the witness again called at the hospital, and the patient said he was doubtful of pulling through, but would try. Again no statement was taken.

Later Mr. McFadden again visited McCrodan at 6.55, and asked him how he felt. He said "Worse."

"Don't you think you will get better?"

McCrodan shook his head.

"Haven't you some hope that you will pull through?"

McCrodan hesitated for a second and answered "None."

In cross-examination by Mr. Greer, the witness said he had taken the statement without warning the patient of the purpose of the statement, and the word "die" was not used throughout the interview.

Admit Declaration.

The jury was excluded while counsel argued before His Lordship as to the admission of an alleged dying declaration.

Mr. Greer argued that the statement was inadmissible on two grounds, and the gravest care should be exercised in allowing it. The two things required were that the man must be hopeless regarding life, and must expect immediate death. Every motive of falsehood must be silenced by the nearness of the author of the statement to his Maker.

Recounting the evidence as given by Mr. McFadden and Dr. Patterson, Mr. Greer asked, "Can you say it is established beyond reasonable doubt that McCrodan was in immediate expectation of death?"

Mr. Cunningham, drawing upon the same evidence, held that it was evident the patient knew he was dying.

His Lordship ruled that the Crown had made out a case for admission of the dying declaration, considering the evidence of Dr. Armstrong and Mr. McFadden.

"I think the Crown has established beyond reasonable doubt that the deceased was in imminent fear of death."

The Declaration.

J. C. Patterson said he noted down the actual words McCrodan said in his story, and he read from his notes as follows:

"We went up to the park at three o'clock to fish on Sunday night. Suddenly a man appeared with a gun. He said, 'Put down your pole.' The other man had already started. He took a shot at him and I didn't think he had hit him, but he wobbled. I argued with him as to what he would do. I was willing to straighten it out, as I was only doing it for a lark. He said 'walk,' and I started, and he shot me in the thigh. I begged him to send for a doctor, and after a long time he sent his girl for one. I crawled on my hands and knees a quarter of a mile to his house. I asked for coffee and I was nearly fainting when the doctor came."

Answered Questions.

In answer to questions asked by Assistant Crown Attorney McFadden, the dying man said Crossen was twenty feet away and gave no warning. He said, "Don't run or I'll shoot," and when Rowe walked he shot him. Neither of us attempted to run. When he came first he suggested that we were the two men he was looking for.

After he shot me he said he didn't like to do it, but he was authorized to.

He helped me very little on the way home. He helped me across the road in the dust.

There were no notices about trespassing that I saw.

It was about five minutes after shooting Rowe that he shot McCrodan.

Neither McCrodan nor Rowe resisted in any way.

Found the Gun.

Provincial Constable Thomas William Cousans said he arrested the accused, and afterwards found a double-barreled shot-gun with both barrels blackened by powder, and appearing as though it had been recently fired. There were two shells missing from a box.

The constable fired with this gun, using the same make of shell, at targets at different distances, varying at 12 feet to 20 feet, which were produced in court to show the spread of the shot.

Character Evidence.

Annie Crossen, daughter of the accused man, said her mother woke her up on the morning of May 18. She heard her father say "Give me your names," where are you from? She went to her room to dress and heard the first shot when she put her shoes and stockings on and put her coat over her night dress. It was only a short time from the first shot to the second. Miss Crossen went out across the road and heard her father call "Hello." She answered him and he told her to 'phone from Patterson's for the doctor. She ran to Patterson's without seeing any of the men. Her mother called to her to get Dr. Armstrong at Roseneath. Central could not be raised and Mr. Patterson went to Baltimore to 'phone.

On her return Miss Crossen saw the wounded man lying on the floor while her father fixed his leg. She made coffee.

Under cross-examination by Mr. Cunningham, Miss Crossen could not say whether her father took his gun when he went out the previous night.

She did not hear her father say: "Lay down your fish poles."

Character evidence of John A. Noble, auctioneer and collector of taxes in Hamilton township, said he had known W. John Crossen thirty-five years and his reputation could not be any better. He had a good reputation as a law abiding citizen.

James Thompson, had known the accused since his school days, practically all his life. Crossen had the very best of reputation as a law-abiding citizen, so far as he knew, the witness said.

Frederick W. Ball, of Baltimore, a miller, said he had known the accused nearly all his life and knew his reputation to be that of an honarable, law-abiding citizen. He attends church regularly with his family and is a temperance man. Samuel Clarke, M.P.P., for West Northumberland, said he had resided in Cobourg fifty years and had been a member of the Legislature twenty years. He had known the accused, Crossen, thirty odd years and there was no more respected man in the township of Hamilton.

Dr. William Robinson, a pathologist of Toronto General Hospital, said he made an autopsy of the body of McCrodan on May 26. He found that the deceased had been apparently healthy. He had a wound on the back of his left leg about 8 inches in length, very septic and extending to the bone, with muscle and flesh torn. On the other side was another wound, clean cut, and on the same leg was another wound 7 1-2 inches long.

All the tissues were in a very septic condition. The bacteria causing the condition was an organism causing gas gangerine found in the soil. In the first wound was found a number of shot and the poison was from the clothing carried in to the wound. He concluded, the witness said that the man died from the poison.

In cross-examination Dr. Robinson said the wound would not necessarily have caused death but for the poison. The direction of the shot was probably from left to right and from the back forward.

After 44 men had been called for jury service of whom 15 were challenged by the defence and 15 were stood aside by the prosecution, the following panel was sworn in:

George P. Ester, Brighton, farmer; Ed. M. Hinlay, Cranwick, farmer; William Stark, Cavan, farmer; Joshua Swain, Cavan, farmer; W. C. West, Murray, cheese maker; Mark Bennett, Newcastle, farmer; James Milnay, Seymour, farmer; William J. Hedger, Percy, farmer; George Gray, Newcastle, hotel keeper; Leonard W. Smith, Cavan, farmer; Thos Malcolmson, Manvers, farmer; Hugh Maitland, Murray, farmer.

The following were rejected by the defense: Robert Wrightman, Brighton; Fred Cryderman, Bowman ville; Frank Phillips, Brighton; William Kerr, Brighton; Thos. Morton, Roger Bird, Bowmanville; Fred Black, Cranwick; Cyril Robertson, Starke; George Runnals, Hope; Alexander Moore, Brighton; John Stuart, Cavan; Fred Hendy, Percy, Eber Bush Cranwick; Alex. Lawrie, Arlington and Herbert Babcock, Bowmanville.

There were rejected by the prosecution:

Leo Sherry, Port Hope; Fred. O'Neil, Hope; Richard Lee, Cobourg; Richard S. Staples, Cavan; Ernest Heasmen, Cobourg; Richard Gilliland, Haldimand; Ambrose Fanning, Haldimand; W. Gay, Millbrook; Wm. Buchanan, Colborne; Sanford Finton, Haldimand; Frank Brisboin, Alnwick; Henry Ravensdale, Cobourg; J. B. Porter, South Monaghan; W. A. Hicks, Percy; Howard Oliver, Cobourg; Delbort Welton, of Port Hope, of whom a fine was imposed for absence.

CHANGE DEBT ACT.

MRS. HARDING BETTER.

MTRION, Ohio, Nov. 5. — Mrs. Florence Kling Harding, wife of the late President, who has been ill here for some time with kidney trouble, was slightly improved yesterday, according to a bulletin issued by Dr. Carl W. Sawyer, her physician.

COOLIDGE WAS

velt, by an estimated 100,000 plurality. Roosevelt came down from upstate districts with a lead that seemed for a time to make his election certain, but the metropolis rose to the occasion and repelled the invasion at its doorstep. In Ohio another Democratic governor, Vic Donaghey, battling with a similar handicap, was about holding his own to-day in a nip and tuck race for re-election against the Republican nominee, former Governor Harry L. Davis.

In Texas, "Ma" Ferguson, wife of the impeached governor, who won her nomination on a Democratic ticket in Texas after a furious battle against Klan sympathizers, and secured a place on the ballot only after a further fight in the courts, apparently has been rewarded with the distinction of being the first woman ever elected to preside over the destinies of the State. Very fragmentary and inconclusive returns from Wyoming give the lead for governor in that state too to a woman, Mrs. Nellie Rose, Democratic nominee, whose husband was governor until his death a few months ago.

Smith Returned.

Bearing up under a landslide of Republicans votes on the Empire State, Governor Alfred E. Smith demonstrated his popularity when he was returned to the governorship by a majority of approximately 100,000, only to see the rest of his running mates, including the Lieut.-Governor, go down to defeat, according to the story told by incomplete returns to the United Press to-day. Smith is the only man ever to have been elected governor three times in the state.

As a result of the election, assuming that early indications are borne out, New York state will join with others in placing a woman in a major office, Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp of Syracuse, apparently having been elected to the office of Secretary of State. Another woman, Mrs. Rhoda Fox Graves, was elected to tht Assembly, being the third of her sex to sit in the executive body.

Returns early in the evening indicated that Theodore Roosevelt was cutting heavily into Smith's popularity up-state and he carried all of the largest cities which Smith carried two years ago, but New York city, devoted to its native son, swamped the lead Roosevelt had piled up.

In 1918, when Smith made his first run for governor, he found himself elected with a Republican state ticket and a Republican controlled Legislature.

This year he faces the same condition, the G.O.P. having regained control of the Senate and added at least two seats to their majority in the Senate.

Coolidge Elected.

President Coolidge arose with the sun to-day to take a brisk walk in the misty morning air.

If he felt elated at the tremendous victory he won in yesterday's election he gave no sign of it to the two secret service men who walked with him along the deserted streets.

The President retired at 12.45 this morning after spending the entire evening with Mrs. Coolidge and his closest friends, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stearns of Buffalo, before a booming loud speaker in his White House study, listening to the United Press returns from station WEAF in New York.

Throughout the evening he sat with folded hands before the big horn, betraying not the slightest signs of emotion as his vote rolled higher and higher, carrying all before it, even to unanticipated senate and her victories.

Frank Stearns and O. Bascom, Slemp, the President's secretary, were the dynamites of enthusiasm at the executive mansion. Stearns could hardly constrain himself for his joy. It was he who was given the credit for first visualizing the political possibilities of Coolidge. The speaker of the Massachussets Senate in 1916 and getting behind him for bigger things.

"I am the happiest man alive", he exclaimed to newspaper men, when the President's victory seemed finally assured.

The White House mail clerk dumped a letter out of the official mail bag to-day addressed to "John W. Davis, President". He wrote on it in pencil, "will not be at the White House" and threw it into the outgoing mail.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, which threw its forces behind Senator Lafollette, declared in a statement to-day that "our cause will live", despite the Independent candidates defeat. "Ours was a protest vote against both old parties, their platforms and their candidates and our cause will live and find its fruition,' 'said the veteran labor chief.

FOUR BOYS FINED.

Threw Stone Through Window On Way Home From Omemee On Saturday Night.

OMEMEE, Nov. 5. — Four mischievous youths, while on their way home from Omemee, a week ago Saturday night, threw a stone through a window in Mr. W. McConnell's house. The prank did not go unchallenged, as the owner of the house caught the party before they had time to make good their escape, with the result that all four appeared in court on Thursday afternoon. The case lasted all afternoon, and the boy who committed the offence was fined $15 and costs, while the companions were fined $5 and costs. Lawyer E. Anderson appeared for the plaintiff and the case was tried by Police Magistrate Bradford. Provincial Detective Storey of Lindsay was also present in connection with the case.

Practice not only makes perfect, but it annoys the neighbors.

DELORO DRAMATIC SOCIETY MEETING

MARMORA, Nov. 3.—The annual meeting of the Deloro Social and Dramatic Society was held in the Hall on Monday evening with a goodly number present. Mr. F. A. Bapty the retiring President took the chair. The President's report dealt with the progress of the various activities of the Society during the past year. At its conclusion, Mr. S. B. Wright the Hon. President gave a most interesting account of activities since its formation some twenty-five years ago. Though many changes have taken place in that time, the Society still continues to be the boom it ever was, to the community. The Secretary Treasurer's report brought out the most healthy financial condition of the Society. The election of officers resulted as follows.

Hon. Presidents, Mr. S. B. Wright and Mr. F. A. Bapty.

President—Mr. R. A. Elliott.

Vice President —Mr. A. V. Yates.

Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. S. C. Cheesman.

Librarian, Mr. K. B. Patterson.

Committee, Messrs. C. H. Buskard W. Regan, A. Hart, J. Wallace, and R. Hunter.

A good musical programme was given, starring Bert Bright, an entertainer of some merit. His songs with coon delineations were well received; his greatest success being, "Down Where the Water-melons grow." Mr. W. J. Cottrell assisted with three songs, B. Breault gave a step dance and a few boxing rounds between W. Kerr, Junior, and A. Vachon, Junior, completed a much appreciated programme. Cigars and cigarettes were liberally supplied. It was considered the best smoker held for some time.

QUAKE AT VICTORIA.

Slight Tremor Registered Early Tuesday Morning.

VICTORIA, Nov. 5. — A slight earth tremor of local origin was felt at the Ronsales Hill Observatory at 3.19 Tuesday morning and generally throughout the city and Gordon Head district. A record was made on the instruments at the observatory, the tremor being in the direction of the straits of Juan De Fuca.

ACQUITTED BY JURY.

Lethbridge Man Freed of Manslaughter Following Altercation.

LETHBRIDGE, Nov. 5. — Sam McLeary, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of James Taylor at the Crystall Dairy here a month ago, was acquitted by the jury at the fall assises here today. Taylor died as a result of a fractured skull received when his head struck the cement floor during an altercation with McLeary.

CALGARY STOCK SHOW.

CALGARY, Nov. 5.—A distinct and notable improvement in the bacon type of hog in this district during the last year, the largest and finest exhibition of sheep ever shown in Calgary and some of the best Shorthorns and Hereford cattle ever exhibited in Alberta, were three distinct features which marked the opening of the three-day fall stock show and sale here Tuesday.
